CONFESSION IN TRUNK MURDER GIVEN POLICE BY MRS. GRIFFIN

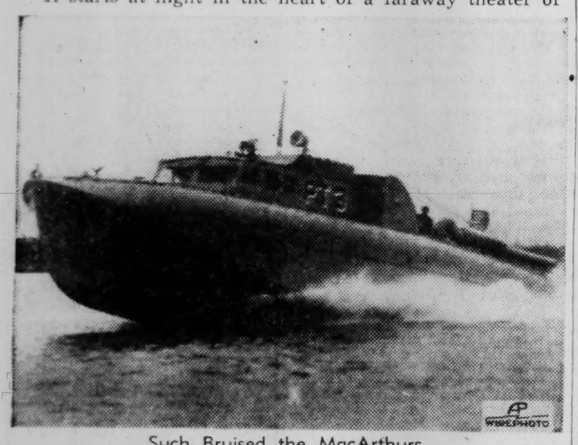

General MacArthur's Daring Motorboat, Plane Trip Revealed

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER.
(Copyright, 1942, By The Chicago Sun Syndicate)

MELBOURNE, Australia, March 19.—Nearly one hundred days after the Japanese treacherously attacked his fortress in the Philippines, General Douglas MacArthur, still victorious, penetrated their lines and after seven days of adventurous travel with his wife and child and members of his staff, has arrived in Australia to take charge of a fresh attack on the enemy.

The story of his journey from the Philippines to Australia can't be told yet in its entirety, but even a sketch of it is enough to reveal drama at its best.

It starts at night in the heart of a faraway theater of war which the Japanese had already so thoroughly dominated that it became the principal miracle of this conflict that any American should still be holding out anywhere within their area.

One can visualize the blacked-out beach and the secrecy with which this little party set out to run the gantlet of the Japanese. They chose to do it in speed boats. Once loaded and with everybody battened down in his seat, the boats crept out and suddenly opened up with full speed.

They roared out, but roaring was preferable to crawling at a pace which the enemy submarines could detect anyway. Now by night they depended chiefly on swiftness to avoid torpedoes and shell-fire. But that speed is extremely painful in small boats which skip over the waves like an outboard motor boat racing in a choppy sea. Everybody was badly shaken and bruised, but at dawn came a respite. They pulled into a jungle cove and hid all day.

All the next night they sped and felt the slam of boats leaping from wave to wave, but by the next day they had reached their first objective. This was the rendezvous for

Britain Gives Ministry Rank To Australian

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—Britain's government took a dominion statesman into its inner fold today for the first time in history, appointing Australia's Richard G. Casey to be minister of state in the Middle East for the war cabinet.

The handsome and vigorous Casey now is Australian minister to Washington.

The appointment, announced in the house of commons by Prime Minister Churchill, was interpreted in some quarters as an effort to retie the bonds between Australia and the motherland at a moment when the dominion seems to be pulling away towards the United States.

Authorized British quarters said full concurrence of Australian Prime Minister John Curtin had been received before the appointment was suggested to Casey.

Casey replaces Oliver Lyttelton and will have headquarters at Cairo. Lyttelton recently was made minister of war production.

In the first World War Prime Minister David Lloyd George had assisting him an imperial war cabinet of which Australian Prime Minister William M. Hughes was a member, but never before has either a non-Briton or a dominion statesman ever sat in a war cabinet of the United Kingdom, the "tight little isle" ruling a large empire.

Dollar-a-Year Men Biased, Guthrie Says

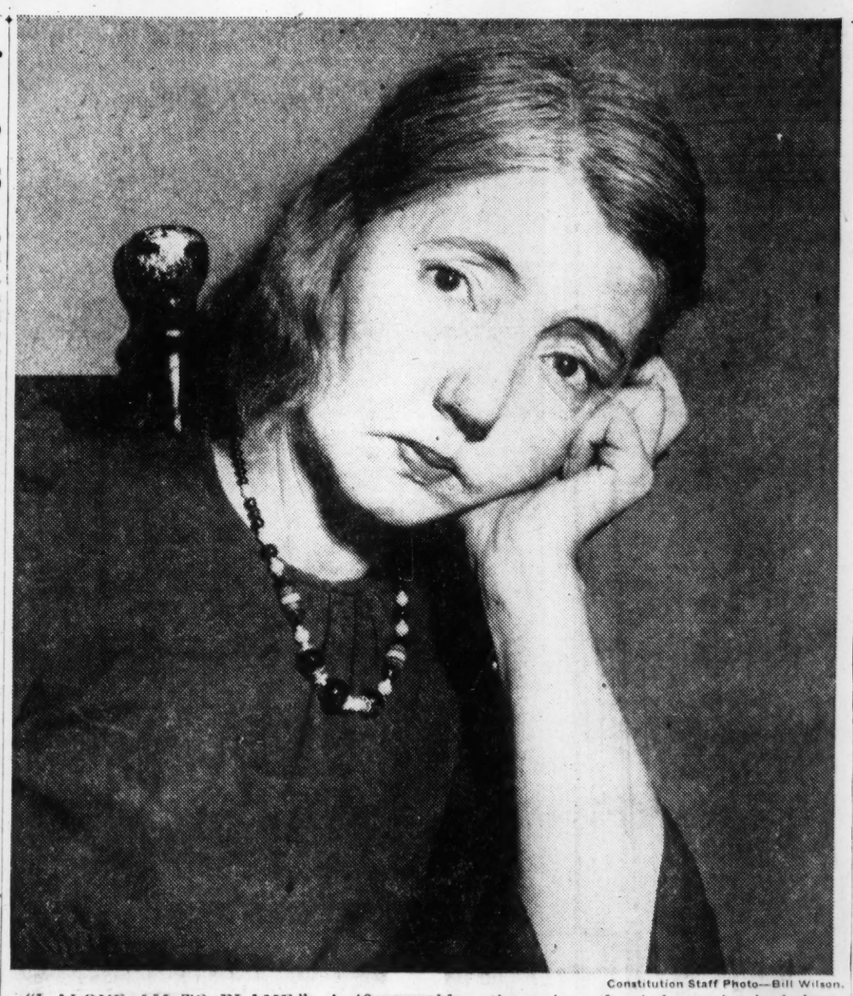

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP)—Robert R. Guthrie, who resigned last week as chief of the textile, clothing and leather goods branch of the War Production Board, told a congressional committee today that "frequently" decisions of dollar-a-year men in the WPB were prejudiced by their personal interests.

Guthrie said he was "sure at heart" that he and Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the WPB, "see eye to eye on the issue of all-out war effort versus compromise."

"I am confident that if he (Nelson) understood the degree to which his insistence on all-out effort is impeded in his organization, he would stand his ground against these forces in exactly the same way that I have done," Guthrie told a house military subcommittee.

Chairman Faddis, Democrat, Pennsylvania, of the committee, indicated other witnesses, possibly including Nelson, would be called during the inquiry into Guthrie's resignation.

The specific reason for his resignation, the former Paducah, Ky., department store operator testified, was his inability to control his own appointments and make his own decisions, and Nelson's decision to split his section to remove textiles.

"I ALONE AM TO BLAME."—A 46-year-old mother whose fancied worries had deluded her into a fight for the protection of her home, Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin, last night made a calm and frank confession to the slaying of Mrs. Mildred Seymour Williams, a 22-year-old saleswoman whose body was found Wednesday crammed into a trunk in the basement of the Griffin home.

Officers Quote Bible During Questioning

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

A 46-year-old woman sitting tensely as detectives voiced thoughts about life and death to her from the Bible, started weeping quietly and finally pleaded:

"Stop it, for God's sakes. I'll tell you. I did it."

This simple grilling of the suspected Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin, who had sat alone with her conscience in a cell at police headquarters for almost 24 hours, brought the solution of the Adair Park trunk murder mystery, the gruesome slaying of 22-year-old Mrs. Mildred Seymour Williams, a personable young shoe saleswoman.

"I alone am to blame," sobbed Mrs. Griffin. "No one else was mixed up in this."

Used Broom.

And then after a few moments, she began, half hysterically:

"Mildred came into the house through the front door that day. I was sweeping. Mildred grabbed the broom and shook it and shouted at me:

"'I want you to quit telling people that I'm running around with your son-in-law.'

"That made me so mad that I hit her with the handle of the broom. Mildred ran down the stairs to the basement. I ran after her. In the basement, I hit her several times with something—I don't know what.

Tied Her Up.

"I hit her several times. Then she fell and I tied her up.

"I stuffed her into the trunk and how I did that—I don't know.

"I have thought several times that I would call the police and confess everything but I decided I'd better not."

After this verbal statement, Mrs. Griffin sat calmly and helped police make a transcribed copy of a more formal confession. This story of the crime in her own words will be laid before the grand jury today. A copy also will be laid before a coroner's jury as the solution of Mrs. Williams' death.

The quiet grilling of the woman was begun after police had questioned her 16-year-old son, J. W. Griffin, for a half hour.

After Mrs. Griffin had read and signed her written confession, Superintendent of Detectives J. A. McKibben ordered the 16-year-old son released.

The boy and his mother had been held in separate cells in police headquarters throughout the day, after police decided to free T. E. Griffin, 26-year-old married son of Mrs. Griffin and K. D. Hubert, 22, her son-in-law.

Cause of Quarrel.

The quarrel that ended in the murder had been caused by stories that Mrs. Griffin had spread about the Adair Park neighborhood that Mrs. Williams, who had once lived in the Griffin home, had tried to alienate the affections of Hubert, the son-in-law.

Calls to police throughout yes-

Nazi Missionaries Guide Jap Invaders in Guinea

Allies Expect To Halt Move on Port Moresby

MELBOURNE, March 19.—(AP)—Guided by Nazi German missionaries, a strong Japanese force was reported tonight to be advancing overland in New Guinea toward Port Moresby, enemy-coveted springboard for invasion of the Australian mainland, while over the continent's whole defense periphery the combined United States-Australian Air Force and Japanese bombers were furiously engaged.

The Japanese troops, thus supported by the first recorded instance of German fifth column work in the Australian theater, appeared to be advancing westward from Lae, their beachhead on northeastern New Guinea Island due north of Port Moresby and separated from it by a mountain range. The objective of the drive was to gain the central plateau, then turn south toward Port Moresby, the most important defensive position short of the mainland itself. It lies just across Torres Strait from the mainland.

The enemy's immediate aim, said dispatches from Port Moresby, was to take over the Markham valley with its system of first-rate airports.

The missionaries were said to have come from pro-Nazi centers in Finschhafen and Alexishafen—both towns incidentally are in the area of the enemy's initial landings on New Guinea—and to have equipped themselves with a radio transmitter, a small factory for producing arms and swastika arm bands. They maintained good aerodromes.

In recent raids on the missions, the authorities smashed one radio transmitter. They found hundreds of swastika flags and photographs of Hitler and learned that some of the native children of New Guinea had been taught the Nazi salute.

So far as could be learned, the invading force was in considerable numbers but the Australian defenders expressed the conviction

Girl, 14, Hurt Saving Invalid Brother's Life

By WILLARD COPE.

Fourteen-year-old Mary Magbee, alert sister of an invalid, lay swathed in bandages in her small bed yesterday and told how she saved her brother's life from an onrushing automobile, which leaped the sidewalk near her home at 269 Ormond street, S. E., by shoving his wheelchair violently—at the cost of severe injury to herself.

"I just saw the car coming toward us awful fast," she said simply. "I didn't have time to think much. I just pushed the chair as hard as I knew how. That's all I remember."

She was dragged 100 feet across the sidewalk and two neighboring lawns at Hill and Ormond streets. Her injuries included broken ribs and collarbones, puncture of the lung, a possible elbow fracture and numerous cuts and bruises about the head and body.

Bit by Stolen Car.

The automobile, a stolen Ford, was driven by a Negro, who escaped after the crash by darting down a driveway of the home of Mrs. John Pease, at 281 Ormond street, and racing through several backyards, including that of Mary's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Magbee Sr., whose wooden fence he broke down.

Neighbors, as well as Mary and the brother, Fred, 19, said the automobile was traveling at a rate of speed they estimated at 90 miles an hour. Their declarations that it was being pursued by two motorcycle policemen were termed inaccurate by Police Chief M. A. Hornsby, who said one motorcycle officer, W. E. Whidden, had followed the machine earlier, but had been eluded.

Mary was wheeling Fred home from a visit to neighbors and was almost ready to turn into their walk when the automobile roared up, skidded on car tracks and plunged toward them.

Brother Escapes.

She was found suspended from the front bumper as the machine hung on a low stone wall along Hill street 100 feet from where it first struck a row of tough shrubbery. Fred's chair received a glancing blow, which burst its tires. He escaped, however, with bruises and shock.

Both were taken to Grady hospital after the crash, about 9:30 o'clock Tuesday night, and were sent home after treatment in the clinic. The girl's condition, however, was so much worse yesterday she was to be removed to Georgia Baptist hospital for X-raying and setting of the fractures.

The wrecked car, which was towed to police headquarters, was found to contain a stolen typewriter and tools.

Tra-La-La! Spring Is Due Tomorrow

Tomorrow is the first day of spring.

Officially, the change of seasons—known to the learned as the vernal equinox—comes at 1:11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Then, and on September 23, are the only times of the year when the axis of the earth is exactly at right angles to the direction of the sun.

The prediction is for slightly warmer weather today, indicating the temperatures will be in keeping with the season.

Gasoline Cards Will Be Used in Rationing Plan

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP)—Gasoline rationing by a rigid coupon system will be instituted in the east and Pacific northwest as soon as the millions of cards can be printed, probably six weeks hence, Petroleum Co-ordinator Ickes announced today.

Emphasizing the seriousness of the fuel emergency, the co-ordinator told his press conference the supply situation in New England, both with regard to petroleum and coal, had become so critical that parts of the area, particularly in Massachusetts and Maine, already were planning "to rely on wood" for heating next winter.

Plans for rationing as a war measure were announced the day motor fuel consumption was cut 20 per cent in the east and northwest by a limitation of supplies delivered to filling stations.

Grim Will Prods U. S. War Birds, Pilot Says

(Cpoyright, 1942, International News Service.)

WITH THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCES IN AUSTRALIA, March 19.—Captain Frank Kurtz, world-famous Olympic diving champion of Los Angeles, described to me tonight how he and a small band of American fliers fought a virtually single-handed Far Eastern aerial war against the Japanese for three months.

Kurtz at present is aide-de-camp to Lieutenant General George H. Brett, deputy supreme commander of the United Nations in the southwest Pacific under General Douglas MacArthur. Formerly, however, he was liaison officer of the United States air forces on Java, and took time out to pilot his flying fortress during the critical phases of the campaigns in Java and the Philippines.

Kurtz was a member of the formation which raided Davao bay, on the Philippine Island of Mindanao, in the attack described by airmen as the most successful to date in the Pacific war.

He told it this way:

"We flew over in a tight formation of fortresses after having received intelligence that a heavy concentration of Jap warships was based at Davao.

"That was a gross understatement.

"I have never seen so many warships anywhere.

"We had wonderful success and definitely sank their flagship. Never have we had such a successful run—it was mincemeat. We sank at least six ships, all either heavy cruisers or battleships, before we ran out of bombs.

"I am confident the whole fleet would have been sunk,

Cent Milk Rise Here Will Cost $438,000 Year

A city-wide rise of one cent per quart on milk was ordered yesterday by the State Milk Control Board, effective April 6. Prices in Savannah and Dalton were also raised.

City health officials say the Atlanta area consumes 30,000 gallons of milk a day and that the price hike will cost consumers $1,200 a day or $438,000 a year.

The action was intended to offset higher production and distribution costs and to encourage greater production of milk, Director Charles G. Duncan said.

The price to the producer in the Atlanta area was advanced to 32 cents per gallon, an increase of two cents.

The new price schedule, with old prices in parenthesis: Home delivered, 17 cents per quart (16); at stores, 16 cents (15); in 8-quart lots at home, 15 (14), and at stores, 14 (13); in 12-quart lots at platforms, 13 (12).

Buttermilk will go up a penny a quart, too. At stores it will be 10 cents and at homes, 11.

Savannah, with the charge the same for quarts delivered or bought at stores, will pay 18 cents a quart. A discount of 5 per cent for cash is allowed. Savannah also got its first platform price—15 cents a quart for lots of four quarts or more. Dalton's consumer price will be 15 cents, a 2-cent rise. Producers there will receive 30 cents per gallon, instead of 25.

Director Duncan said there was "a terrible shortage of milk all over the state."

'I Was Crazy,' Sobs Slayer, 'Pray for Me'

By AL SHARP.

"I just hope everybody prays for me. . . . Prays to God for me. . . . I was crazy. . . . I just had to be crazy or I wouldn't have done it."

Sobs jerked Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin's slight frame forward as she talked to reporters and a photographer a few minutes after signing a confession admitting the murder of Mildred Williams.

"Pray to God . . ."

Her voice drifted off to a mumble as she sank into a chair and buried her head in her hands.

Mrs. Griffin could not stop crying for long. Her eyes were red and there were big dark circles under them.

When asked if she minded having a picture made, she pointed out two had been shot. A few moments later she said she wouldn't mind a "close-up."

Mrs. Griffin said she would like to go back to her cell. She nodded when the policewoman suggested she might want to sleep.

The heavy door slid to in the darkened cell as Mrs. Griffin lay down to sleep.

'I Knew It' Says Grief-Stricken Husband, Demanding the Chair

Slayer Can Hope for No Mercy From Williams.

By CELESTINE SIBLEY.

The middle-aged woman who confessed last night that she was responsible for the murder which blasted his constant hope that somehow, somewhere he would find his young wife again—"and she would be safe and well"—can hope for no mercy from Perry M. Williams.

His face drawn with weariness and grief, Williams was sitting at his mother's dining-room table last night sending out notes of appreciation to the friends who had covered his wife's grave with flowers, when a telephone call advised him that Mrs. Griffin had confessed.

"I'm not surprised," the young husband of Mildred Seymour Williams said quietly. "When I learned where they found Mildred's body, I knew what had happened."

Little White Cards.

As he talked, his hands moved restlessly among the stacks of little white cards before him. He kept his head down and his voice was low.

"Mildred never had any trouble with her. She thought Mildred was interested in her son-in-law, Kenneth Hubert, but that wasn't so. That was the biggest lie anybody ever thought up—and I hope she gets the electric chair. I believe in capital punishment for people like that. I'd hate to know that they were loose in the world so they could put somebody else through what I've gone through today."

"Not so long before she disappeared Mildred gave me this. Do you think a girl would give a wrist watch like this to her husband if she'd been going with anybody else? And there were lots of other things she had there for me. There were shirts and pajamas and things there on a chair, stuff she planned to give me for Christmas.

"Couldn't Have Been."

"She couldn't have been going with anybody else because she didn't get off from work until 6 o'clock and she was always at home when I got there—always there with the house cleaned up and a good supper waiting for me. Besides," and here the tired young man chuckled a little grimly, "Mildred herself said if she was going to step out it wouldn't be with him."

Mrs. Williams tried to correct Mrs. Griffin's impression that she was interested in her son-in-law, Williams said. She called the older woman, Hubert and his wife, Ruth, into the living room and asked her to "let's straighten out some things," Williams recalled. He said he was in the room and his wife asked Mrs. Griffin about rumors that she had been going with Hubert.

"Ruth seemed very much surprised," Williams said. "She acted like she hadn't heard any of that stuff or suspected anything. There was no reason why she should be jealous of my wife. She was young and pretty herself and she and Kenneth hadn't been married long."

Recalls Better Times.

Before that time he and his young wife had "gotten along fine" with Mrs. Griffin, Williams said. "We didn't have any trouble. Once when I was sick Mrs. Griffin was real good to me. She brought me all kinds of good things to eat."

Neighbors in the house where the Williamses lived the day the dark-haired girl disappeared told Perry and his family that Mrs. Griffin had called Mildred twice the day she left home and asked

Waycross Oil Stations Close Nights, Sundays

WAYCROSS, Ga., March 19.—Effective today, retail petroleum dealers in Waycross will be open only six days a week and will close at night, according to announcement of the Ware County Retail Petroleum Dealers' Association.

Following a meeting of the service station operators last night, with William Cox as acting secretary, it was announced that "Service stations will open at 7:30 a. m. and close at 7:30 p. m. every day except Sunday; stations are to be closed all day Sunday."

This action is taken in compliance with new government orders reducing hours for the operation of retail petroleum businesses, it is pointed out.

Accessories Make the Clothes!

Clothes may make the man, but accessories make the clothes! Nature has endowed her males with brilliant plumage and handsome markings, the females being somewhat on the dowdy side. Perversely, humans take the opposite tack—the female of the specie bedecking herself in high color and the male, who is a creature of insidious habit, spending a lifetime garbing himself almost too conservatively. But a man may brighten up his life and his wardrobe with such accessories pictured here and still not be conspicuous.

1. Liven up your spring outfit with a colorful wool tie, boldly patterned after the manner of silk ones. Since silk is becoming extinct, you'll be pleased to know that wool ties have a long life and seldom show any unpleasant signs of creasing where the knot has been tied. The three pictured are smart as tomorrow's fashions. 2. There is a certain two-gun, he-man spirit about anything western, hence the terrific appeal of a smart sports shirt reflecting the rodeo, dude-ranch influence with its whipstitching running around the collar and across the pocket. Another two-fisted western fashion is seen in the belt of good leather, hand-tooled in the manner of a cowboy's de luxe saddle. Similar tooled leather is used in practical tie holders, with miniature sterling silver boots or saddles. 3. Norway, the Indians and the Army have influenced spring shoe styles. The moccasin, Indian in name and Norwegian in fashion, is a current favorite. The plain shoe, or blucher front shoe, is touted by the college lads, while exponents of high fashion gab about the monk shoe, featuring the toeless cap. Military men like the plain-toe shoe, with its riding boot look. 4. Color carries on in sportswear, though it's on the light side, the basic colors being shades of tan and air blue, which are combined in a number of instances. These colors are found in the sports shirt, slacks and sweaters pictured. (If you want to find any of the articles mentioned telephone Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, Walnut 6565, or write her if you live out of town.)

JAILED FOR LOAF F BREAD.

BERN, Switzerland, March 18. (Delayed),—(AP)—A woman in Hamburg, Germany, has been sentenced to two months in prison because she sold a loaf of bread to two French civil workers without coupons, the Zurich newspaper Die Tat reported today. In explaining the sentence, the court said the begging of bread by foreign workers had increased recently, the newspaper added.

Atlanta Banks To Hold Annual Will Contest

Law School Students To Compete for Defense Stamps.

The banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association, the First National, the Citizens and Southern National Bank, the Fulton National and the Trust Company of Georgia, through a committee of their trust departments yesterday announced their 1942 annual "Will Contest."

The contest is open to law students in Emory University, the University of Georgia, Mercer University, Atlanta Law School, John Marshall School of Law, and the Woodrow Wilson School of Law.

Each student is given a statement of facts and is then required to prepare a complete will in accordance with the information received. Prizes of $30 in United States defense stamps are to be awarded each school, $15 to the first choice and $10 and $5 as second and third prizes.

After the six winners from the colleges are selected, a committee composed of the trust officers of the Atlanta banks will select the will best drawn with reference to the facts given and the one so selected will receive the grand prize of a $25 United States defense bond in addition to his college prize.

The contestants are required to submit their completed wills not later than May 1, when final awards will be announced. N. Baxter Maddox, vice president and trust officer of the First National Bank of Atlanta, is chairman of the clearing house committee for this contest.

Capital 'Action' Sought By Quitman Citizens

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

QUITMAN, Ga., March 19.—A group of Quitman citizens are adding their bit to the wave of public opinion directed at Washington demanding faster war production, no more strikes and longer weeks. They sponsored a page in this week's Free Press, had 3,000 reprints made and distributed to all parts of the county, addressed on the back to Georgia senators and congressmen in Washington.

Citizens were asked to read the page entitled: "Wake Up, America—It's Late" and mail it to Washington if they approved it.

Capital Paper Sues Winchell For $200,000

Mrs. Patterson Charges Defamation by Radio Commentator.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, owner and publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, has filed a complaint in district court for $200,000 damages against Walter Winchell, columnist and radio commentator; the Andrew Jergens Company, sponsor of Winchell's radio program, and the National Broadcasting Company.

The complaint "to recover damages for defamation" asked $100,000 as compensation and an additional $100,000 to be awarded as a punishment against Winchell individually.

Mrs. Patterson alleged that Winchell referred to an editorial which was published in her paper in "false, scandalous, malicious and defamatory words." The editorial, Mrs. Patterson said in her complaint, was inserted in the Congressional Record by the late Farmer-Labor senator from Minnesota, Ernest Lundeen, and dealt with foreign policies of the United States.

Nation Getting Spanking, Says Dr. Barnhouse

By PAUL JONES.

America's involvement in the war is just "God's way of giving the country a good spanking it has been needing for a long while," were the words yesterday of Dr. Donald Grey Barnhouse, pastor of the historic Tenth Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, and world traveler, here to conduct a series of meetings at the Jackson Hills Baptist church.

"Peoples of the United States have been spending more on their skin and hair than they have on their soul and they are having to double pay now," he said, in explaining how we figuratively are being "spanked."

Served in Last War.

Dr. Barnhouse, a first lieutenant in the Army Air Corps during the first World War, and a student of world history, having studied at the University of Grenoble, France, the British Museum and the Imperial Museum in Berlin, recalled a first hand account how the Nazis prepared the youth of the nation for war at an early age.

During one of his trips, in 1937, which carried him through the Indies, China, Japan and other countries of the Far East, Dr. Barnhouse said he entered his children in a private school in Berlin. He says the Nazis taught his sons, the oldest was 9 years, how to throw hand grenades instead of footballs. The textbooks were edited by the Nazis to place the swastika over the Cross of Christ, he said.

Speaks Four Languages.

On a trip through Germany, which was sponsored by the Carl Shurz Foundation, he was chauffeured by a young German baron, Carl August von Kameke, who didn't know any of the names of German art or literature characters, but who knew the tonnage, the name and firepower of every battleship in the United States fleet.

Dr. Barnhouse, who speaks four languages and who has lectured to French and German religious groups during his various trips throughout Europe, said he had covered every inch of the world. He says he has studied customs and religions of every sect in every nation on the map.

As for Japan Dr. Barnhouse said he had forecast the Far East conflict in a book he wrote many years ago.

"When asked about the Jap war now, I just say I told you so," he added.

March 20, 1942

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Atlanta Motorist:

In our great national defense program, it has become necessary for our Government to curtail the sales of all new automobiles and trucks, and consequently, upon the dealers has been placed the responsibility of cooperating with motorists in rendering adequate service which will enable them to get full use of their present units.

Accepting this responsibility, we have equipped our service department with the additional facilities and personnel necessary to meet the extra demand of the motorist, regardless of the make of car he or she drives. We will be glad to make estimates, without any obligation what so ever, and are prepared to render any type of service to all makes of automobiles.

Get People Mad And We'll Win War, Knudsen Declares

By FRANK DRAKE.

The trouble with American production right now is that the people of the United States just aren't mad enough.

Lieutenant General William S. Knudsen, chief of production for the War Department, made that declaration yesterday as he inspected ordnance plants in Atlanta during a brief visit.

When all the people get really boiling, raging mad at the Japs and the Germans, they will heave to and turn out such a mass of war materials the enemy will be overwhelmed, he said.

To Reach Schedule.

He thinks the President's schedule of production for planes and ships and munitions for this year will be reached all right, but he adds that a lot of the people haven't pitched in as strongly as they could—if only they would let the hair on their necks bristle and blood in their veins fume over the deaths of our soldiers and sailors.

"Give our men the supplies and materials they need and there won't be men drifting for days on tiny rafts on the seas," the production chief asserted.

"It is our sons, friends, and comrades who are being maimed and killed by enemy bullets. We can't win unless we have bullets, too. We can't kill the enemy by hand-to-hand battle. That's too slow. We have got to give our soldiers guns and bullets and then they'll win!"

Touring Plants.

General Knudsen, often a visitod here when he was head of General Motors, is touring plants throughout the southeast, having flown here yesterday from Washington with his executive assistant, W. M. Collins.

He lunched at the Biltmore with Colonel J. D. McIntyre, deputy district chief of the Birmingham ordnance district, and Major J. E. Getzen, Major R. W. Chandler and Captain Roy Hickman, all of the Birmingham ordnance district. The general flew on to Birmingham to inspect plants there.

He looked over several ordnance plants here and made suggestions for speeding up production.

"He's a wonder," said one of the ordance officers accompanying Knudsen on the tour here. "He just walks through a plant and notices everything that is wrong in the production line. He always knows exactly what to do to eliminate the fault and speed things up!"

Praises Ingenuity.

The general observed that American ingenuity is doing a great deal already toward speeding up production.

"Everywhere I find some fellow with a machine tool who has worked out a way he can transform it into a war production machine with some simple changes," he declared. He asserted that this is very encouraging—but he came back to his original point.

"Get the people mad at the enemy!" he exclaimed. "This is our country we are fighting for and it is for you and for me that our boys are being killed. The least we can do is to give them weapons and supplies. It is your job and everybody's job to arouse the people to fighting fury so they will turn out the munitions necessary for us to win."

While here, the general was guarded by City Detectives J. H. Langley and S. C. Dillingham.

Missionaries Help Invaders In New Guinea

that the thrust would be broken well short of Port Moresby.

Allied air attacks were reported during the day on several enemy-held island points, among them Koepang on Timor, where the resulting fires were visible 50 miles away, but there was no word of any new gathering of Japanese ships.

(A raid by American Army heavy bombers on the Japanese-held airport at Koepang, in which hits were scored on runways and installations were damaged was reported by the War Department at Washington.)

The enemy's invasion trains already had been hard hit, the latest big Allied success having been a bombing attack on a heavy Japanese cruiser that left it aflame in the New Britain Island harbor of Rabaul. Near misses were scored against two other large vessels, the indication being that both were damaged.

This brought to 26 the number of enemy ships sunk or damaged in recent Allied air action, 23 of them having been accounted for in a U. S. Navy announcement in Washington of yesterday. Concerning that announcement, Prime Minister Curtin explained that the losses were not the result of any new and single action but rather were "the losses represented by the total result of a series of actions in the past 10 days."

Meanwhile, medium forces of enemy bombers raiding Port Moresby were strongly challenged by antiaircraft fire, and caused no known damage in a half-hour raid.

Darwin Attacked.

Darwin, on the northern Australian mainland, was again attacked by a small force of bombers, which dropped 25 scatter-bombs directed primarily against Allied troops. Casualties, however, were light.

The first enemy air attack on Cape York, just across the Torres strait from Port Moresby, also was reported, but there was no announcement of damage there. In addition, Tulagi, Florida Island, in the Solomons, was bombed.

With the new supreme commander, General Douglas MacArthur, making it plain that his paramount purpose here was to build as swiftly as possible an offensive force to smash Japan and relieve his beleaguered troops on Bataan and Corregidor, the Australian war cabinet met to advance previously-prepared strategy.

This is expected to involve establishment of an Allied war council, new appointments to high ranking posts in the Australian armed forces and arrangements for the disposition of Australian and American troops at the points of greatest danger.

Compulsory civilian defense duties were ordered for all Australians between the ages of 16 and 60 not now in the fighting or auxiliary forces. A mobile works squadron of the Royal Australian Air Force also was ordered formed, to construct landing grounds and encampments as speedily as possible for the use of the expanding United States and Australian air forces and for disposition of rapidly incoming United States aircraft.

Steady Flow of Planes.

Lieutenant General George H. Brett, deputy supreme commander in charge of air operations, declared that a steady flow of planes and pilots from the United States already had built up a ratio of three crews for every plane; that American and Australian fliers would be pooled and the men chosen for specific missions on the basis of ability, without regard to nationality.

General MacArthur is expected to confer next week with war cabinet officers and Australian service chiefs at Canberra. The supreme commander outlined his offensive purposes to his old friend, Brigadier General Patrick J. Hurley, present United States minister to New Zealand, and today Hurley summed up his impressions this way:

"General MacArthur breathes the very spirit of victory. He specifically stated that he still is in command of the Philippine situation and that he has the utmost confidence he will again be back on Filipino soil."

Lieutenant Colonel Whitford, director general of Australian recruiting, today was named liaison officer between the United States and Australian forces on the continent.

Knudsen, chief of production for the War Department, dropped in on Atlanta yesterday to inspect ordnance plants here, and was greeted at the airport by ordnance officers. MacArthur's Trip to Australia the airplanes which were coming to fetch them. For three days they waited for the airplanes, then they embarked and that night they were in a tiny town of seven hundred persons in Australia's "never never land."

Now that is the briefest kind of a story of their trip, but far more interesting are a few items of information they brought out with them.

The most surprising fact is that three-fourths of the Philippine Islands are still in the hands of American and Filipino troops. The Japs hold only the ports and portions of the periphery of the principal islands and there are some islands where there are no Japs at all.

Elite Native Troops.

Most of the land fighting has been done by the Filipino scouts and the Filipino constabulary, those long-established elite native troops for whom the American regular army officers have the greatest respect. They are officered by Americans.

There is no lack of water either on Corregidor or Bataan Peninsula. On Corregidor recently, new wells were developed which have proved highly satisfactory and in both places during the wet season there is far too much water.

If you ask why the Filipino troops fought so well, the one answer was "because they suffered some casualties, because the Japs killed and wounded them and they didn't like it and got mad and decided to make killing Japs their principal business and they have done it, I assure you, in a highly scientific butcher-like manner."

"Food is not bad, but the worst deprivation is doing without fresh vegetables and salad. There is no scurvy, although we used neither medically-prepared vitamin tablets nor lime juice. Our health may have been helped by the fact that we had some canned tomatoes, beans and peas."

Japanese Treatment.

In answer to the query as to how the Japanese were treating the people in the occupied Philippines such as Manila, the answer was:

"The natives are being treated pretty well, for the Japs want to drive a wedge between them and the Americans, but for the most part they remain loyal to us. The Japs have killed too many Filipinos to arouse much enthusiasm for them."

This brought the question how the besieged people in Bataan peninsula could find out what was going on in Manila. That brought the answer: "We get the Manila papers three days after publication. We have our people everywhere."

Finally in answer to the question whether it was true that the Japanese General Masaru Homma, commanding the enemy forces before Bataan had committed suicide out of chagrin over his failure and defeat by a numerically inferior force, the answer was: "We think it is true. It made Tokyo very angry. The name of a new Japanese general appeared too soon in the place of the old one.

"It must be true."

A summing up question was asked: "Will the fortress of Corregidor and the American lines on Bataan peninsula hold?"

World Is Informed.

The answer was: "Yes."

Recent events have informed the world that the United States is in the Pacific war with all its power and under the leadership of the best general that the Allies possess. Australians have experienced more joy in these two facts than they have had since the war began.

Meanwhile MacArthur's appointment as United Nations' commander for the south Pacific and the knowledge that American troops were here in considerable strength have brought the first sure hope of victory in an area where the Japanese have plunged so far forward with such uninterrupted success that many persons despaired of stopping them with the resources here available.

They now feel confident that Australia will not fall, and that from this fortress eventually the Japanese will be hurled back to an ultimate and crushing defeat. It has also been a day of great relief to the correspondents, who like myself, have flown across most of this enormous continent and have visited many of its great cities.

Americans in Swarms.

Because while the outside world and the United States did not know everything in Australia, they knew that the Americans were here in swarms and throngs throughout the continent and it was a strain indeed to have to refrain from any mention of them whatever.

Nobody has ever received such hospitality from a neighbor, but today that hospitality became tempered with a feeling of grateful brotherhood which may have long and historic consequences. It was the appointment of General MacArthur that moved them chiefly since they had been for so long personally aware of the presence of America's airmen.

Flying here from Adelaide I had the opportunity there and underway and here to test the reaction of the ordinary people as distinguished from the sometimes more diplomatic expressions of the press.

I asked several Royal Australian Air Forces officers what they thought of MacArthur's appointment. One said "It's dinkum. It's excellent. It's the best thing that's happened since the war began."

Another said "It will be the saving of the Pacific situation. MacArthur is so great a leader that he will inspire not only ourselves but also the American people to fight far better than we would have fought before."

Australian Comment.

All through the Australian comment ran the interesting reaction that MacArthur, being the most popular military leader if not the most popular man in the United States would never be let down by the American people — meaning that as long as he commanded this area Americans would insist that every possible help in men and arms be sent here.

Among the Australian armed forces there is not the faintest trace of jealousy that an American should be made their commander in chief, although only a little while ago there had been some criticism of the British high command.

Major General Alexander Gordon Bennett, an Australian, whom many had considered a candidate for the supreme Pacific command, came out immediately with high praise for MacArthur and made it plain that he considered it a high honor to work under him.

Dalton Fire Inspector Seeks School Equipment

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

DALTON, Ga., March 19.—Hardy Springfield, fire inspector for the city of Dalton, met with the board of aldermen this week on behalf of the city schools in a move to secure adequate fire-fighting equipment for the various buildings in the local school system

Springfield, after a thorough inspection of all buildings, told the board that there was not one piece of fire apparatus in any of the buildings, pointing out a number of fire hazards which were thus created.

A committee has been appointed by Mayor D. W. Mitchell composed of Ernest McDonald, H. L. Trammell and Frank Hawkins to make further investigations and report to the board of aldermen at their first meeting in April.

American Directs Main Chinese Forces Guarding India

By EDWARD E. BOMAR.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP)—The United States took over a new role on a distant war front today with the assignment of Lieutenant General Joseph W. Stilwell as commander of the main body of Chinese forces fighting with the British to protect the eastern gateway to India.

General Stilwell, a veteran of 13 years' service in China, was given the command of the Chinese Fifth and Sixth armies, operating with the British in Burma.

His appointment, made by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, and announced by the War Department, linked more closely the whole United Nations' struggle to halt the Japanese march of conquest.

During the day, the War Department told of an aerial stab by American forces in another theater, the Dutch Indies. Army heavy bombers raided the Japanese-held airport at Koepang on Timor Island, "scoring several hits on the runways and damaging installations," a communique said.

Accompanied by Admiral.

The Navy disclosed that MacArthur was accompanied on his trip to Australia by Rear Admiral Francis W. Rockwell, Naval commandant in the Philippine Islands. The announcement said Rockwell is expected to be given "an appropriate command, probably at sea."

The Chinese troops General Stilwell commands made contact only a week ago with their British Allies about 80 miles north of Rangoon, after having moved southward over the Burma road.

They were described as excellent soldiers, well equipped with small arms, but lacking in artillery and other equipment. The Chinese had been stationed across the border on the upper Thailand frontier and had seen little action in the early stages of the Burma campaign.

General Stilwell was believed by officials to be the first American general to command a major force of Chinese troops aside from the volunteers who have played colorful parts in China's history. Officials believed Stilwell would be responsible primarily to Chiang Kai-shek rather than to General Sir Archibald Wavell, supreme commander in India and Burma.

Volunteer Fliers.

The American volunteer group of fliers who have harassed the Japanese from the start of the invasion similarly are responsible directly to the Chinese generalissimo.

The assignment came to Stilwell, a native of Palatka, Fla., and a 1904 graduate of the Military Academy, on his 59th birthday. His military career has been largely identified with China since he first went to Peiping as a language student in 1920 after having won the Distinguished Service Medal in France in the first World War.

Three years after he returned to the United States in 1923, he was back in China with the 15th infantry at Tientsin. In 1932 he started a seven-year detail as military attache of the embassy at Peiping.

Before returning to China a few weeks ago, Stilwell had gained experience in handling large bodies of troops as commander of the 7th Division of Fort Ord, Cal., and then of the Third Army Corps with headquarters at the presidio of Monterey, Cal.

City and State In Agreement On Milk Issue

Co-operation Pledged in Drive to Improve Quality.

Atlanta's milk supply will remain pure and the 517 producers, shippers and distributors operating on the local milk shed must conform to city ordinances modeled after the United States Public Health Service recommendations, it was decided yesterday when the State Department of Agriculture and officials of the city department of health reached an agreement through which they will co-operate to improve the quality of products.

Under the agreement reached after a conference in the office of State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder, any milk producer or dealer, who is served with notice that his methods fail to meet the standards may appeal to the state inspection service and state and city inspectors will make a joint inspection. The operator then has 72 hours in which to file an appeal to the city council's health and sanitation committee and the findings of the committee shall be final.

Councilman James E. Jackson Jr., chairman of the city's health and sanitation group, praised the co-operative spirit of Linder and his aides, and said that when they learned the fact that "we have moved only against those who made no effort to co-operate to meet the standards, they were impressed and assured us they only wanted to protect producers against unnecessary hardships and unnecessary regulation."

'Patriotism Packages' Delivered at Athens

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—Those bulky packages one sees Athenians lugging to town in their cars or on buses these days are "Patriotism Packages" to be delivered to Civilian Defense headquarters.

The plan was originated and promptly adopted by citizens to aid the defense we because in practically every home there are discarded magazines, old newspapers, razor blades, scrap metal, which Civilian Defense desires. However, there is hardly enough in any one of the homes to justify sending out a truck or car to collect it. But those individual packages soon raise the total collected to a sizable amount.

Let the small fry put their best feet forward in dress shoes especially styled for the young. The ones pictured above have individuality and are shaped to keep small toes straight and comfortable. The boy's oxford in the center also is perforated and is a brown and white kid. The one-strap girl's slipper at the right is white kid, its buckle fastening in the center of the strap. (If you would like to find these shoes telephone Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, WAlnut 6565, or write her if you live out of town.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 19.—(AP)—E. H. Daniel, superintendent of transportation for the Central of Georgia railway, will retire March 31 after 53 years' continuous service.

Gallup Poll Reveals:

Confidence in Leaders Drops

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 19.—The military reverses of the United Nations during the past six weeks have brought about a decline of public confidence in Winston Churchill throughout England, and in President Roosevelt throughout the United States.

Surveys by the British Institute of Public Opinion show a 7-point drop in Churchill's popularity in England since late January, and a survey just completed by the American Institute indicates a 6-point drop in President Roosevelt's popularity in the same period.

"In general do you approve or disapprove of the way Roosevelt is handling his job as President today?"

	Today	Jan.
Approve	78%	84%
Disapprove	13	9
Undecided	9	7

"In general are you satisfied or dissatisfied with Winston Churchill as prime minister?"

	Today	Jan.
Satisfied	82%	89%
Dissatisfied	11	7
Undecided	7	4

In spite of the declines since January, the figures clearly indicate that the leaders of the two democratic nations still enjoy the confidence of an overwhelming majority in their respective countries.

Such criticism of the President as exists today is based chiefly on three points, the survey indicates.

They are, first, that he is allowing too much money to be spent on non-defense items; second, that the war effort is not well organized or properly co-ordinated, and, finally, that the President is trying to do too much himself and not delegating enough authority.

Although the people's vote of confidence in Churchill has shown a drop approximately equal to that suffered by Roosevelt, he is far from losing majority support. This is in direct contradiction to many London correspondents who have pictured Churchill as facing imminent downfall.

Not Party Strength.

The fact that Roosevelt has the confidence of nearly eight out of every 10 of his fellow citizens does not necessarily mean that the Democratic party will poll any such proportion of votes in the congressional elections this fall. Today's index is a measure of confidence in the President as a leader and as a personality, and is not an index of party strength.

The American Institute is now conducting studies of party strength in terms of number of seats that would likely be won or lost by the Democrats if congressional elections were held at this time. Results of this study will be ready for publication early in April.

Henry County Farm Agent To Enter Army

McDONOUGH, Ga., March 19.—W. C. Arnold, county agent, is leaving Henry county Saturday to enter the Army in the quartermaster corps.

According to W. B. Pullin, chairman of the board of commissioners of roads and revenues of Henry county, another agricultural agent will be employed at once. Mr. Arnold has been agent here three and one-half years.

Japan Warned To Prepare for 'Real Battle'

Army Spokesman Tells Nippon U. S. Will Not Capitulate.

TOKYO, March 19—(From Japanese Broadcasts)—(AP)—The Japanese nation was told tonight by Major Kinzo Nakajima, of the army press section, that Japan has been catching its breath after its conquests in the southwest Pacific, but that it "now is ready to begin the real battle against the Allied nations."

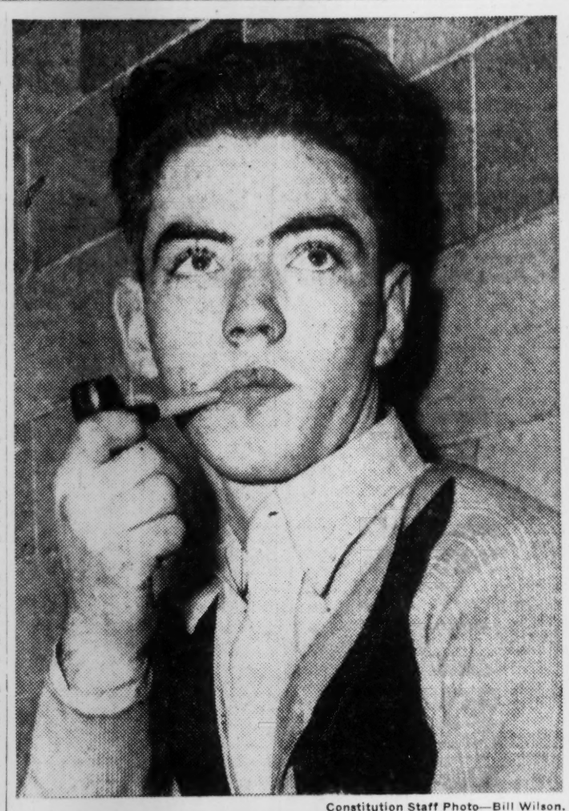

In a radio broadcast he warned the country against being dazzled by Japanese victories to date and added: "We should be prepared for any eventuality."

United States' losses in the southwest Pacific, he said, do not mean the United States is going to capitulate.

Nakajima also told the Japanese not to forget the war in China, saying metaphorically:

"Our fighting forces in China are like the strings of a bow stretched to the full, enabling the arrow to be shot to far-away regions."

Senate Votes Promotion for Wainwright

MacArthur's Successor Raised to Lieutenant General.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) The senate swiftly confirmed today President Roosevelt's promotion of Major General Jonathan M. Wainwright to be a lieutenant general, unanimously setting aside usual procedure in order to do so.

The chamber acted within a few minutes after receiving the nomination from the President and after an explanation that General Wainwright had been selected to succeed General MacArthur as commander on Bataan peninsula in the Phillipnes.

Wainwright, who had been serving as second in command to MacArthur, took full charge of the defense of the peninsula and forts at the mouth of Manila bay when MacArthur was ordered to Australia to become supreme commander of the United Nations' forces in the southwest Pacific.

BLIZZARD IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—The worst blizzard in 60 years swept northeast England and eastern Scotland March 5 and 6 in a stormy climax to the most severe winter in memory. Announcement of the storm was permitted today by authorities who keep England's day-to-day weather a wartime secret.

How the 'Break' Came in Slaying Puzzle Is Told

By ROLFE EDMONDSON.

One last effort resulted in a solution of the death of pretty Mrs. P. M. Williams, whose body was found stuffed into a trunk in the basement of a Stewart avenue residence Wednesday afternoon.

Detective Superintendent J. A. McKibben and Detectives J. W. Austin and C. L. Taylor launched their investeigation a fw moments after the discovery of the body.

Throughout Wednesday night the detectives questioned Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin, who resides at the Stewart avenue address, and members of her family.

Yesterday they spent a busy day running down rumors and reports that reached police.

There were some that pointed toward Mrs. Griffin, and possibly some members of her family.

Felt Solution Was Near.

Late Wednesday afternoon, Superintendent McKibben, in a discussion of the case with newspapermen, said he was far from a solution.

"But I feel we will solve this thing soon," he said. "You know as much as I know, and we still haven't enough to convict anybody. However, I can't help but feel that a break will come soon."

A few moments later Detectives Austin and Taylor returned to their office after a fruitless day talking to neighbors. They were tired. There was a hopeless expression on their faces.

"Let's talk to the boy again," Superintendent McKibben said after hearing their brief report.

Approximately 30 minutes was spent with the youngest son of Mrs. Griffin.

"His story is identical with the one he told Wednesday night," the detectives said as they returned him to his cell.

Woman's Sobs Heard.

Mrs. Griffin was then taken to the superintendent's office. She had been there only a few moments when reporters waiting outside the closed door heard a woman's sobs inside the closed office. They could hear her talking in a high-pitched voice.

After only a few moments of this, the superintendent walked from his office, called for a stenographer and turned to reporters, saying:

"She has confessed everything and absolved all members of her family—she said she did it all by herself and that no one knew anything about it but herself."

As the stenographer appeared, Superintendent McKibben turned and went back into his office. A short time later, copies of a statement, signed by Mrs. Griffin were handed to newspapermen, and young J. W. Griffin was ordered released from custody.

"I told Mrs. Griffin that we had practically enough evidence to convict her of murder," Superintendent McKibben said after the written confession was released.

Clear Conscience.

"I told her there was nothing like a clear conscience—that she would feel better when she had told everything she knew about the death of Mrs. Williams, and I pointed out to her that an honest confession is good for the soul and that she could sleep better knowing that she was not concealing anything.

"I told her that her silence pointed a finger of suspicion at her two sons, and that nothing but a statement by her would remove that suspicion.

"She then broke down and cried. While sobbing she said that she did it and did it alone, and asked that her children be released.

"After hearing her complete confession, I could understand several things that had been puzzling me. She explained how she dragged the trunk to the body, stuffed it into the trunk and left it lying where the Negroes found it Wednesday afternoon while cleaning the basement.

"In fact her explanation is understandable to me. It is a crime of passion, and not a cold blooded, premeditated murder we first thought it. My deepest sympathy goes out to all parties concerned. I sympathize with the mother and husband of Mrs. Williams, and I also sympathize with Mrs. Griffin and members of her family."

Police Given Confession in Trunk Murder

terday emphasized the belief of neighbors and friends that the fear that her daughter's home was in jeopardy had been the cause of the murder.

The confession was not unexpected. Detectives learned Wednesday night, when they first grilled Mrs. Griffin, that she was not the type to crumple under a lashing examination. She had spirit, an inflexible will to emerge topmost in any knockabout argument.

Sense of Religion.

But tipsters had informed police that within Mrs. Griffin's stormy exterior there lurked an inbred sense of religion, that often expressed itself in spells of remorse and conscience.

After an hour's hard and fast cross-examination Wednesday night, detectives decided to lock the woman up in a cell and let her brood alone with her thoughts for a period.

Detectives were watching her guardedly yesterday as she sat in her cell. More and more as the day progressed and the realization of her plight impressed itself on her mind, the detectives noticed growing signs of restlessness. They noticed her choke back sobs several times during the afternoon.

Stroke Supplied.

They were holding her incommunicado. No one could visit her; no one could call her on the telephone. Neither could she call anyone, speak to anyone for just a moment to bolster her courage. Inside the woman's soul, a storm was brewing, and early last night detectives supplied the stroke of lightning that brought the break of spirit, the sudden outburst of human emotions.

Her 16-year-old son was summoned ostentatiously for another cross-examination. All day, the boy had sat stolidly in his cell, puffing at a pipe to control his nerves. Wednesday night, during his first questioning, the boy had insisted again and again that he knew nothing of the crime, that he had never suspected the body was in the basement.

The mother knew that her youngest son was being examined.

Soft Tones.

Then the police summoned her. Slowly and unsteadily, she followed the detectives into the private office where the scene had been laid, the script worked out—and Mrs. Griffin was given "the works" in a quiet, sympathetic tone by Detectives Taylor and Austin and Superintendent McKibben.

The police spoke in soft tones. They spoke of crime and its penalties. They spoke of the penalties in another world that are far more terrifying than the punishments in this sphere.

The detectives knew that ill will had been brewing for a long time between Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. Williams, who until last April had occupied with her husband, two rooms in the Griffin home.

Detectives had heard from persons in the neighborhood:

"Mrs. Griffin had often said that she was sure Mrs. Williams was trying to steal her son-in-law away from her daughter."

Detectives had been told:

"Mrs. Griffin has been talking about Mrs. Williams and saying she was going to see that her daughter wasn't robbed of her husband."

They knew that Mrs. Williams had received mysterious letters in the mail, threatening revenge if she didn't cease what the letters claimed were her effort to lure K. D. Hubert, the son-in-law, away from Mrs. Griffin's daughter.

They had been told that Mr. and Mrs. Williams together had been disturbed over the charges in the poison pen letters to a degree that they insisted one night on a showdown conference with the entire Griffin family.

Cards on Table.

The detectives had been told that Mr. and Mrs. Williams, after forcing the conference, said calmly:

"Now let's put all our cards on the table and get this thing straightened out. You let us know what this is all about."

The detectives had been told that Mrs. Griffin indignantly denied that she had written the letters or made any such accusations.

Relations continued strained between the Williamses and the Griffins, and ultimately last April the Williamses decided to move to other quarters. They moved around the corner from Stewart avenue into a house near by on Mayland avenue. Both Mr. and Mrs. Williams, detectives had been told, liked the neighborhood, had many friends in that section and decided that all that was necessary was to get out of the Griffin home and remove the cause of any friction.

Visited Hospital.

Detectives knew that on November 20, the day before her disappearance, Mrs. Williams had visited a hospital where a baby had been born to Mrs. T. E. Griffin, a daughter-in-law.

At the hospital, it was said, Mrs. Williams had remarked:

"I love the baby. I'm going to buy it a present."

Detectives had been told that the elder Mrs. Griffin was at the hospital at the time and had remarked:

"Tell you what we'll do. Let me give you some money and we'll go in together and buy the baby something really worth while."

Then, the detectives learned, on the next morning—November 21—the fateful day, Mrs. Griffin had telephoned to the house where Mrs. Williams lived and had invited Mrs. Williams over to "talk about something."

Then, the detectives learned from an occupant of the three-family house in which Mrs. Williams lived:

"Mrs. Williams called to me about 1 o'clock that afternoon telling me she was leaving for work. She told me, too, that Mrs. Griffin had asked her to stop by for a talk and she said to me:

"'I guess I'd better go see what she wants.'

"She went out of the door and that was the last I ever saw of her."

In the cross-examination Wednesday night, Mrs. Griffin had been confronted with the testimony about the telephone call.

"Never Came."

She had denied that she had ever telephoned Mrs. Williams and then, about 15 minutes later, she confessed she had telephoned.

"I asked her to drop by," she said in the second statement, "but she never did come. I didn't see her."

Mrs. Williams was seen on Hayward avenue, the detectives knew, but the only one who had said he had seen the young woman boarding a street car headed for town was the 16-year-old Griffin son, J. W. The lad, formerly a student at Joe Brown Junior High school, now works in a grocery store directly across Stewart avenue from his home.

All this was laid quietly before Mrs. Griffin last night.

Detectives pointed out that she was the only person in the house at the time and would certainly have heard the commotion of such a violent murder.

The trail toward which the stories pointed all led to the Griffin basement—where Mrs. Griffin was alone in the house.

She broke and the confession resulted.

More than 200 friends and relatives attended the funeral services for the victim of the tragedy yesterday afternoon.

After brief services in the Spring Hill chapel of Patterson's mortuary, burial was in Crest Lawn cemetery.

her to stop by on her way to work.

"I can't see what else could have happened except that Mildred went in the house to see her. If only she hadn't!"

Newspaper accounts that police were investigating reports that he was injured in a "jook" row instead of in an automobile accident brought the only surge of the bitterness and rage he felt into Perry Williams' voice.

"That's a lie!" he cried, raising his voice for the first time. "I'd like to get my hands on whoever made such a statement."

The truth is that he hurt his hand and face when he tripped on a loose floor mat in the bottom of his car and fell headlong into the street, Williams said. He said the accident occurred Saturday morning at Fifth street near Cherry and named persons who saw him fall.

"Of course," he added, quietly caressing the band of the watch on his left wrist, "it's just natural for people to gossip about you when you're in trouble. They make you suffer as much as you can."

U. S. Fights Bail Plea Of Convicted Viereck

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) Government attorneys declared today that a German U-boat might try to rescue George Sylvester Viereck, convicted pro-German propagandist, if he is released from jail pending an appeal.

Opposing Viereck's motion for release on bond, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge, and William Power Maloney, filed a brief in district court saying:

"Transportation is not lacking for those whom the Nazi government values so highly. Daily in the press we read of submarines lurking off our shores within reach."

Viereck has been sentenced to serve from two to six years on conviction of withholding essential information when he registered with the State Department as an agent of German interests.

Selective Law For Women Is Recommended

Head of Business Women's Club Says War Duty Involves All.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 19.—(AP) Enrollment of women into an auxiliary Army corps should be compulsory, and not on a volunteer basis, a leader of Georgia's Business and Professional Women said today.

"The job of protecting America is just as much a woman's job as it is a man's job," said Miss Elizabeth White, Augusta business woman and president of the state organization.

"Patriotism is not limited to a single sex, color or creed, and I can't see why patriotic duty should be."

Miss White also believes that the size of the corps should not be restricted to 150,000.

To win the war, she said, "We should fit the person to the job. Men may be better for some jobs because of their brawn, and women for other jobs because of their dexterity.

"It is not right to take a $150-a-month working man and demote him to $21 a month while $40-a-month girl office workers are raised to $125 and $150 jobs.

"The plan for a volunteer army did not work for men and so it can't be expected to work for women. What we need is a selective service act for women."

The WAAC measure already has passed the house of representatives by 249-86 vote. The bill was authored by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and lists with its supporters Jeannette Rankin, Montana representative, who cast the only vote against entry into war after the Pearl Harbor attack.

Injured Woman Not Connected With Murder

Theory Cases Were Linked Is Blasted by Confession.

The long arm of coincidence touched Atlanta police yesterday in the midst of its trunk murder investigation when an injured woman was found lying on the Buford highway five miles from the city limits.

The woman, who was taken to Emory University hospital by passing motorists, identified herself as Mrs. Joan Harrington, 30, a waitress, and give as her address 516 Lee street, S. W.

As this apartment house also is the address of Mrs. J. J. Allen, mother of Mrs. Mildred Williams, 22, whose battered body was found Wednesday stuffed in a trunk in the basement of a house at 1117 Stewart avenue, investigators rushed to question her, on the possibility of a link with the murder inquiry.

Theory Blasted.

However, the confession from Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin in the murder case blasted the connection theory first held by police following finding of Mrs. Harrington lying across the highway, with her legs on the dirt shoulder and her upper body on the road itself.

Mrs. Harrington, interviewed at the hospital by a reporter from The Constitution, said, talking with difficulty due to her lips being split:

"I was starting home when I met a waitress called 'Pinkie.' We went to her house and had a couple of drinks. There were two men there, and I didn't like the setup, so I thought I better go home. They said they'd take me.

"Dodged Car."

"The three of us got in a car. I saw they weren't going toward West End, and argued with them about it. They put me out. Then they turned the car and ran it at me. I dodged into a ditch."

Mrs. Harrington came here last September, she said. Relatives said her husband was at Fort Bragg, North Carolina.

A. H. Stewart, an accountant, was the motorist who stopped to see what was the matter with Mrs. Harrington, police said. They reported his saying he accompanied her to the hospital in an automobile in which Hudson Johnson, of Macon, and John Kelly, of Norcross (the names they gave Stewart) were riding.

Floridan Awaits Mann Act Penalty

A second Mann act conviction was returned in federal court yesterday against Jack Brent, of Jacksonville, for transporting his wife, Jodey, across a state line. Both last week were convicted in the same court of bringing a young Jacksonville telephone operator, Margaret Andrea, here for immoral purposes.

Both will be sentenced today by Judge E. Marvin Underwood. Automobile theft charges also are pending in Jacksonville against Brent, who told officers he was the scion of an unnamed family of prominence in the east and recipient of a "spendthrift" trust fund income of $150 monthly.

Setting Spring's Pace

Set a smart pace for spring when you step out in the Easter parade! Style and a variety of colors have been combined with that most essential ingredient, COMFORT, to give you an endless choice of shoes to wear with every type of costume. The ones pictured were chosen from the point of fashion, moderate price and color. Seen at the top are three loves that feature the new nailhead trim. From left to right they are a snakeskin sling-strap with nailhead platform sole, which is available in the natural skin, red, green, blue, etc.; a red suede pump with a metal studded bow, which also comes in other colors, and a sling-strap pump in milk chocolate suede with brass nailhead trim on the platform sole and bow. Displayed in the second photograph are a modified spectator pump in biege and copper kid, and a matching bag and pump combining wheat linen and copper kid. The bag has a plastic handle and the pump is stitched in copper-colored thread. Sturdy heels give solid comfort, and the three shoes featuring them include a perforated patent leather pump, with nailhead trim on the bow and Dutch Boy heel; a wide-strap sandal with a slight platform sole and nailhead trim, and a black patent leather sling-strap pump with clog heel, platform sole and pom pom of black grossgrain ribbon. Classic blue and white are seen in a dressy spectator pump in white buckskin with blue kid trim, and in a pigskin sandal with semi-wedge heel. Pictured in the circle is a smart dress pump of navy blue gabardine with matching kid trim, the two materials being combined in the unusual rolled bow. (If you want to find any of these articles telephone Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, Walnut 6565, or if you live out of town write her.)

Doran Elected Employment Service Chief

Community Fund Agency Completes Its Most Successful Year.

J. J. Doran, Atlanta department store official and member of the board of the department of public welfare, was elected president of the Community Employment Service at the annual meeting of the board of directors Wednesday night.

Joseph Horacek was selected vice president and George Geise was named treasurer. Miss Kathleen Watson is executive secretary of the organization, which is an agency of the Community Fund.

The election of officers for 1942 brought to a close the biggest year the employment service has seen from the standpoint of jobs found for unemployed persons, Miss Watson said.

From a total of 10,000 unemployed persons registered with the service during the year 8,800 placements were made. Started in 1919 under the leadership of Cator Woolford, the service was designed to help young people graduating from city schools to find employment. Since that time, approximately 200,000 Atlanta youths have been served by the office.

Since it affiliated with the Atlanta schools in 1921 the service has engaged in a program of vocational guidance to determine the uses of the schools in finding employment for their graduates. The office is serving young men up to 25 years, women of any age, and domestic applicants of any age. Approximately 85 per cent of all its placements are in commercial lines, indicating how well it is serving the commercial business structure of the city.

Low cost of handling the cases of unemployed persons is a strong point with the agency. In the year of 1941, the average cost was 30 cents per transaction.

The agency has operated in cooperation with the National Youth Administration, the state vocational board and the city health department.

Glasgow, Scotland, raised $54,000,000, equal to over $50 per head of population, toward a fund for British warships.

Sidney R. Kent, Film Head, Dies

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—Sidney R. Kent, 56, midwestern farm boy who became president of one of the nation's largest motion picture companies, 20th Century-Fox, died early today.

He had been in poor health from a weak heart five years, but about a year ago was so improved that he increased his working hours. His death came as a surprise. Only two weeks ago he went to Chicago for a company convention.

Death came at 5 a. m., at his home. His second wife, Mrs. Lillian Kent, was the only relative present. Kent had been active yesterday. His daughter by a former marriage, Peggy Ann Kent Wilson, wife of a radio announcer, was at her home in Hollywood.

D. M. Griffin, 65, Dies at Residence

David M. Griffin, 65, a conductor for the Southern Railway Company, died yesterday at the residence, 961 Euclid avenue, N. E. He had been employed by the railroad for 40 years and was a member of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Baptist Tabernacle.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Allen; a son, Robert M. Griffin; a sister, Miss Kate Griffin; and a brother, Earl Griffin, of Mississippi.

The body will be taken to Carbondale, Ga., near Dalton, today for funeral services and burial.

Text of Confession In Trunk Tragedy

The following is the text of the signed confession from Mrs. Minnie Griffin, as released by police last night to The Constitution:

"March 19, 1942.

"I, Mrs. Minnie Griffin, of 1117 Stewart avenue, S. W., make the following statement of my own free will and accord, without fear, favor, promise or reward, to be used by the solicitor or any of his associates in prosecution of my case.

"Statement:

"About four months ago I called Mrs. Lavender's residence and asked for Mildred Williams and I asked her how she was feeling and if she was able to go to work. About an hour later she came by my home at 1117 Stewart avenue. When she came in, I was sweeping in the living room and I asked her how she was feeling.

"She told me that she was sorry about the misunderstanding about her going with Kenneth Hubert, my son-in-law.

"I asked her if she really had been going with him and that if she had she was breaking up my daughter's home.

Ran to Basement.

"She jumped up telling me it was none of my business if she was going with him and that if I ever mentioned that to her again she would brain me.

"I grabbed the broom and hit her over the head. In a few minutes she got up and ran through the bedroom to the basement. She told me not to follow her into the basement.

"I followed her into the basement and picked up a heavy object and hit her on the head several times.

(The statement said parenthetically that Mrs. Griffin said this object was a piece of wood and not iron.)

"After knocking her down I lost my mind and do not remember how many times I hit her.

"After I had knocked her down, I thought I would call police and give up, but I couldn't do it and then looked around for a place to put the body. I looked around for a place to put the body and saw an old trunk.

"I then went over to my son's work bench and got a piece of rope, but I cannot remember tying up Mildred's body.

"I dragged the trunk up toward the northwest corner of the basement where Mildred's body was lying and put the body into the trunk.

"After putting the body into the trunk I remember spreading a coat over it. I then spread paper over the coat and then I saw the lid of the trunk would not close and then poured ashes over the paper. I then closed the lid of the trunk as far as I could and then spread ashes all over the trunk. I then sat down on the basement steps for about an hour before I was able to leave.

"When I left the basement I went upstairs and lay down for about an hour and then got up and fixed supper.

"My youngest son, J. W., came in for supper first, but I did not eat anything. I did not say anything to anyone about what had happened.

"The coat that I spread over the body, a gray coat with a black velvet collar, was the one that she had on when she came to my house.

Buford Plant To Be Used To Repair Shoes

Government Will Employ Several Hundred in Army Work.

BUFORD, Ga., March 19.—(AP)—The Bona Allen Shoe Company, which discontinued the manufacture of shoes recently, has leased its welt shoe factory building here to the War Department, Vice President Knight announced today.

The War Department will use the building and most of the machinery for repair of Army shoes, Knight said. This will give employment to 300 to 400 persons.

Knight said about 1,200 workers were thrown out of work when the concern discontinued manufacture of shoes recently.

Family Pledges Its Loyalty And Asks Delay in Judgment

Sons and daughters of Mrs. Minnie Lee Griffin stood loyally beside her last night and pledged their help to ease her problems in the crisis which had struck the family.

They asked for a delay in public judgment of their tragedy until their mother's troubles could be presented in the proper light, at the proper time.

W. F. Griffin, oldest son of Mrs. Griffin, said:

"My mother is in trouble now and I shall do all within my power to defend her to the end. I know that all our family feels this need for loyalty at a critical and tragic hour in our lives.

"None of us have ever had any reason to suspect any disloyalty on the part of our sister's husband, and we cannot help but feel that this tragedy is the result of some quirk of mind that has been troubling our mother.

"We ask the public not to pass judgment now, either on our mother or on us. We know that competent physicians will be able to clarify this problem at the proper moment.

"Of course, we offer our sincere sympathy to Mr. Williams, Mrs. Allen and any other victims of this tragedy."

Kenneth D. Hubert, son-in-law of Mrs. Griffin, said: "I regret sincerely that our family, and particularly my mother-in-law, have been embarrassed by this tragic result of a figment of the imagination.

"There was no basis for her fears or worries. I have never given her cause to doubt me or my loyalty to my wife. Naturally, I shall do all within my power for Mrs. Griffin in this trouble, because she is the mother of my wife and always has been a devoted and loyal friend of mine."

Shocking News Of Killing Stirs Neighborhood

'I Just Can't Believe It,' Says Stewart Avenue Matron.

By DEAN BROOME.

Neighbors of Mrs. Minne Lee Griffin in Adair Park last night expressed shock and bewilderment at news that the 46-year-old woman had confessed to the brutal murder of Mildred Seymour Williams, whose body was found in a trunk Wednesday in the basement of Mrs. Griffin's residence.

"I just can't believe it," said Mrs. E. O. Brannen, who lives at 1128 Stewart avenue, opposite the Griffins.

"I always thought she was a good woman. She wasn't the 'visiting' type, but she always seemed friendly enough. I don't understand how she could have done a thing like that."

Mrs. Addie Parker, of 1136 Stewart avenue, said she had known Mrs. Griffin casually and was "shocked" at her confession of the deed.

"I saw her in a grocery store only this week and she certainly showed no signs of nervousness or being upset then. We chatted about her little grandchild."

One neighbor reported she rode downtown and back on the bus with Mrs. Griffin Wednesday. The latter said she was going to see a doctor about her appendicitis, it was reported.

When they neared the car stop near their homes, where they usually got off the bus, police cars were just arriving after the body had been found.

"You have company," the neighbor remarked.

"Oh, they're not at my house," Mrs. Griffin said, but then added she believed she would go on another block on the bus and visit another neighbor.

Several who knew Mrs. Griffin expressed surprise that she had been able to do the deed alone.

It was also recalled the accused woman had told some of her neighbors she had been quilting in the basement of her home recently and had completed a quilt while working there.

Judge To Help Prison Escape Keep Freedom

Graying Father, 53, Fled Iowa Penal Farm 21 Years Ago.

PHILADELPHIA, March 19.—(AP)—The "exemplary life" which 53-year-old Clarence Arters has led since he escaped from an Iowa prison farm in 1921 brought help today from a judge who said it would be "a miscarriage of justice to return him to a penitentiary."

Tears streaming down his face, the graying father left the courtroom under $500 bail after Judge Byron Milner issued a writ of habeas corpus to give "the Iowa Governor time to review the whole story." The writ was made returnable a month hence.

Arters, a ship cook, frankly admitted he escaped from the prison farm at Clive, Iowa, after serving 13 months of a five-year sentence for an automobile theft. But he insisted—and police agreed—the crime was "my one mistake." His past was uncovered through a routine fingerprinting.

He married a year after the escape and now has six children. The court, told he had been "a kind husband and father" and had worried about detection, said "this man has paid fully for his one error and it would be an outrage to harass him further."

But in Des Moines, David R. McCreery, chairman of the Iowa Board of Control, declared: "No matter how long ago a man escaped and no matter how good his record has been meanwhile, every escaped prisoner must be brought back and locked up again.

"There can be no exceptions to the rule," he added. "That would place a premium on escapes."

800 To Attend Clinic On Priorities Here

Backing up a move to bring priorities experts from Washington to Atlanta for a regional clinic April 2, representatives of seven associations met with W. R. Ulrich at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday and arranged to handle the more than 800 businessmen who are expected to attend the clinic.

Topics listed for discussion include those of manufacturers and the difficulties confronting jobbers and distributors of hardware, electrical, plumbing, heating, and chemical lines, automobile replacement parts, and industrial supplies.

HERE LIES A SPOOK

Born March 3, 1942. Kicked the bucket a few days later. The beginning and end of the so-called "Victory Suit"!

Actually, it never existed at all. This scarecrow phantom was never anything more than a minor nightmare, dreamed up by someone in a moment of fumbling patriotism.

Oh! yes—you've squirmed through movie shots of funny looking men wearing coats that fit like sausage casings. You've read about trousers built to cover nothing heftier than a pipe stem. The radio has probably spoiled your dinner with ghost stories about skeletons stripped of all lapels. But have you actually seen these atrocities in circulation?

Of course not—and you're not going to, either! Take that on the word of Uncle Sam. Digest this, from the Government's Official Release—"the ordered style revisions will not materially change the appearance of a suit or overcoat from those now being worn. The only noticeable change in a suit will be the absence of trouser cuffs. In that respect, civilian trousers will merely follow the trend of military uniforms and formal dress trousers, which are cuffless".

Right now, the only suit worthy of the name "Victory" is that buckskin outfit worn by the Minute-Man on Defense Bond posters. Let's keep on loading his rifle 'til it gets red hot. That's where our dollars should go—instead of foolishly rushing to beat those cockeyed rumors about screwy styles.

So much then, for the not-lamented "Victory Suit". May it rest in peace!

Organization of 600 Atlantans into a huge decontamination unit to protect Atlanta against gas attacks and pollution of its water supply will begin immediately General E. G. Peyton, commander of civilian defense for Atlanta, announced yesterday.

Robert A. Moncrief, expert in decontamination, will begin a class of 32 picked leaders immediately, the general said, and asked the eight zone leaders to pick four of their men at once to be assigned to the school.

When this class is trained, they will be sent into the field to recruit and instruct the unit of 600 needed for Atlanta. The decontamination unit also will instruct the public how to construct gasproof rooms and how to guard against ill effects of gas.

Appointment of L. F. Barth, assistant to the executive vice president of Rogers Stores, as food coordinator and assistant chief of the warden's division, also was announced. Barth will see that ample supplies are on hand at all times in case of evacuations, from Florida and South Carolina or in case of a direct attack on Atlanta.

Serving with Barth will be representatives of all chain stores. Canteen workers will be under supervision of Mrs. Perrin Nicholson Jr., after they are trained by the Red Cross. Mrs. Burma Abercrombie will head the cafeteria service.

Lower Plate Plea Voiced by Patriot

The Army's relaxed its requirements on the number of teeth a prospective soldier must have, but didn't relax them enough for Harold Rupp, 31, of 139 Luckie street, who was turned down until he could get a lower plate.

Rupp wants to get in the Army very much, but won't be able unless he can get some money for the plate. He was recently laid off by an electric firm here and is about broke.

His wife works in Columbia, S. C., and plans to enter the Ambulance Corps when Rupp enters the Army.

County Speeds Order To Train Plane Builders

Committee Approves List of Equipment Needed in Program.

An itemized list of equipment needed for training 40,000 prospective workers in the Bell bomber plant was approved yesterday by the Fulton county advisory committee on industrial education and sent to Washington.

C. E. Rakestraw, field representative of the United States Department of Education, explained the original list sent last week had been disapproved because it had not been itemized and the beginning of training would not be delayed at all by that action.

The equipment will cost, according to the list, $217,434. The committee, of which E. S. Papy is chairman, voted to leave the question of sites for additional training centers to county and city school authorities and added two CIO representatives to its membership when it was pointed out that all its labor members belonged to the A. F. of L.

The committee also issued a statement, signed by a subcommittee consisting of Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor; Albert Gossett and W. W. Snow, assistant passenger agent of the Gorgia railroad, "placing itself on record that it has never had, nor does it now have, any desires or intentions whatsoever to impede establishment of this training program."

"Every possible effort," the statement continued, "will be made to provide full co-operation with all parties concerned in order that an efficient and effective training program will be initiated as rapidly as possible."

Australians Greet American Fliers With Open Arms

By JAMES R. W. TAYLOR.

SYDNEY, Australia, March 19.—(By Wireless.)—No American flyer has any trouble locating a girl friend in Australia in record time. As one incredulous matron put it the other day, "they have only been in town five minutes when you will see a blonde on each arm."

But from my observations most of the Americans prefer only one arm at a time. Folks across the Pacific would blush with pride if they heard half of the compliments showered on American fliers by the people of Australia.

Morale High.

The official announcement of General Douglas MacArthur's appointment as supreme commander in the Anzac area and the arrival of United States armed aid in quantity has raised Australian morale to its highest pitch since the outbreak of the Pacific war. The presence of MacArthur came as a complete surprise to the Australian people and was hailed with immense relief in both civil and military circles.

For many weeks, however, the sight of American airmen here has buoyed Australian hopes. Rumor has piled on rumor concerning the number and types of United States planes and munitions already here and the count and comment often was absurd. But even conservative estimates were reassuring.

And MacArthur, Too.

No one here dreamed that in addition to these forces we would be given the leadership of so gallant and proved a commander as General MacArthur. These moves have put new heart in Australians in all walks of life and transformed hope into confidence.

These fresh, tough, virile young fliers from the United States have acted like a blood transfusion and all Australia has responded magically to the stimulus. They have accepted the Americans not only as allies against a common enemy, or even as brothers in arms, but as members of a family.

Behavior Praised.

Two dominant impressions we have formed here are that these streamlined boys from America have the Australian quality of friendliness without our exuberance and they can take hospitality in a big way without losing their heads. The dignity and behavior of the Americans on leave is exemplary and there is no doubt about their physical fitness for the job they are here to do. The favorite stories in Australia today are the ones about Yankee efficiency and pep and these tales lose nothing in repetition.

And the most cheering spectacle in Australia today is the sight of bombers and fighters, obviously American, tearing across our skies and making a pleasant roar in our ears. Now that the Japs are bombing our country and killing people in territory never before touched by war, it can be imagined with what relief we watch these avenging wings which already have flapped to some purpose over New Guinea and the Torres strait.

America is not making the mistake of sending too little, too late. Judging by the agreeable portents around us, she is sending sufficient in time and will later, we trust, send too much, too early—for the Japanese.

Beef Increase In Georgia Is Said Needed

Extension Service Specialist Outlines Requirements.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—Georgia is producing only 40 per cent of the beef consumed in the state, W. S. Rice, livestock specialist for the Agricultural Extension Service, declared today in urging an increase in beef production to meet food-for-victory goals.

Rice outlined requirements, which, if fulfilled, would increase beef production, both for home meat supply and for market.

"Grow out at least one calf to weight of 400 to 600 pounds for home meat supply," the beef cattle specialist said. "Feed calves liberally for economical beef production, and make maximum use of pastures, hays and silage in order to obtain cheap gains.

"It is financially sound to feed Georgia feeds to Georgia cattle," he continued.

For market production, Rice advised feeding of liberal rations to yearlings and older cattle. He recommended marketing only cattle which are fat.

In way of production, he said native cows bred to purebred bulls produce good steers.

"Georgia farmers who have good pastures are finding the cow and calf program more profitable and less speculative than steer grazing or feeding," the Georgia Extension worker pointed out. "However, there is a place in Georgia for both types of production.

"The cow and calf program seems to offer the greatest opportunities to the largest number of farmers."

Rice explained that in many instances a fat calf, from six to eight months old, is more valuable than the cow that raised it, thus this type of beef production has been called the "self-liquidating industry."

PASTURE TESTS.

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—The extension service says that experiments have shown that well set pastures on good pasture land, liberally fertilized and properly managed, will give 275 to 350 pounds of beef per acre.

DAIRY FARM

HIGH ON A WINDY HILL overlooking the 150-acre Dairy Farm of Brownlee & Lively on Briarcliff Road are three large white buildings. The center building houses the general offices, pasteurizing, bottling, capping, cold storage and delivery departments. The other two are modern milking barns.

Every precaution is taken with a herd of more than 200 cows, to keep the standard of purity and quality high, from the time the cow walks into the barn until the milk reaches the purchaser. When the cow enters the barn, she gets a shower bath, her bag and udders then are inspected, and are given a chlorine solution bath to remove all dirt and kill any lurking germs. The first milk passes through a black strainer cloth to insure that there is no congestion or any other objects left in the teats which might contaminate the milk. If she passes muster, she is then milked.

YOUR MILK IS NEVER TOUCHED BY HAND! Bottled, capped and sealed by modern, sanitary machinery.

The milk is first poured into Brownlee & Lively's own cooling, refrigeration and ice-making system. It is chilled in equipment which is sterilized daily under heat so intense that no germ can live, as is all other equipment, including bottles. After it is cooled from 90 degrees to 40 degrees, it goes to the bottling department.

When bottled and sealed by sanitary and surgically clean sealers, the milk is then ready for delivery. It is placed on the fleet of refrigerated trucks and delivered throughout the city.

Nazis Throw Reserves Into Russian Clash

Germans Counterattack Desperately But Fail To Halt Reds.

MOSCOW, March 19.—(AP)—The Nazis are counterattacking on virtually every front in desperately futile efforts to rescue trapped troops and stem the Russian advance, the Red army reported tonight.

The fiercest fighting of all raged in an unidentified sector of the southern front, the army newspaper Red Star said.

Trying to relieve several units from a grave predicament, the Germans threw in every weapon of war, but were repulsed and lost another settlement, Red Star related, and added that the Russian advance there was continuing.

Central Front.

The story was similar on the central front, where Red Star reported the Russians encircled a German garrison in an important town after several days of battle in a blinding blizzard.

A dispatch from that front said that the Germans were trying to furnish the trapped unit with munitions and food by plane and that captured orders showed the commander of the 101st German rifle regiment had already reduced his men's rations one-third.

A supplementary communique issued tonight said that 2,500 Germans were killed on the Leningrad front during two days of recent fighting and that in the southwest Red troops occupied three more inhabited points, where "hundreds of German dead were left on the battlefields."

In the Staraya Russa sector of the north central front, the official Russian government paper, Izvestia, said Hitler's "starved, half-frozen, lice-covered 16th army, 60,000 strong, is perishing."

Spring Offensive.

Reserves "gathered with difficulty for his so-called spring offensive," but sent instead to aid this army "find themselves encircled with those they are sent to relieve," Izvestia said.

For example, it said, the 225th German infantry division, which arrived from France about the end of January, has now lost 45 per cent of its men, and the 5th Jaeger division, brought from France in February, has lost more than 50 per cent.

Milledgeville Students Get Spring Holidays

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., March 19.—Students of Peabody High school left their books yesterday for six days of spring holidays.

Georgia State College for Women students are taking winter final exams this week, also. They will be given a four-day holiday, and the spring quarter will open Tuesday.

Here's a lamb of a dress for you to wear Easter and through the remainder of the spring. It's one of those suit dresses you've been hearing so much about, the jacket being styled after the manner of a coachman's coat. Feminine and flattering is the lacy jabot that trims the blouse, the lace being repeated on the cuffs of the long, graceful sleeves. Black crepe is the material used for this smart frock. (If you want to find this dress telephone Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, Walnut 6565, or write her if you live out of town.)

Men 45 to 64 Will Register On April 27

Group Will Be Listed for Possible Noncombat Duty.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) The government today ordered the oldest group of men under the selecive service law—45 to 64 inclusive—to register on April 27, for possible noncombatant service in the future.

The new registration date proclaimed by President Roosevelt will leave only one group not yet recorded, those of 18 and 19 years. Estimates of the total registration for the 45-64 age group range around 15,000,000.

While none of these comparative oldsters will be taken into the fighting forces, there is the possibility that some or many of them will be assigned eventually to essential war work. Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey has said that one purpose of the draft law was an "accurate and systematic appraisal" of the supply of man power.

Testifying before a house committee last month, Hershey asserted that "we must have much more control over placements of men than we now have to meet the war manpower problem." It was noted, however, that there is no existing law to compel a work-or-fight policy.

The April 27 registration will be the second since the United States entered the war. The first registered the 20 to 44 group on February 16, and the lottery for that group held last Tuesday. Estimates before the February 16 registration were that about 9,000,000 were in that age bracket.

The first draft registration since the World War was held on October 16, 1940, when about 17,000,000 men from 21 to 35, inclusive, registered. The second registration, of those who had become 21 since the first draft, was held last July and totaled about 750,000.

Like the previous drafts, today's order applied to "male citizens of the United States and other male persons" and is effective in the United States, the territories of Alaska and Hawaii and in Puerto Rico. Exceptions are made for those already in he armed services and provisions made in certain cases for registration before or after the April 27 date.

Japs Advance Toward Burma Oil Fields

Decisive Battle Looms With Central Sector at Stake.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN CENTRAL BURMA, March 19.—(AP)—The decisive battle for Central Burma appeared definitely imminent today in the Irrawaddy valley—Burma's spinal column—as Japanese troops moved northward by motor transport, boat and mule train toward the British defenses in the Prome sector sheltering the Yenang-Yaung oil fields.

The fight will be for the Prome road, asphalted western branch of the old Burma Road running along the broad Irrawaddy to the rich central Burma oil fields, thence to Mandalay. Japanese forces also are moving up the eastern branch, or Toungoo road, and there has been preliminary fighting in the Kanyutkwin sector of this eastern road to Mandalay, some 100 miles north of Rangon.

(In this area, a communique broadcast by Radio Madras said Thursday, the British withdrawal toward Toungoo proceeded after Japanese flank attacks had been beaten off. The communique also said 25 enemy planes were believed destroyed by the American volunteer groups' air raids Wednesday on the Moulmein airdrome and Fedel landing grounds.)

As Japanese shock troops mopped up the conquered Burma delta and drew upon the native population for armed recruits, battle-worn British Imperials took up new defensive positions well south of Prome.

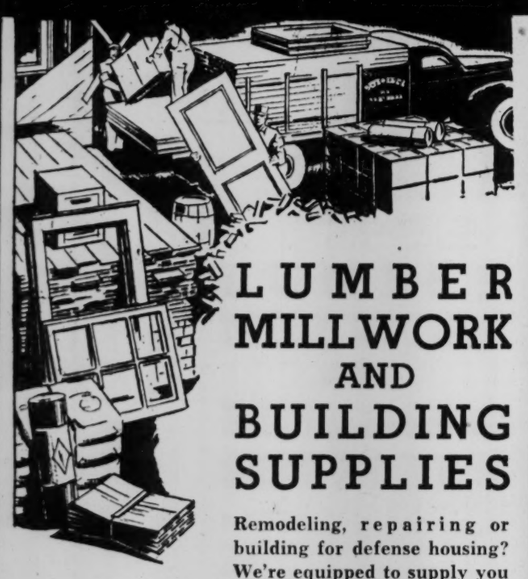

(A London spokesman said this involved the abandonment of Tharrawaddy, 60 miles above Rangoon on the Prome road.)

There are no natural obstacles of terrain on this route to favor the defenders, who have been fighting against odds of two and three to one for two months.

Quicksand and almost dry washes, which with the mid-May monsoon will be hidden deep in flood waters, now can be crossed without bridges by tanks, whether British or Japanese.

Dixie's Energy Pledged to War By Arkwright

Labor and Management Leaders To Gather Here Monday.

Expressing confidence in the ability of southeastern labor and management to swing their full energies behind War Production Chief Donald Nelson's drive for fighting tools, Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, yesterday declared there will be no less determination shown here than is being exhibited in other sections of the country.

Arkwright will preside at a joint labor-management conference scheduled for Monday in Atlanta to speed the national output of planes, ships, guns and tanks. The meeting was called at the request of Nelson.

"Reports from similar meetings held in New York and Boston show these industrial areas have responded with enthusiasm to the Roosevelt-inspired plan of Nelson's office," Arkwright said. "In those spots, labor and management have tossed aside their differences and teamed up for the duration. Men of Dixie will do the same."

Will Open Crusade.

War Production Board officials in Washington said spokesmen at the New York and Boston meetings dealt decisively with suggestions that the production drive might be inspired by anything other than a desire to break production bottlenecks through wholehearted co-operation on the part of management and labor.

WPB representatives who attended these conclaves Wednesday said the conferences were marked by expressions of unanimous determination to increase the production of vital materials. They reported attendance was about equally divided between representatives of labor and management.

The Atlanta conference will open the southeast's crusade for an all-out attempt to meet production quotas demanded by President Roosevelt when he charged Nelson with responsibility for what Roosevelt called "the supreme importance of war production this crucial spring."

Replying the President's quotas "must be topped" Nelson sent invitations to 300 representatives of management and labor in the Atlanta area asking them to assemble here with WPB consultants. Arkwright and Thomas H. Daniel, both from Atlanta, will head the group with John Beckman, of Oklahoma City, and Alexander Kellenbenz, of Philadelphia.

Squabble Mars Chicago Arms Speedup Parley

Labor Resents Advice To Let Management 'Carry the Ball.'

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP)—A meeting sponsored by the War Production Board to accelerate the output of arms in the Chicago area produced heated words today after a speaker declared that management, rather than labor, should "carry the ball" of the speed-up drive.

Vigorous protest from labor leaders followed an assertion by J. C. Aspley, president of Dartnell Publications, Inc., who appeared as a WPB management consultant, that the joint plant committee program involved was "no plan to let labor into management by a side door."

"I would like to see management pick up the ball and run with it," he said. "I'd hate like hell to see labor do it."

To shouts of "Why? Why?" which arose from the floor of the crowded meeting hall, Aspley replied: "Because it is management's responsibility."

Angry retorts came from delegates who claimed use of two floor microphones, both to recite labor grievances and to reply to Aspley.

Chairman Joseph L. Overlock, of the WPB contract distribution branch, and Alexander Kellenbenz, WPB's CIO consultant, repeatedly reminded the gathering that the prime purpose of the meeting was to unify efforts behind the $1,600,000,000 in war contracts in this area.

Robert Travis, of the Illinois state CIO council, expressed regret that "a tone of griping about the past" had entered the meeting. "To clarify the record," he moved indorsement of the WPB drive "without any special advantage for either side." Such a resolution was quickly adopted and the meeting adjourned after sitting for less than two hours. Originally an all-day session had been planned.

Afterward, Aspley said his reference to "carrying the ball" had been misinterpreted, that he intended simply to "stimulate management and not let labor do all the work."

Norman Harris, Indiana Harbor, Ind., representing the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee and among those who replied to Aspley, said the current speed-up program through joint labor-management committees was in fact an adaptation of a plan which CIO's Philip Murray conceived two years ago.

Two specific suggestions came from the conference. One, that war workers be given a symbol of service, will be considered for national application. The other, that established plant bargaining committees constitute the labor representation on the speed-up committees, "with everyone forgetting they represent anyone or anything but the country," was never formally acted upon.

Atlantans Praise Late Miss Berry

Directors of the Child Welfare Association yesterday released resolutions praising Miss Martha Berry, late founder of Berry Schools, Rome, and expressing regret at Miss Berry's death.

"Children of the association have been privileged to participate in the vast benefits of the Berry Schools," the resolution signed by Mrs. John W. Rutland, president, pointed out. "The superb part which the Berry Schools is playing in fitting children to take their places as men and women in the community has been felt by the Child Welfare Association with deep appreciation and happiness."

Francescatti And Goossens Given Ovation

Violinist and Conductor Appear Here in Two Performances.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY.

The Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, commanded by the distinguished British conductor, Eugene Goossens, shared the spotlight last night at the municipal auditorium with Zino Francescatti, the French genius of the violin whose miraculous technique left sophisticated All-Star subscribers frankly wide-eyed.

There was breathless silence during the violinist's playing of the Paganini Concerto (No. 1 in D Major). Conductor Goossens had led his orchestra through Berlioz' "Roman Carnival" overture, allowing the gay, sweeping music so sympathetic an outlet that it appeared the orchestra played with sheer abandon.

Piece de Resistance.

Then, Maestro Goossens soothed them right into Delius' "The Walk to the Paradise Garden," with its lyrical loveliness. And then, again in direct contrast, the leader produced his piece de resistance, Francescatti's brilliant, clean-cut, amazing interpretation of Paganini's showy violin vehicle. If the virtuoso was unbelievably master of his instrument, by the same token, Conductor Goossens is a keen, sensitive commander in chief, with all the tricks of the art at the tip of his baton.

Equally as unusual as was the awed gratitude of last night's audience, was the rapt attention of the members of the Cincinnati orchestra while Francescatti unfolded the wonders of his apparently limitless violinistic magic. He played an encore, after the rafters rang with prolonged clapping. It was "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "God Save the King." But it was something else again.

Unassuming.

He just stood up there on the stage, a slight, dark-haired young man, unassuming and even a little humble in his manner—and he improvised. His left hand did things we have never seen nor heard before, playing an accompaniment while his authoritative bow-hand sang its velvety, sweet-toned melody.

We saw it. We heard it. But we still don't believe it. It was that good. And mind you, the magician from Marsailles says he never took a violin lesson in his life.

The program was culminated with Tschaikowsky's "Symphony No. 4 in F Minor," which an early deadline prevented our hearing.

4,000 Children.

The Cincinnati and Goossens, who reminds us somehow of Robert Benchley, also gave an afternoon performance. They held the attention of some 4,000 children for an hour and made them whistle for more at the finis.

This joyful and rapt attention was due as much to Conductor Goossens' happily selected program as it was to the fact that the Atlanta schools had educated their pupils up to the selections. Also the celebrated leader of the Cincinnati gave brief explanations of each musical number, which reviewed the music for the audience.

Successful Concert.

After delighting his young audience with such programmed numbers as Beethoven's Fifth (the first movement), the charming, melodious Overture from Rossini's "Semiramide," Grieg's "Peer Gynt Suite" excerpts, "Dream Pantomime" from the opera "Hansel and Gretel" and Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice," Goossens encored with "Country Gardens" and took time out to identify each instrument in the orchestra. It was a most successful concert, for which the city is greatly indebted to the Atlanta Music Club.

The Cincinnati and its conductor will return next Thursday to give a performance, at which Alec Templeton will be guest soloist, in behalf of the Music Club's scholarship fund—the Imogene Browder Hatcher Memorial Loan Fund.

East Point's Blackout Given Perfect Rating

State's First Air Raid Warning System Wins High Praise.

East Point held its first test blackout last night, complete with a new system of 14 sirens—the first air raid alarm system to be completed in the state—and Fulton County Air Raid Warden Mike Benton, pronounced it "100 per cent perfect."

The blackout was heralded by sounding of all the sirens at 9:15 o'clock last night and the city was darkened for 15 minutes.

Carlos Hemperley, chief air raid warden for East Point, said 300 air raid wardens, 70 auxiliary police, 60 State Guardsmen, and 40 auxiliary firemen were on duty.

Both trolley and railroad companies co-operated and the only vehicle which moved about the streets during the blackout was the car containing officials who inspected results of the test.

Two Army Planes Found Crashed Into Mountains

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., March 19. (AP)—Two planes in a group of five missing Army basic trainers were found today in the Quail lake region of the Tehachapi mountains. Two unidentified bodies were brought to Minter Field.

All five planes, overdue on a cross-country flight with Minter Field as their destination, were believed to have crashed.

Army authorities said names would not be made public until next of kin had been notified.

Von Papen Is En Route To Visit Hitler at Front

ANKARA, Turkey, March 19.—(AP)—German Ambassador Franz von Papen departed tonight, in defiance of doctor's orders, to report to Adolf Hitler's eastern front headquarters.

He appeared to be in poor health and he was wearing mufflers over his ears.

While under a physician's care he was reported to be suffering from ear trouble as a result of a bomb explosion near him recently in an Ankara boulevard.

He was expected to return to Ankara before the end of the month to attend the opening concert here of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra.

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—Reuters said the Berlin radio was heard today announcing that food rations are to be reduced in Germany beginning April 4.

Move To 'Draft' Hartsfield In Race Reported

Former Mayor Lets Bar Down in Statement on His Plans.

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Former Mayor William B. Hartsfield yesterday appeared as a factor in the forthcoming May 27 special election to select a successor to fill the unexpired term of Roy LeCraw, resigned, to enter active service in the Army.

Hartsfield issued a statement in which he said in effect he does not choose to run, but left the bars down for a movement to draft him for the race.

While speculation regarding Hartsfield's intentions held major interest, other prospective candidates mapped plans with at least two others—Alderman G. Dan Bridges and Councilman Howard Haire—reported about ready to toss their hats into the arena.

Four Qualify.

For days it has been reported from usually authoritative sources that Hartsfield would not be a candidate because of his business connections. At the same time, other reports, equally reliable, were that Hartsfield's friends were ready to put pressure on the former mayor's employes to allow him to make the race.

If the latter plan becomes a reality, Hartsfield would in effect be "drafted" for the service and probably would enter the race.

Hartsfield's statement follows:

"I sincerely appreciate the many requests of friends urging me to make the mayoralty race, but I find myself rather hesitant to sacrifice a law practice to engage in what I know would be another strenuous campaign. It would be a real personal sacrifice, both of time and money.

"I will always feel grateful to the people of Atlanta for having entrusted the affairs of our city to my hands during some of its most trying years.

"I know that with the world at war and the coming of the Bell bomber plant, the next few years are going to bring many grave problems to the city and will require the highest order of ability and patriotism to keep our city on an even keel.

"These things will require the intelligent interest of all good citizens, and I would really prefer to do my part as a citizen in the ranks."

WAR OUTPUT DEBATE.

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced today that the house of commons would have a debate soon on the nation's war production effort which continues to cause misgivings among large sections of the public, press and parliament.

TaxConference Is Proposed by AFL Leaders

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) The American Federation of Labor proposed today a joint conference of representatives of federal, state and local governments with a view to agreement on respective fields of taxation.

"Each level of government should be assured of the exclusive right to the use of certain forms of taxation free from interference by other taxing jurisdictions," the AFL said in a memorandum to congress setting out its views on new federal revenue legislation.

The labor organization referred to the desirability of correlation of federal and other taxes after opposing specifically a federal sales tax on the ground, among others, that many of the state governments now depend on such levies.

In raising new revenue, the AFL said, the federal government should place the heaviest taxes on "surplus income of individuals and corporations."

It recommended an excess profits tax on all corporate earnings above 6 or 7 per cent, higher inheritance and gift taxes, and closing of "loopholes unfairly benefitting small groups of taxpayers."

At the same time, it said taxes should not be made so heavy that "individuals and companies are driven out of business through inability to make a profit," and urged repeal or modification of the capital gains tax, which it said had "led to a sharp reduction in capital available for new venture enterprises."

Other AFL contentions included: Payroll taxes should be confined to social security purposes, individual income tax exemptions should not be lowered, non-war government expenditures should be curtailed.

Before receiving the AFL proposals, the House Ways and Means Committee, studying tax legislation, heard a novel tax idea from Joseph E. Goodbar, New York lawyer.

He suggested the work week be increased fro 40 to 50 hours, with the government taking as income taxes all payments for the additional hours. Under his plan, persons unwilling or unab to work the extra hours would be taxed 25 per cent of their income.

Goodbar contende his scheme would raise $2?,000,000,000 and also vastly increase arms output.

There had been suggestions heretofore that all overtime payments be made in defense bonds. Asked about this idea, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said at a press conferenc that no decision would be made before about July 1.

U. S. Airmen Are Prodded By Grim Will

if only we had had enough planes and bombs. We raided the enemy under the heaviest kind of anti-aircraft fire, but we were determined to smash them this time.

Foiled by Clouds.

"We had previously attempted to batter the Jap fleet with bombs but were foiled by low-hanging clouds which obliterated our targets."

Americans who have become discouraged about the situation in the southwest Pacific would do well to mark these words by a young American pilot. Attacks like that are only routine for them but with even the smallest forces their grim will is leading United States war birds to stunning victories.

Kurtz went to Manila last October and was stationed at Clark Field, then the Army base for heavy bombers. The first Japanese bombing attacks on Clark Field destroyed Kurtz' flying fortress, and killed 12 of his highly specialized crew. Only Kurtz and his navigator, Eddie Oliver, of Smithers, W. Va., managed to escape.

Kurtz was sombre and grim as he related the death of his co-pilot, jovial, fun-loving "Tex" Gary, of San Marcos, Texas.

Initial Attack.

"I was in the operations tent when the first Japanese formations appeared over the mountains west of Clark Field," he said. "Tex and the gang were standing by the ship, preparing for a mission over Formosa (a Japanese island midway between the Philippines and Japan, proper), when the first bombs hit."

(Editor's Note—This is the first indication that the United States Air Corps planned to carry aerial war to Japanese territory in the early days of the Pacific conflict.)

"The co-pilot and crew ran from the plane toward the shelter. Hours later I picked them up where they had fallen. Tex and our mechanic, Sergeant Burgess, were leading the others toward safety when a bomb exploded in their path, killing all of them instantly.

"Only a few hours previously Tex and I were joking over the radio reports of an attack on Pearl Harbor, which sounded greatly exaggerated to us.

Hard To Believe.

"Somehow I couldn't believe that 'my boys' were dead. I just couldn't help talking to those lifeless bodies and telling them that we who were left would revenge them 100 times over.

"The following days were like nightmares. We were operating 24 hours a day on missions that at any other time would be called impossible.

"Major Donald Gibbs, formerly of March Field, Cal., our squadron commander, took off from Clark Field on a secret mission under cover of darkness. We never heard from him again.

"When bombing raids near Clark made operations there untenable, we shifted at night to a new secret base. Even that was soon knocked out by the Japs and since we were anxious to keep our ships in the air—and fighting—we made a strategic withdrawal to Darwin for repairs and much needed rest."

Kurtz was a close friend of Captain Colin P. Kelly and Captain Sam Marett, and a score of other American heroes who have paid for their heroism with their lives.

He told how Kelly perished after his ship was set afire by Japanese pursuit planes. He told how Marett sacrificed his life to sink a big Japanese transport, and how he died when his plane was smashed in the detonation of the transport's powder magazines.

Kurtz and his companions in the Philippines have stories that make your hair stand on end.

For example, he tells about the time his close pal, Lieutenant Boyd "Buzz" Wagner, was sitting around the fortress at Corregidor with a young flight surgeon when Jap bombers passed overhead, pausing to drop a few tokens of their hate. The young flight surgeon paused suddenly in the middle of a sentence and fell over dead, with a tiny piece of shrapnel through his heart.

Even from Darwin, Kurtz and his fellow fliers continued to fight.

"Our orders were to hit back and we carried them out," he said calmly. "We learned quickly that Christmas, New Year's and Sundays meant nothing to the Japanese, so we practiced the same technique.

Holidays Unknown.

"Holidays were unknown things. Our practice was to blast them to bits, but to get back with ourselves and our ships, if at all possible—there were too few of us to waste on empty, heroic gestures."

Kurtz said that the simplest things perked up the fliers. He started daily bulletins, based on short-wave pickups, and later an impromptu newspaper which was thumbed black in a few seconds by the news-hungry pilots who were anxious to hear American reactions to their fight.

They were delighted when Washington sources described them as a "Pacific suicide squadron." Occasional cakes and pies and a few hours off to play cards meant much to these men, who, a short time before, had languished as peace-time aviators.

From Darwin, Kurtz was shifted to Java, but he emerged without a scratch. Discussing operations there, he said:

"Our combined attacks on the Macassar and Tarakan Straits were other grand victories for our boys. For seemingly the first time, the incessant American and Dutch bombings threw the Japanese into complete confusion, probably upsetting their Java invasion timetable for weeks, and giving us more opportunities to keep hitting them."

The air operations in the Java area were on the widest scale in the history of modern warfare, Kurtz declared, with the bombers and fighters ranging great distances from their bases, loaded to capacity and operating on the narrowest margins of safety.

He praised the Dutch air force, which, he said, worked in closest co-operation with the American pilots, and gave the Americans the fullest credit as well as full co-operation. He expressed great admiration for the courage and fortitude of the Dutch.

Kurtz departed from Java in the last flying fortress to leave the beleaguered island. One of his last acts was to telephone his wife, the former Margo Rogers, of Omaha, who is living there with her parents.

He put in the call from Java while the Japanese landing forces were coming ashore on the beach only a few miles from his hotel headquarters. Just an hour before the Japanese took over the town he got aboard the last plane.

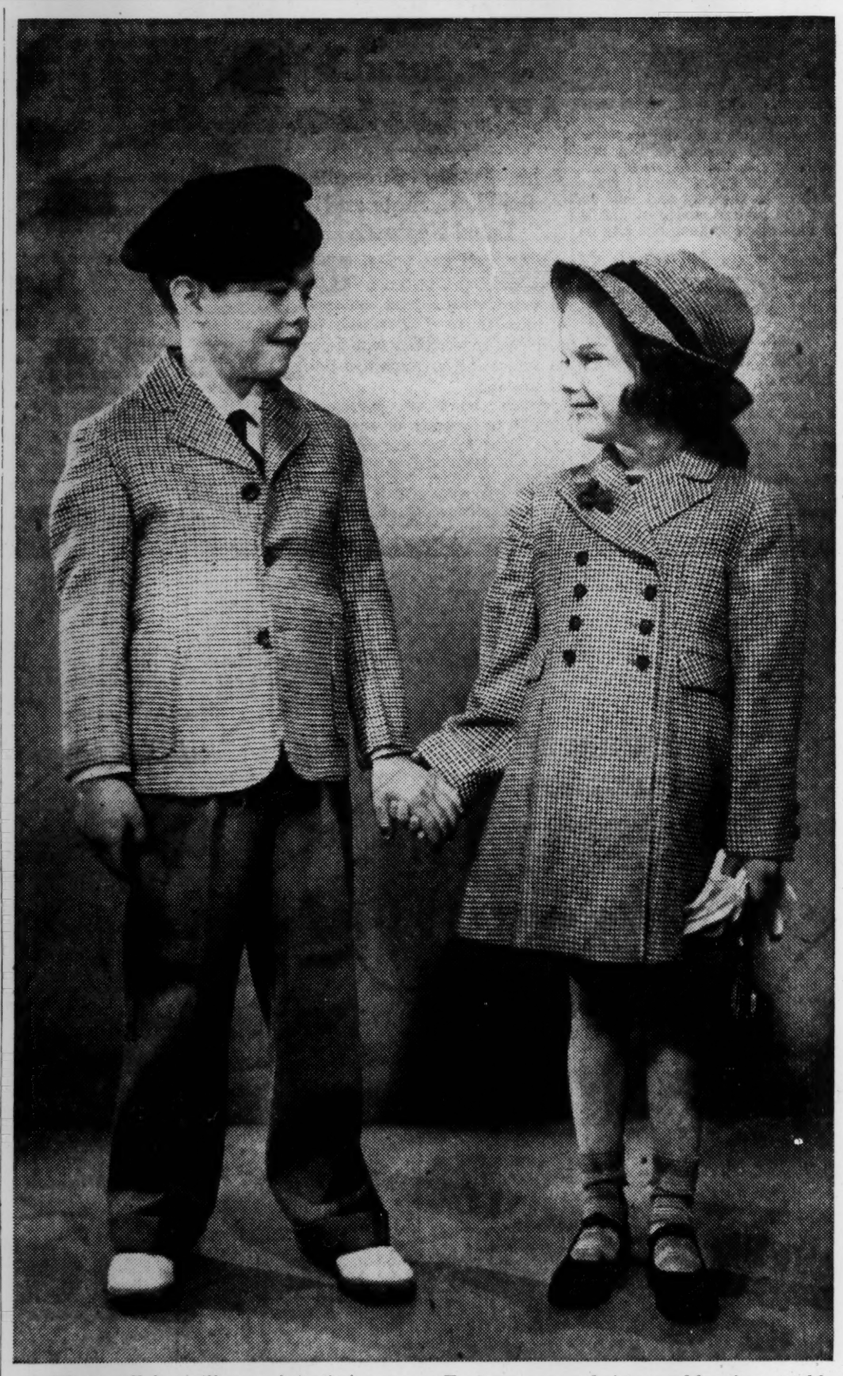

Air force tradition required that he be among the last to go. He recalled the departure smilingly.

Went Out Back Door.

"I went out the back door just as they were coming in for breakfast," he recounted. "Originally four fortresses had been slated to carry Dutch and American personnel to Australia. But during the afternoon Japanese bombers destroyed all of them but one.

"As our party prepared to embark early Monday morning, two Japanese zero (naval) fliers flew over the field. We thought we had used up all our good luck by then—but the Japs just took some pictures and flew hastily off."

The party landed in Australia within a day of the heavy enemy raids on Broome and Wyndham.

The small fry will come into their own on Easter morn, and sister and brother would feel important leading the parade of youth in the companion outfits pictured above. Sister's coat is a lightweight wool in a hound's tooth check featuring a blue and brown combination. Made along princess lines, it has roomy pockets and a pleat in the back. Double-breasted, it has bright blue buttons and a matching blue flower is pinned to the lapel. The fetching hat has a band of blue grosgrain ribbon. The set is $10.98 and is available in sizes 3 through 6x. The navy blue patent leather bag is priced at $1.00 and the white washable rayon gloves may be had in all tots' sizes for 79c. The black patent leather center buckle one-strap slippers are priced at $4.00. Brother's single-breasted sport coat matches sister's and costs $7.98. It also is available in a navy blue and gray combination. His cavalry twill slacks have pleats just like dad's, and may be had in gray or brown to match either coat. The slacks are priced at $4.98. The navy blue gabardine cap is $1.50 and the Eton shirt of white broadcloth comes with a navy blue tie for $1.50. The saddle oxfords, of black and white kid, cost $4.00 and may also be had in brown and white kid. Sally Beattie and Charlie Hartsfield are the models. (If you want to find these articles call Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, WAlnut 6565. Or if you live out of town, write us.)

They are now standing by, eager for another chance at the Japanese. With Kurtz on the exciting dash to join the Aussies were:

Major Kenneth Krepps, of Los Angeles; Captain Pat McIntyre, of Chicago; Major Eddie Broadhurst, of Smithfield, N. C.; Major Bill MacDonald, of Kansas; Captain Jack Adams, of Oklahoma City; Major Cecil Combs, of March Field, Cal.; Major Bert Cosgrove, of Phoenix, Ariz.; Major James (Long Jim) Connelly, of Dallas, Texas.

Enemy Appraised.

Kurtz emphasized that the American fliers did not underrate the power of the Japanese zero navy fighters, or the skill of the enemy pilots.

"They're mighty fine fighters," he conceded.

"But the American pilots are fine, too. They're surprisingly different from the airmen we knew in peacetime. The carefree spirit is gone—replaced by a determination and concentration on the job of winning the war.

"There's no longer much talk about when we will get home."

This war is no Richard Harding Davis adventure for the American pilots in the southwest Pacific. They have seen their closest friends die. They have seen the devastation wrought by the Japanese.

They know the chips are down.

COMPLETES COURSE.

Don't Advertise Your Breakfast!

Keep your new spring ensembles looking new, as crisp and sparkling as the day you bought them! No matter how stylish your attire, you'll have that dowdy look unless every item of your attire is impeccable. You can't possibly be well dressed unless you look fresh as a daisy. Remember, you're the only person in the world who cares what you had for breakfast or lunch, so don't advertise those scrambled eggs or that ham gravy when you go forth to conquer the world! Keep your white things WHITE, with that pristine look of having just come out of protective tissue paper. But don't stop at just those articles that only the outside world sees. Cleanliness begins at home with your linens, and you'll give them longer life if you have them scientifically laundered. Let Atlanta's fine laundries and dry cleaning establishments help keep you and your things looking like they should!

Canadian Girls' Love Letters To Nazi Internes Bared in Trial

ESPANOLA, Ont., March 19.—(AP)—A magistrate's court was told today how five Canadian girls exchanged love letters with German prisoners in a northern Ontario internment camp and how one of them sent a Nazi's letters out of the country and bought a camera for him.

The girls, all aged 15 and 16, pleaded guilty to charges of communicating with the prisoners. Sentences were suspended after they had been reprimanded.

Magistrate E. Arthurs said the girl's action in sending German letters to the United States "may mean the loss of thousands of lives overseas."

Corporal Mack Burger, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, testified the connection between the prisoners and the girls began in February, 1941, when one of the girls smiled at a prisoner at a hockey game and began writing to him.

One girl said she got her first letter from a German through her father, a guard at the camp, and her father delivered her answer and three other letters.

How the prisoners moved with such freedom and how they got letters and a camera in or out of the compound was not explained. However, the girl who bought the camera said she was afraid not to help the prisoners because a guard had told her the Germans would stay in Canada after the war "and would doubly punish us when they got free if we didn't help them."

The girls sent pictures of themselves to the Germans and received lockets and rings in return, it was testified.

Suit in Canada By Coca-Cola Is Dismissed

Pepsi-Cola Held Guiltless of Infringent Charge.

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—The Privy Council Thursday upheld a 1939 judgment of the Canadian supreme court dismissing the Coca-Cola Company's action against the Pepsi-Cola Company in which it charged infringement of its registered trade-mark.

The council ruled the plaintiff should pay the costs of the appeal. It also dismissed, with costs the Pepsi-Cola Company's counter-claim contesting the validity of Coca-Cola's trade-mark after the Pepsi-Cola counsel said the firm did not wish to proceed with the appeal.

The council based its ruling on the finding that "cola is a word in common use in Canada in naming beverages. It is plain that the distinctive feature in this hyphenated word is the first word, Coca, and not Cola."

This action was one of several brought both in the United States and in Canada in which the Coca-Cola Company claimed the sole right to use the name "cola." The action alleged Pepsi-Cola used the word in an attempt to benefit from the advertising and good-will of the Coca-Cola Company.

ANOTHER GEORGIA SUFFERER TELLS HOW POW-O-LIN BROUGHT RELIEF SHE HAD HOPED FOR

"I Felt Achy, Sluggish, Let Down and Everything I Tried To Do Seemed a Burden," Declares Mrs. Shelton. "Pow-o-Lin Was One of the Happiest Surprises of My Life," She States.

MRS. PEARL SHELTON.

From every section of Georgia come grateful endorsements for Pow-o-lin from well-known men and women who have put this purely herbal medicine to the test and report happy relief from distress that robbed them of many of life's pleasures. For instance, Mrs. Pearl Shelton, well-known resident of 1022 Second St., Macon, Ga., declares:

"I would be selfish not to tell others of my happy experience with Pow-o-lin. No matter what I ate, I would suffer for hours afterwards with gas and bloating. The pressure would hurt me, making it seem my breath would cut off. My head ached, spots came before my eyes, and everything I tried to do seemed a burden. I felt so fatigued and let down I didn't feel like dragging myself out of bed when morning came. My nerves felt on edge and I was irritable and jumpy. Food didn't taste right and I ate so little I felt weak and trembly from undernourishment. The toxic wastes of constipation made me feel achy. Strong laxatives upset me and made me feel worse than before taking them. I believe I must have been the most discouraged woman in Macon.

"Pow-o-lin brought me blessed relief from my harrowing distress. I don't have to fear eating what I want, don't have to take harsh laxatives and am relieved of the gas, bloating and misery I had to endure. Pow-o-lin has my everlasting praise. It is the best medicine I ever saw."

Pow-o-lin is a purely herbal preparation for the relief of distress as plagued Mrs. Shelton when due to constipation. Thousands praise it.

Economic Warfare Chief Is Dreamer, Works Like Beaver

By MERWIN H. BROWNE.
North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Here is one practical man who can dream and get results. He has a character of many facets, seemingly contradictory to each other, yet blending to produce a dynamo of energy. His constant drive put him in the hospital last year, but he is back at his desk today, plugging away as tirelessly as ever, his last year's lesson forgotten.

Executive director of the Board of Economic Warfare, Milo Randolph Perkins, who was only 42 last January 28, not only has the all-important task of strangling the Axis economically and finding strategic and critical materials for America's own war effort, but also that of planning to meet the post-war economic impact.

Works Like Beaver.

Milo Perkins—he seems to have dropped the middle "R" in recent months—dreams about how he can help his fellow man. Then he works like a beaver trying to do it. It was this that brought him into close contact with Vice President Wallace when the latter was secretary of agriculture, a friendship which is still ripening. The two have much in common. They are interested in philosophy and religion, have a zeal to lift the underdog and an intense intellectual curiosity. They have even hurled boomerangs in Washington's Potomac park together.

One of Perkins' great passions is using existing machinery for jobs rather than creating untried organizations which may spend a lot of government money needlessly and eventually wind up cluttered with red tape. When he was brought in to head the Board of Economic Warfare, he found immediate use in his organization for segments of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the Tariff Commission and Nelson Rockefeller's Latin-American Committee in the State Department. Each of these organizations is physically part of the Perkins set-up, yet each retains its identity and will be able to function in the battle for post-war economic recovery.

Midwest Background.

Mr. Perkins has the same midwest background as the vice president. He was born in Milwaukee. When his father, a dentist, inherited a ranch near Houston, Texas, in 1917, the family moved there. The ranch did poorly. Young Perkins passed up college, took a job with a wholesale grocer and sold burlap bags as a sideline. He prospered in the burlap bag business and eventually became part owner of his own company. The Houston National Bank tided him over some rough spots and during the first year of the Roosevelt regime his company was worth more than a quarter of a million dollars and Perkins was making twice the salary of a member of congress.

His underlying altruism then exerted itself and a letter he wrote to the then secretary of agriculture, plus some liberal magazine articles, won him a job as assistant to Secretary Wallace at $5,600 a year, just about a quarter of what he had been making. Observers note that through their continued friendship, while Vice President Wallace has been the broad thinker, Perkins has been his man of action.

Food Stamp Aid.

Perkins is probably best known for his work in making the food stamp plan to get rid of agricultural surpluses really work. He discarded the plan of government food depots as totalitarian and arranged for distribution of the food through grocery stores. Before that he worked on marketing agreements and export subsidies, tackled decentralization of industry under the Farm Security Administration, helped with federal housing problems and was more responsible than anyone else for kicking the "plowing under of food philosophy" out the window.

He hasn't forgotten any of the salesman's tricks he learned selling burlap bags back in Texas and he is a good politician as well. He was successful administering the Surplus Marketing Administration, and when the job was given out of providing the United Nations with lend-lease food, Perkins got the assignment. Just about this time he became ill and the plan for an economic warfare board grew from convalescent room discussions with the vice president.

Sometimes Profane.

Milo Perkins is a square-built little man, with dark, graying hair and compelling eyes. He is forceful in his speech, which is often slangy, sometimes profane. His office is in the penthouse of the converted apartment building housing the board. Many of his employes pass him in the hall without recognizing him. He is married, works a 16-hour day and can't get over his habit of eating a cold lunch at his desk.

No one knows how far the economic warfare board will expand. It already has found important war materials for this country; kept them from going to our enemies. Before long armament manufacturers will know how much aluminum, tin, steel, nickel and other important metals they can have and where they will be found.

Red Museum Is Filled With Nazi Trophies

Has Barrels of Iron Crosses That Went Astray.

By ERIC McLOUGHLIN.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

MOSCOW, March 19.—(By Wireless)—Among my latest possessions is an iron cross. It is new with clean white edges as relief against deep black with a swastika engraved in the center. It is suspended from a glistening red, white and black ribbon.

It came out of a barrel in the storehouse of the Red army museum in Moscow. There are many other barrels; but the director of the museum, Colonel Vladimir Ivanovitch Fedyanin, picked it out indiscriminately when I asked him for one as a memento of an afternoon I spent there examining trophies captured from the Germans.

Every one of the iron crosses in these barrels is new because they were designed to decorate the breasts of German soldiers as they strutted across Red square in a parade which was to proclaim to the world the capture of Moscow. The Russians seized them from a train which the Germans abandoned as their defeated armies tried to plow their way through the snow which covered the roads over which they had marched so confidently and triumphantly a short while previously.

A few handfuls of the crosses are scattered about in glass cases in the museum for Russian citizens to examine when they are tired of inspecting the beautiful new uniforms which the Nazis were to wear in this great parade which never took place.

Among the exhibits are the flamboyant uniforms which were to be worn by the no less flamboyant characters who comprise Hitler's Death-Head Battalions. They are smart pieces of suiting even though they proclaim over-ostentatiously the wearer's contempt for death and his general excellence as a killer. Their black material, silver skull and cross bone ornaments are reminiscent of the mode affected a century or two ago by the misguided seafarers who innocently believed that so long as they had a loud mouth and a bloodthirsty manner their depredations would not lead them to the most convenient yardarm.

There is another collection of new uniforms, not so ornamental but tailored in the approved showy style accepted as appropriate for Hitler's "victorious" army. Any youth whose imagination is fired by the pomp and panoply of war but not familiar with its terrors, miseries and degradations, would be pleased to wear one. They have all kinds of nice braid and colorful insignia, including a fierce embroidered eagle.

There is even an impressive trumpet, worthy to appear in the most theatrical procession, and a big drum on which a large black swastika gives the final artistic touch.

As I passed the exhibits, I could not help feeling that the man who arranged them had a satirical turn of mind. They include fine examples of German experience in the art of ersatz, including their answer to the Russian "Valenki"—the big boots which proved so effective in warding off frostbite. This is the first ersatz "Valenki" I have seen, although I have read several articles in Russian newspapers about how the German Armies are trying to combat the tortures of Russian cold. Reading Russian accounts of some of these monstrosities, I was inclined to allow for a certain amount of patriotic enthusiasm. I feel now that their description was restrained. The principal piece in these fantastic examples of footwear is a boot and the wearing of it would test the strength of the strongest man.

I do not know what its weight is, but I would not like to have to carry one more than a few hundred yards in my hands. Two of them would make as bulky a parcel as any single human being could carry.

They are mode with wooden soles, ersatz leather reaching to the ankle and ersatz felt to the middle of the leg. They may or may not be warm, but anyone who had to walk any distance in them would begin to wonder whether the disease was not better than the cure. To anyone accustomed to the light, efficient, protective Russian Valenki; they are laughable.

War Trophies.

Packed within the 13 rooms of the museum and the near-by snow-covered park is a most interesting collection not only of military trophies, but examples of the most modern weapon—propaganda warfare. One of the most striking weapons was a six-barrel mine thrower of 155 millimeter caliber. It looked to me like a circular arrangement of iron chimneys taken from wooden cottages. Russian experts are studying it with consderable interest. It was captured on the Moscow front, but I have not been able to learn whether or not it was effective.

An eight-ton tank within the building itself was driven in under its own power. Near by is a car in which staff paraphernalia such as typewriters, field glasses, cameras and a radio still are scattered around.

The machinegun and submachinegun collection includes a conglomerate array indicating that the Germans do not despise using any weapon. One light machinegun was made in the United States. It bears a plate indicating it was abandoned during World War I. No one knows where it was picked up.

Inspection of captured motorized equipment indicates that the Germans are using 70 different types of vehicles. Twenty-eight of them are in the museum, a French lightweight tank, a transport vehicle with tires marked "made in Sweden," and a Finnish tank bearing the inscription "Vickers Armstrong, New-Castle-on-Tyne, 1939." A heavily armored car for transporting infantry under fire has been nicknamed by the Russians "The Coffin" for a good reson—it looks like one.

RUBBER ERROR CHECKED.

Because a government employe forgot to make an entry in the Cuban commerce ministry's records, 517 rubber tires of a Havana company were seized and the company's directors charged with hoarding and profiteering, before the error was found.

Hysteria Seen As Cause For MuchBlindness

'Alpha Waves' Distinguish Real From Emotional Defects.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(NANA)—The first objective test which will distinguish real from hysterical blindness has just been reported to the American Medical Association.

The differentiation can be made by brain wave patterns, according to experiments described by Dr. Frederick Lemere, of Seattle, Washington.

In many cases of apparent total blindness, opthalmologists are unable to find anything organically wrong with the eyes. Yet it is obvious the victims cannot see. If the eyes themselves actually are normal, such a case requires treatment by a psychiatrist. The person has been stricken blind by some hysterical reaction.

Alpha Waves.

In the past, however, few physicians would have been willing to risk such a diagnosis, even if morally certain it was correct.

Now, Dr. Lemere points out, the most prominent electrical manifestations of the brain are the "alpha waves," which occur at a rate of about eight per second. They can be detected by electrodes placed on the outside of the scalp and easily differentiated from other brain waves.

They are, however, manifestations of the brain at rest. The best time to obtain them is when a person is asleep. The pattern is quite marked, however, when one is relaxed with the eyes closed. The process of seeing requires quite a lot of mental activity. Consequently the alpha waves disappear as soon as the eyes are opened.

Will Excluded.

But if a person is actually blind, Dr. Lemere found, it makes no difference whether the eyes are open or shut. The electrical waves continued in undeviating pattern. They are entirely outside the control of the will. With the eyes open, if they are normal, one cannot help seeing.

So, he says, if the alpha waves continue after the eyes are opened it is convincing evidence there is at least enough vision left to distinguish objects.

One of his cases was a veteran of the last war who claimed total disability because of complete blindness. He kept his eyes tightly shut and wore dark glasses. But when he was instructed to look at a pencil, which he claimed he could not see, the alpha waves stopped. Investigation showed that at home he was engaging regularly in occupations, such as gardening and fishing, which required good eyesight. Betrayed by his brain waves, he lost his compensation.

Blind After Quarrel.

Another case was that of a woman who apparently went totally blind suddenly after a quarrel with her husband. The brain waves showed the case was one of hysteria. She quickly recovered her sight under psychiatric suggestion.

Another case was that of a workman who claimed to have been blinded by electrical flashes. Physicians could find nothing organically wrong with his eyes and thought he was malingering to obtain compensation. The brain waves, however, continued unchanged when his eyes were open. It was decided he actually was blind.

The test, it is expected, will be of considerable value in compensation cases following the present war. A few persons, however, show no alpha waves under any circumstances.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Marietta Mayor Issues Warning On High Rents

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., March 19.—What is described as "excessive and apparently unjustified" increase in rents here, is causing much interest and concern. Mayor L. M. Blair stated today that it would "become the position of the city to prevent unjustified increase in rentals by taxation or regulation." He also pointed out that the federal government will, without doubt, place a rent ceiling if unwarranted increases continue.

Examples of such increases include one instance where a local employe, a tenant in a house for a year and a half, with two sons in the military forces and another in high school, had his rent raised from $20 a month to $50 a month. Another instance concerns an apartment owner who jumped rents from $2.50 to $5 per apartment without any recent improvements. Numerous other instances continue the story. The full text of Mayor Blair's statement is as follows:

"A number of people have approached me on the matter of sudden increases in their rents. Although I have not discussed the matter with the city council, I can roughly outline the position of the city. Our position will be to prevent by taxation or regulation an unjustified increase in rentals.

"Personally, I am of the opinion that in some cases property owners will be authorized to increase rentals. In other cases, from evaluations of property, they are bringing ample rent at present. The city hopes all classes of people will benefit by the location here of the Bell Aircraft Corporation bomber plant. If, however, property owners raise rentals above reasonable bounds, then unquestionably the federal government will step in and place a ceiling on all rentals. The city authorities do not desire that this be done and are of the opinion that if all parties involved handle the matter on a reasonable basis, they can handle their own situation."

27 'Defense' Homes To Be Built at Marietta

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., March 19.—Marietta's first large group of defense homes will get under way when ground is broken Monday for a ne wsubdivision to be known as "Westpark." FHA has approved the site, which will have 27 individual homes. The location is on the old Governor Joe Brown estate, bounded by Walthall, Polk, Cleburne and Maple streets. Transactions were handled by the First National Bank through L. R. Collins. The firm of Blair & Gardner handled the legal aspects of the subdivision.

These homes are scheduled for completion by June 1, and will be modern in every detail, according to Francis Shoupe, partner in the S. and W. Construction Company, of Atlanta. Each home will be individually designed to avoid any tendency toward the monotony frequently found in subdivisions.

'Jaycees' Hear Ramspeck Ask Unity, Loyalty

Lawmaker Again Flays Radio 'Experts' and Column Writers.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of the fifth (Atlanta) congressional district, speaking yesterday before an audience of more than 400 men and women, renewed his appeal for loyalty to the President of the United States and a united war effort by every one.

He was the guest of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at its 22nd anniversary luncheon, held at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Other guests were the "bosses" of the young men of the Junior Chamber, presidents of many other civic organizations, and veterans of the Jaycee organization.

Though it had been announced that Representative Ramspeck would defend his bill providing pensions for federal officeholders and members of congress, he did not enter into a discussion of the measure, which recently was repealed.

"I have not changed my mind as to the merits of this bill," he said, "although I voted for its repeal. But this is no time to bring up a subject that caused internal dissension."

Flays Hitler "Aides."

Ramspeck reiterated his criticism, made in his former addresses this week, of radio commentators and newspaper columnists, who, he said, are helping Hitler and the Japanese by the pessimistic outlook. He was especially censorious of Kaltenborn for his radio talk of March 8 and of political writers who lose no opportunity to criticize the President.

The congressman called for a "moratorium" on all internal conflicts until this war is won. He urged that all else be set aside in the interests of national defense.

Discussing the labor situation, Ramspeck quoted figures to show that war production is not being held up by labor troubles, the percentage of men involved in such disputes being insignificant.

"When production is delayed, it is for lack of materials and equipment, not labor," he said.

The speaker defended the 40-hour week and quoted the great industrial leaders to back his opinion.

Cites French Experience.

"There is no law which says a man can work only 40 hours a week," he said. "It merely demands that he be paid time and a half for overtime. It does not slow down production—it makes production cost more.

"There have been calls for an anti-strike law. That was tried in France before the Germans broke through. It did not work. The men stayed in the plants, but they did not turn out the goods. There was no co-operation. You cannot legislate loyalty and co-operation into labor."

O. C. Hubert, president of the Junior Chamber, presided. Lee Ashcraft, who was president of the senior chamber when the younger body was formed, reviewed briefly the history of its organization. Fred Sington, vice president of the junior chamber, spoke briefly of its purposes.

Deserters Are Indicted In Abingdon Slaying

HARRISONBURG, Va., March 19.—(AP)—A United States district court grand jury today indicted two young Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Army deserters on charges of murder of FBI Agent Hubert J. Treacy in a gun battle at Abingdon last week.

Trial of the men, James Edward Testerman, 22, of Clinchburg, Va., and Charles Lovett, 21, of Philadelphia, was set for April 13 at the Western Virginia district court session in Abingdon.

The soldiers pleaded guilty to the charge when arraigned before a United States commissioner at Bristol last Saturday, the day following the shooting in an Abingdon cafe which resulted in Treacy's death and the serious wounding of Charles Tignor, another FBI agent.

Russia Moves To Cultivate All Idle Land

Factory Workers Begin To Grow Part of Food.

By ERIC McLAUGHLIN.

MOSCOW, March 19.—(NANA) The Soviet government today announced that for the duration of the war collective farmers would be permitted to cultivate land lying idle on other farms and to harvest crops from this land.

This announcement is a notable departure from precedent and one of the many indications here of the importance the government attaches to agricultural production and its determination not to neglect any measure which will assist in building up this production.

Simultaneously with the announcement, newspapers published articles designed to stimulate agricultural efforts of individuals and enterprises so that they can assume responsibility for at least a portion of their own food requirements.

Workers Co-operate.

Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, quoted a letter from factory workers at Saratov in which they said: "We consider that we have all the possibilities to relieve the state of the burden of supplying the workers in our factory with vegetables, potatoes and, to a considerable extent, milk and meat. In wartime we should not depend on supplies from the state."

The letter said that factory workers with land not considered fertile in one year created a farm on which they produced sufficient potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes, cucumbers, onions, carrots, beets and nursery in addition to a number of individual workers. The workers also provided a substantial amount of meat from a herd of 85 pigs and large quantities of milk from six cows.

Producers Paid.

Pravda said this was the first example of achievement since Presidium Chairman Mikhail I. Kalinin's appeal to the nation for increased agricultural production. It added that steps were being taken in all regional Soviets to tap all available sources of food supplies including the individual holdings of farmers and collectives. Producers will be paid for their labor "in kind" and if they have a surplus beyond their own food needs they can sell it for cash or barter it for secondary needs.

To attract farmers to markets in towns and cities, special facilities are to be provided to make the task of disposing of their goods easier. In Moscow, for instance, special steps have been taken to permit farmers to remain overnight at reasonable rates for food and lodgings. Similar arrangements have been made in other cities.

Out of this world are the heavenly pigeon-blue jumper frocks shown above on small sisters, who are dressed as twins. Fashioned of sheer fleur de lis lawn, the jumpers are attached to the barred dimity vestees featuring Peter Pan collars. The sleeves are finished with a braid of yellow-eyed blue violets, matching braid being inset at the waistlines and just above the deep hem. A back sash ties in a crisp, perky bow. They come in sizes 3 to 6 at $4.98 and also may be had in lemon yellow with blue braid. That fragile look is a mirage, for they launder like iron. The off-white roller hats have a contrast ribbon trim with long streamers dripping down the back. Hat sizes are 21 1-2 to 22 and are priced at $2.98. The ensembles are completed by one-strap party slippers of white kid. The same models are available in black patent leather and are priced at $4.98. Sterilized Air May Be Aid in Flu Epidemics

WASHINGTON, March 19. — (NANA)—Sterilization of the air of stores, factories, offices, trains and other places where people are brought together in close proximity may be the long sought protection against epidemics of colds and flu.

When a chemical known as propylene glycol, in the form of a gas, is mixed in proportions of one part to 2,000,000 parts of air virus germs do not survive, it has been determined by Dr. O. H. Robertson and his colleagues at the Douglas Smith Foundation of the University of Chicago.

Successful sterilization of air by means of ultra-violet rays has been reported, but the chemical mixture appears to be a simpler and cheaper procedure. A direct clinical application, however, has not yet been suggested by the Chicago investigators.

Crucial experiments have been carried out by Drs. W. Henle and J. H. Zellat, of the University of Pennsylvania, according to reports to the American Medical Association. Air streams from two atomizers were mixed in a five-liter bottle. One atomizer contained diluted virus, the other either propylene glycol or water. The concentration of the glycol in the mixture was approximately one to 200,000.

Mice Are Exposed.

The virus-glycol mixture was sprayed into a cage containing five white mice. After 45 minutes exposure the mice were removed to individual cages. The death rate, and the degree of lung involvement of the survivors, was determined on the 11th day.

All mice exposed to undiluted virus died between the sixth and 11th days. Half of those exposed to a one to 10 dilution of the same virus with water died before the 11th day and in the survivors there were evidence of advanced lung lesions. With a one to 100 dilution of the virus water none died, although all showed some lung involvement.

Perfect Protection.

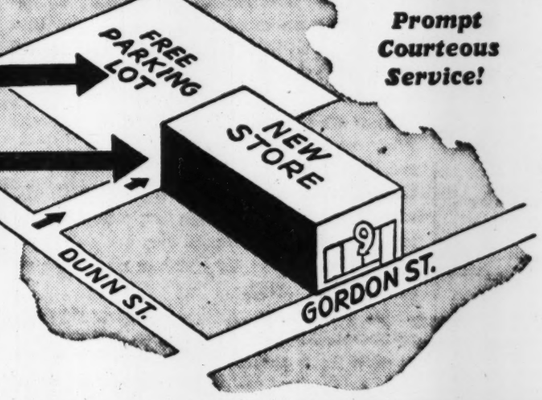

Dr. Robertson and his associates found when the chemical was released in the air in the form of a gas a ration of one part to 2,000,000 would completely protect mice against a concentration of virus which would regularly kill all animals exposed to it inside 10 days. In other words, it was a perfect protection.

Both flu and cold germs belong to the class of filterable viruses, most minute of organisms, against which the various sulfur drugs have little effect. Vaccines have proved indifferently successful. The "bugs" usually are picked up where crowds congregate and where sterilization of the air with the gas would not be unduly expensive.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 20, 1942.

The People Know!

The United States of America have been at war four months and some days.

The people realize the stake.

Does the government? Does the Industrial bloc? Does the farm bloc? Does a bloc in labor? What are they doing?

The government still is selling "Defense" stamps and bonds.

The Industrial bloc is trying to sell its tax program and finding support in a senate bloc which long has lived in the happy land of protecting industrial and commercial profit from the common weal. "Raise the money," this bloc cries, "but get it from someone else! Leave me my profits, for I can't work unless I have that incentive."

Why leave them any profit? Are we playing jacks or are we fighting the greatest war for existence of all history? Do these persons think the people can't see what they're trying to do? Isn't their country profit enough? If it isn't, tax what profits they do make and if they can't work for that, the people will.

The farm bloc—not the farmer plowing his fields—tries to put across its own "to hell with the country" program. And congressmen knuckle down just as another group knuckles down for the industrial profit-grabbing crowd. The President protests. The vice president speaks—in platitudes. Wallace is a farm man. Does he speak up and warn the farmer? No. He assures the country the war will be won. So what? Of course we will, but not until there are a few crack-downs. Is he afraid? The man who so bravely blueprinted a new nation in his speeches only a few years ago?

What is Lewis and his gang trying? New unions—a third labor movement born of thugs and racketeers to hamstring the nation when the crucial moment arrives. Immaturity may explain some of the antics of some labor unions, but not this one. I, Lewis, conquer or ruin.

Petty politics and petty policies bog the country down while the people call for action.

Does Lewis think some dictator will keep him on the throne of the UMW?

The country stews over censorship squabbles—not about censorship, but over the foibles of censors.

The country boils over Office of Civilian Defense boondoggling—not about civilian defense, but over the gyrations of indefensible barnacles.

Experts in the War Production Board resign because of internal squabbles. The pressure groups still can kick out the independent thinker and the do-er in Washington. What kind of business is that?

What we want is some two-fisted gentlemen who will tell people what to do. If they won't do it, then let someone else take over and do it What difference does it make today whether a manufacturer wants to make something or not? Tell him to do it—tell him right—and then see that there is action and plenty of it.

Washington will hear it, because it is a pressure group such as Washington has never before heard.

Let's get action, America!

—ALTOGETHER!—FOR VICTORY!—

Conserve That Tag

There'll be no new shiny automobile license tags for 1943. Nor for any year while the war lasts. The War Production Board has notified states, cities and counties there'll be no steel for the new metal plates for the duration of the war. Only new licenses or plates to replace lost ones will be permitted.

By this means 20,000 tons of sheet steel will be saved each year. That steel will be much more valuable to the nation in the form of battleships or tanks or shells or torpedoes than as license tags on automobiles.

You'll still have to pay your annual auto license fee to the state, but all you'll get in return will be a little metal "date tab" to fix over a corner of your present plate.

So, in addition to the rubber in your tires and the gasoline in your tank—and the car itself—now the motorist will have to exercise due care to conserve his license tag. For there's no telling how long the war will last and, hence, how long that tag will have to do.

—ALTOGETHER!—FOR VICTORY!—

This Is Fine!

Statements by local leaders of the AFL and the CIO that neither labor organization will do anything to interfere or delay the training schools for prospective workers in the Bell bomber plant to be erected here, should be accepted with acclaim by all Atlantans.

There had been some alarm over revelation that some branch of organized labor had caused delay in the acquirement of necessary equipment for these schools. It was believed this delay was due to a looming labor conflict on union jurisdiction over workers in the new plant.

Now we are assured, by Albert W. Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, speaking for the AFL, and by Charles H. Gillman, regional director of the CIO, both will observe a "hands-off" policy in regard to the training schools so long as they are conducted without bias. That they will be so conducted goes without saying.

All that matters is that sufficient workers to operate the bomber plant at full capacity be sufficiently trained to take over the jobs as soon as they are ready to operate. We want bombers, machines to drop death upon our nation's enemies. That is all. We don't care whether the men and women who make those bombers are union members or not. We don't care whether they affiliate with AFL, CIO or neither. We don't care whether they are Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians or whether they belong to no church at all. We don't care whether they are Democrats or Republicans.

All we care about is that they shall be capable for their jobs and that they shall turn out completed bombers, ready to take off from local airports and join the fighting forces of the Allied Nations, as rapidly as possible.

We now have assurance there shall be no delay in the training. All right, let's go ahead and roll the first completed bomber out of the plant at the earliest possible date.

—ALTOGETHER!—FOR VICTORY!—

Relocating Americans

It has become necessary, for the safety of the nation, to permit Army authorities to order evacuation of any essential defense areas by the civilian population.

This is of especial importance in California where, it has been discovered, much property in areas adjacent to vital defense projects has been acquired through purchase by Japanese or other enemy aliens.

It is elementary to require that these be removed to places where they can do no harm to the national defenses.

In addition to enemy aliens, however, considerable numbers of Americans have had to be removed from areas needed for war production or for the defense of the nation.

President Roosevelt has now created a "War Relocation Authority," with the responsibility of finding suitable places where these uprooted civilians, aliens and Americans alike, may find comfort and an opportunity to work for a living, but in locations where sabotage against any feature of the national war effort is impossible.

It is probable that work for these persons will be found chiefly in agricultural pursuits. They would thus contribute to the production of the vast quantities of food stuffs which must be grown as a part of the World War program.

It is, in any event, but just and in accordance with national ideals to provide that no hardship shall fall upon these persons who find themselves homeless and, in many instances, jobless merely because of the turn of fate that made of their home locality a vital war area.

—ALTOGETHER!—FOR VICTORY!—

If taking off the coat will help win the war, that's nothing. We'll turn nudist if it worries Hitler and Hirohito.

—ALTOGETHER!—FOR VICTORY!—

Georgia Editors Say:

HARD TRUTH DRIVEN HOME

(From The Towns County Herald)

Wars are not won with brave words and stirring bands. Wars are won with deeds. Wars are won with production. Wars are won through the full, uncompromising co-operation of government, of labor, of industry and of all the people.

Our war will be won or lost on the home front. Victory depends on whether we can make and deliver the endless quantities of planes and ships and guns and ammunition that our troops and our Allies so sorely need.

Disgraceful labor disputes have cost our military forces untold quantities of weapons—and the lives of many men. Petty officialism has played politics while war rages throughout the world, and slowed production still more. Bogus reformers have hampered and reviled industry at a time when our greatest need was machines and tools, not ideologies.

The people of this nation are now demanding in no uncertain voice that government, industry and labor co-operate so that productive enterprises of this nation—the plane and tank factories, the motor plants, the oil and metal and coal industries, the power plants which motivate the machines of industry—can turn the blueprints of war needs into realities.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

MUCH MISUNDERSTANDING WASHINGTON, March 19. There is a lot of misunderstanding over the country about the labor situation. Too many people are falsely disturbed about it. Letters are pouring into Washington demanding that congress pass legislation doing away with the 40-hour week. The impression exists that there are too many strikes affecting the national war effort.

Whether the agitation has been inspired by professional labor-baiters, congressional oratory, or an organized movement, the results have been the same. It has brought about what President Roosevelt has been called upon to denounce as "the amazing state of public misinformation" on labor.

Any labor disturbances during times of war, of course, are unpardonable. The country resents work stoppages on account of strikes in the same degree it would a breakdown in law enforcement agencies. None of it is to be condoned. Ample machinery has been set up to adjust whatever differences arise over hours of work, pay, or conditions of labor.

But the labor situation throughout the country is and has been (since Pearl Harbor) far better than the public apparently realizes.

Disturbed over this misconception, the President at his most recent conference exploded the fiction that labor troubles are menacing production. His sources of information are more complete than anyone else's in the country, and he declared there is no strike problem because virtually nobody is out on strike.

EXAGGERATED HANDLING Assailing the exaggeration of scattered unauthorized labor stoppages, Mr. Roosevelt cited the action of one of the New York papers in playing up on the front page news of a strike of 15 metal polishers. Handling strike developments in that fashion tends to excite the public and give a false impression of what is going on.

Actually, as the President pointed out, fewer men are out on strike in the United States today than anywhere in the world, with the exception of Germany, where labor is regimented. There is just no basis for all of the agitation. American labor has responded to the needs of the hour as patriotically as any other element in our national life. It may have been a little slow to realize the importance of production before Pearl Harbor. A lot of other people were also. But since then it has delivered the goods.

There simply isn't any justification for the criticism now being made.

THE 40-HOUR WEEK As for the 40-hour week, which many people are demanding be eliminated for the duration, here again a popular misconception prevails. The President said his mailbag persuaded him to believe a lot of people, including some newspaper reporters, needed enlightenment on the subject. Recently he received five letters from newspaper owners asking why workers weren't allowed to work more than 40 hours a week during a time of national emergency.

As a matter of fact, there is absolutely nothing in the law to prevent work in excess of 40 hours. Almost all workers in war industries are now working far more than that. The only federal stipulation on overtime work is payment of overtime rates.

Mr. Roosevelt doesn't want to disturb that because, as he earlier pointed out, it isn't fitting to lower the nation's workers' pay check at a time of rising prices. The nation isn't going broke paying labor time and a half for overtime in excess of 40 hours a week.

THAT DOUBLE TIME There does seem to be a point to the agitation against double rates for Sunday, but the President is of the opinion that the AFL and the CIO will waive that. It could be done without giving up the seventh work day. Staggered shifts, each working six days a week but each with a different day off, would allow seven-day, round-the-clock factory operations and eliminate the necessity for double time on Sundays.

All of the clamor for doing away with the 40-hour week and passage of antistrike legislation is unnecessary. So long as labor is behaving, as it is today, there is no need for it. You can't legislate enthusiasm, anyway.

Tom Girdler, of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, who has had some pretty bitter rows with labor in the past, was quoted last week as saying: "Labor is, with few exceptions, throwing itself unselfishly and wholeheartedly into the job of giving the country an air force."

About the same time, Glenn L. Martin, president of the Martin Aircraft Company, made this statement: "The 40-hour week will not hamper the aircraft industry's production. . . . There has not been a serious labor stoppage since December 7."

These utterances, combined with the President's words, should give the public greater assurance.

SILHOUETTES

And Old Photograph.

My friend Chris Rauschenberg dropped by the office this week with an old group photograph he wanted to show me. Asked me to pick out myself in the crowd, which I did without much difficulty. Though the fellow in the picture was so much younger and really better looking.

It was taken in Columbus, with the gang standing on the steps of the Muscogee Club. The occasion was a convention of insurance agents and officials from all over Georgia. I attended as reporter for The Constitution.

Many of the fellows in that picture are now dead. Naturally. It was taken about 1913 and 1914, I should judge.

I remember that convention and what a remarkably good time we all had.

There was a catfish breakfast at the Muscogee Club, with Muscogee cocktails as appetizers. There was a story told there, not suitable for publication in a home newspaper, but one of the funniest I ever heard. I've told it many, many times since.

There was a dance, one night, at the country club and there was an aftermath to that dance which deserves a new sub-heading.

Guilty Sense Makes Men Vulnerable.

After the dance was over a large proportion of the convention delegates went to the Columbus red light district. They had a regular, regulated, large district in those days.

Of course there were few of the delegates who did anything of which they could have reason to blush. With each house parlor full of fellows who knew them, fellows from the home town, business associates and social acquaintances, they weren't going to overstep the bounds.

So the amusement was pretty generally confined to a few drinks, a little music from the mechanical pianos and a few dances with the gals.

There was, however, a local police officer on duty on the street outside. One of the conventioneers, an Atlantan, got into conversation with the policeman and discovered the officer had a large package of tickets he wanted to sell. They were tickets for the annual police barbecue, benefit the police fund, which was scheduled for a week or so later.

This Atlantan had a brilliant idea in salesmanship. He wanted to help sell those tickets. And he had a plan. He confided his idea to the officer and instructed that worthy in his part of the scheme.

Then the Atlantan went into one of the houses. He picked out an acquaintance in the crowd, drew him to one side and whispered something to this effect:

"Say, old man, there's a policeman outside looking for you. I didn't want him to come barging in here before all this gang and embarrass you. So he promised to wait for you, outside, on my word of honor you'd come out and see him. Surrender, if that's the right word."

Now, no matter how innocent his actions, no man wants the police asking for him in such surroundings. The very word police hints at scandal and trouble and all sorts of unpleasantness.

So the man accosted by the Atlantan, quietly slipped from the house, found the policeman and, in perhaps a quavery voice, asked what was wanted.

When he found out the truth, he was so relieved he promptly paid cash for two or three tickets to that barbecue. At a dollar a ticket.

In the meantime the Atlanta conspirator had chosen another victim. Who, likewise, shelled out for a couple of tickets. And another, and so on. The scheme worked swell, the cop sold practically all his tickets and the police fund benefited enormously. It could have kept going all night, but the Atlantan who was doing the dirty work finally got his memory confused and started tackling some of the guys a second time which gave his game away and ruined the scheme.

They Bring Sadness.

Usually I don't care to come across these old group pictures. For so many of the old friends you see in them have died or met with life tragedy in the intervening years.

Came across one in an old drawer at home. It was taken at a dinner party with all The Constitution crowd present. I think it was Christmastime in 1913. And I don't believe, out of all those in the picture, more than a half dozen are living today.

I remember that party, too. And could tell an interesting story about it. But today's space is used and so it will have to wait for another day.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Tuesday, March 20, 1917:

"Wilson to act on Germany in 48 hours. He will declare state of war exists between Germany and United States."

It is a nice block-square park in the center of downtown Los Angeles. And for some reason it has grown into a place where people congregate and argue in public. It is the Hyde Park of America, except that it's much better than London's Hyde Park.

In Pershing Square people don't get up on soapboxes and make wild speeches. It's more personal than that. They stand in little knots and argue man to man.

I don't know how each individual argument gets started, but I suppose a potential arguer simply walks along, sees some other guy who looks like an arguer, walks up to him and says, "Do you think all inventions are accidents?"

The guy says yes, or possibly no, and they're off. Rapidly a little crowd gathers around. Pretty soon an onlooker will shove in his two cents' worth. And the argument in that one group will flow back and forth among various contestants for hours.

Misused Words If you walk through Pershing Square you'll find the place dotted with these little belligerent groups. It's a circus. I've listened to dozens of them, and as far as I can figure out, nobody knows what he's talking about. In no other place in the world will you hear so many four-dollar words so thoroughly misused as in Pershing square.

For instance, the other day one group, of which I was a member, was arguing on the age of the Chinese people. One well-dressed college fellow said the Chinese were thousands of years old before the Bible was written.

Whereupon a middle-aged man, an Englishman with a broad provincial accent, shook his fist and yelled, "Naow sir! The Chinese flustrated that lie. If you don't believe it go to the library and read the historicals."

The thing that has amazed me most about the Pershing Square thinkers is that the war hasn't changed their arguments at all. One afternoon I stopped past a dozen different groups. Not a one was discussing the war. They were still arguing the same old subjects and they've been screaming at each other about for years —Socialism and God.

Change in Attitude People tell me that the attitude of the public toward Filipinos has changed radically. Heretofore Filipinos in southern California have been treated worse than Negroes. But now they're being treated with respect.

I have a very dear friend here who is a Filipino. He is a steward on a crack Southern Pacific train between here and San Francisco. So I asked him about this change.

He says it is true. The public is bending over backward to be nice to Filipinos. It's easy now for a Filipino to get a job. And he says the travelers whom he serves are practically gushy. They give him long speeches of praise as though he personally were just back from Bataan after wiping out a few hundred Japs. So goes the world.

A friend of mine who teaches in a grade school and has a lot of Japanese pupils tells a funny incident.

Previously all her students had thoroughly unpronounceable Japanese names. But the morning after Pearl Harbor all the little Japanese girls showed up with American first names, such as Mary, Carol and Virginia. But the most popular name of all, that morning after Pearl Harbor, was Eleanor.

Tramp Prophet You know that story about the tramp hitchhiker predicting the war would be over in July. Well, he is apparently a ubiquitous tramp. He is everywhere.

Letters have rolled in from every corner of the country saying the same tramp with the same story had been through there. Sometimes it was two gypsies instead, but otherwise the story was always the same. The earliest report of it seems to have been heard about three months ago.

A friend has suggested that I try to trace the yarn down to its beginning, but I amagine the entire FBI could never run down its source. Many people say the story circulated during the last war, both here and in Europe.

Most letter-writers seem to feel that it's a form of fifth-column propaganda, planted by the enemy to lessen our war efforts. I'm so dumb it never occurred to me there was anything insidious about it. But I guess no harm was done in repeating it. Everybody in America apparently had heard it before I did anyway.

Around Laguna Beach there is a movement to organize deer hunters into a band of guerrillas to fight the Japanese when and if they try to invade California.

The story was published in the papers, and mail has been coming in from all over southern California. One enthusiastic hunter wrote, "I'm not a crack shot, but I always get the meat." Apparently he just slips up and strangles his deer—and his Japs.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

TRUNK MURDER Trunk murders, I think, usually are discovered in the spring. Indeed, to the old-time newspaperman, a trunk murder was a sort of harbinger of spring. There was just no explanation of it. They were like the robins. I recall that the very first newspaper story of any magnitude on which I worked as a police reporter was a trunk murder. The young lady had lived some years in Nashville, Tenn., where I was doing my first newspaper work. She had been a waitress in a restaurant. Someone shipped her to Detroit in a trunk.

I recall that when the Associated Press dispatch came in disclosing the young lady to have been a Nashville girl, that Mr. James G. Stahlman, my city editor, was profane and urgent over the telephone. A Nashville address had been found on the young lady.

Out in the hall of the police station were several bicycles recovered from thieves and awaiting their owners. I took one of them, wheeled it out, mounted and went hurrying to the address which was a mile from the police station. I learned, that long ago, not to call a taxi when in a hurry.

At the address a blowsy, fluttery woman with hands like ZaSu Pitts gave me some kodak pictures of the young lady—all she had, indeed. She also contributed some kindly words about the young lady.

As I prepared to mount my stolen bicycle, the reporter from the rival paper got out of a taxi. I had all the pictures and I was new on the job. He, too, was profane. We later got to be good friends.

This was not, however, what I had on my mind.

SOMEWHAT SYMBOLIC It seems to me trunk murders are symbolic. You may, for instance, take Truth by the throat. She will not be silent. She will gurgle and fight. Indeed, if you loosen your grip she will scream.

Still, you may squeeze Truth's neck until she is still. You may then stuff her into a trunk. It may be a gaudy trunk. It may be a magazine with gaudy colors, done by the best artists. Or, it may be a book. Or it may be a newspaper article. Or a radio speech.

But one day someone comes along and finds the trunk and lifts off the lid and steps back horrified, saying:

"Here is Truth murdered. And what a brutal job it was! And how odd it was someone did not find this murder before now."

Then, there always is a hue and a cry.

The Versailles Treaty, although it had some good aspects, nevertheless was a sort of trunk murder. With the war done, the cynical Clemenceau and George stuffed Truth into a figurative trunk and slammed down the lid.

There were peculiar odors smelled for a good many years. It was not until the lid was thrown open that we all realized how very bad a job had been done. There was Truth, and also reality, bludgeoned to death.

There are all sorts of trunk murders. Indeed, we carry it into many small things. We think if we can just slam down the lid, all will be well. There may be an odor or so, but the lid does it.

That is, until the lid is raised.

It is well to remember, though, that Truth never dies without a struggle. If you take Truth by the throat she will scream. And even after you have closed the lid to the trunk, you cannot be sure that someone won't lift up the lid.

DON'T SLAM THE LID One of the things that worries me today is the number of persons who are so anxious to slam the lids on so many varied trunks in which lie some mangled, hastily murdered problems.

There are trunk murders uncovered after every war effort.

There are those who want to slam the lid on the corpse of the 40-hour week and they don't care what happens to it or what the truth is, just so the lid can be slammed. It's got to be changed. But we don't need a trunk murder.

I wish I could be so sure about things as all the wrathful gentlemen with their hands on trunk lids, shouting for someone to hurry up and stuff the victim into the trunk.

The 40-hour week isn't enough work hours, but people already are working more hours. The truth is, we already are producing more than we can ship. But not more than we need. There are shortages. Production isn't in gear. There are shortages and overlapping authorities and agencies. War does that at the start.

We can work out the problem of more work hours in a sensible, realistic manner without jumping in with some hasty legislation which will be wrong in many respects and which will have to be amended after a great deal of bitterness. There are no defense strikes at present and there isn't any wisdom in listening to those red-faced men with their hands on trunk lids. Some day we'll have to lift the lid.

We've got to work more hours and produce more goods.

But whatever we work out has got to touch all points of the problem and not just one.

That's a good thing to remember.

There is no use having a trunk murder and having to lift the lid later on.

Worth of Winning vs. Cost of Losing

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Big shots in Washington, scolding "the people" for being apathetic, but aiming their words chiefly at union workers, tell us with tactful under-emphasis: "America can lose the war."

The awful truth is that America IS losing the war, and there is nothing little people can do about it except look on in helpless rage.

The big shots are running things. And they know full well we are losing. They say with complete truth that our chief problem is one of production—to make enough weapons and build enough ships to carry them.

They know, too, that we are failing to produce.

In 1918, when America was awake and organized, 89 of every 1,000 Americans were engaged in war work.

Now, when the job is infinitely bigger and our very lives depend upon doing it with the utmost speed—when we know that this year may seal our fate forever—the latest reported figures show that less than half as many are doing war work. And these are limited by law to 40 hours a week. We are saving our "social gains" by inviting slavery.

Do you realize what losing will mean? Do you know what it will do to us?

The Japs would take the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska, and divide control of the Panama Canal with Hitler, thus holding us bound and strangled.

They would take all of our fighting ships, our arms, our planes and our machines and tools used to make weapons.

They would divide our gold and silver hoard with Hitler, leaving us bankrupt, buried in debt and our money worthless.

They would require us to deliver, in years to come, vast quantities of steel and oil and food.

They would quarter soldiers in our cities to insure compliance with their demands. And they would require us to treat our conquerors as superiors or suffer awful punishment.

These are minimum terms; and what Hitler would require of us, only Satan himself can imagine.

It isn't a pleasant thing to think about, but we've got to think about it until the dread of it prompts us to double and treble our effort to produce weapons and ships—not next year, but now. We are wastings time—machines are standing idle—and the penalty for wasted time is defeat.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

"We mustn't spread rumors nowadays, Son, especially like the one you started about my being able to lick Tommy Jones' father."

Dudley Glass

If you know Major Meigs Frost, of N'yawleen and points north, east, west and south—and if you haven't you've missed something—persuade him to tell you about a nightmare of a night he once spent in western Louisiana. That is, if you have an hour to spare.

I enjoyed it especially because I know the town and the house and several of the dramatis personae, as they say on the programs of Shakespearean plays. The major not only tells it but acts it. It sounds like a fantasy by Edgar Allan Poe except it's creepier.

I'm not going to spoil his story by attempting to condense it. But I just must hint at a few highlights.

Major Frost was a Marine in World War I. His regular job was on a New Orleans newspaper. When there was fighting going on, Meigs Frost was there. In peacetime, he was a reporter or editor or what he preferred back in New Orleans. He is stationed in Atlanta as public relations director for the Marine Corps.

In this instance, several years back, he and a AP man covered a long-drawn-out trial of a man and a woman for murder—and afterward covered the changing. Not feeling any too well. Nobody does after witnessing a hanging.

Then, about 2 a. m. they were invited to visit a friend in this house in a near-by town. I know the house—a famous landmark of the 'Cajan region.

It was a story of a drunken host, a guest on the verge of delirium tremens, a gigantic Negro major domo with a knife as long as a saber, a yellow-eyed cat and a rainbow-hued macaw—the cat on one shoulder of the host, the macaw on the other. And a storm and before-dawn alarms.

But you'd better ask Major Frost to tell it. It's a Boris Karloff scarer.

Juke Boxes Banned

What's a juke box? If you don't know you're lucky.

A juke box is a huge phonograph. Its habitat is a cheap restaurant or a roadhouse. It contains a large number of records, some bad, some worse. And all loud.

To operate a juke box you look over the list of records, drop a nickel in the slot and wait for the record to climb into place and start whirling. Watching the records change is interesting. After it starts spinning is the time to go away from there.

A study of juke boxes in Atlanta and various points in Georgia reveals that public preference is for hillbilly music, sung through the nose.

It is futile to imagine you can consume your hamburger amid peace and quiet by refraining to drop a nickel in the slot. Somebody else will. If nobody fancies music with his food the proprietor will generously emerge from behind the counter and drop in a slug, just to get things started.

In the more modern resorts you needn't get up and go to the machine. Beside your table is a contraption with the records listed and you can pick yours right there and drop your nickel without rising from your chair. I don't know what happens when Brown, at Table 3, makes a try for "Frankie and Johnny" at the same moment Robinson, at Table 9, yearns for "My Mammie Done Tole Me."

It is possible that juke boxes now in service may wear out before this war is over and cannot be replaced. But perhaps that is an unreasonable hope. In the meantime, I shall purchase my hot dogs over the counter and go outside and sit on the curb to eat them. No curbstone juke boxes have yet been installed, and the new restriction relieves all fear of that.

With or Without

Another tire story—or are they tiresome? Well, anyway—

Insurance adjuster told me this one. He was called to inspect and settle for a wrecked car. It was a mass—or mess—of junk. But it wore four good tires.

To close up the transaction he asked for bids on the wreck. The top one was $50 for the junk, without tires, or $150, with the tires. Which meant a hundred bucks for fou. used tires which sold at around $18 each when new.

"I accepted the bid," the insurance man said. "I'd have bid those tires in for myself—except they wouldn't fit my car."

Canned goods of today may appear in glass tomorrow instead of tin. Which is right up my alley. I never can locate the household can opener—but you can bust a glass container against the edge of the sink.

Popular science item explains two ways to make a needle float on water—just in case anyone desires to make a needle float on water.

Fellow told me about a pal of his who woke up the other morning with a terrific hangover. He just couldn't face a day at the office. So he mustered his courage and called up his boss.

"I'm not going to give you any fairy stories, Chief," he said. "The truth is I went to a party last night and took on more than my capacity and feel like I'd been run through a wring. I'd surely like to have the day off."

"Why, certainly, John," said his boss. "Take the day off and rest up. Today is Sunday."

"Bill" writes in the Albany Herald about two amateur bicyclists who were heard bragging about the mileage they made. The winner said he got four miles to the gallon—of sweat.

Memphi To Fill Old Cisterns for Emergency

MEMPHIS, March 19.—(AP)—Twenty old underground cisterns, built in Memphis between 1860 and 1880 to collect rainwater, will be put in good shape and filled for possible emergency use, Mayor Walter Chandler announced today.

"Our idea is to repair those that need repairing and then fill all of them with water," Chandler said. "In the event of an air raid, or some other emergency which might blow up a water main in the business area, we could use these cisterns to get water for putting out a fire."

The cisterns, all in the downtown business area, have an average capacity of about 40,000 gallons, he said.

The Pulse of the Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

SUNDAY ORDINANCES IMPOSED BY MINORITY

Editor, Constitution: The writer wishes to commend your editorial deploring the fact that local ordinances requiring Sunday rest are hindering the war program. You do not, however, mention the fact that these particular religious ordinances reflect the views, not of a majority of the citizenship, but of an extremely small minority, for which reason they should not only be left unenforced, but still better, be repealed in toto, along with the similar state blue laws.

We should bear in mind that there are a number of varying views concerning the weekly rest day.

First, there are, both within and outside of the numerous religious groups, innumerable citizens who believe the old biblical Sabbath was completely abrogated and who think they find scriptural confirmation of their position.

Again, there are those who hold the theory that while the Sabbath as an institution was not done away, its spirit and intent is fully complied with if we keep any one of the days of the week as a rest day.

Then there are those who profess to believe that the old Sabbath of Scripture, specifically designated as the seventh day of the week and not the first day of the week, is still the unchanged Sabbath and binding upon all Christians. Many of these believe that the command to work on the other six days, which necessarily includes Sunday, is as binding as the command to rest on the seventh day.

And finally there are those who profess other religions than Christianity, or even none at all, whose rights under the laws of the land cannot be denied.

Moreover, the constitution of our land as well as the bills-of-rights of our states definitely guarantee religious freedom and deny the authority to legislate on religious matters.

In view of these facts, and the great need for output of equipments and materials for defense and aggressive victory, why should a small minority of many decades ago who succeded in writing upon the statutes of our cities and states, religious tenets for which no religious or other grounds can be shown, be allowed now to impose their rules upon a majority, and at a time when our very freedom as a nation and as individuals is at stake?

NAVY RECRUIT SERVICE THANKS CONSTITUTION.

Editor, Constitution: For some time I have intended writing and thanking you personally for the fine co-operation you and your good paper have given to the Recruiting Service of the United States Navy.

I am constantly reminded of your tireless efforts. It is effort, energy and ability like yours, from all sections of the state, that have given the state of Georgia first place, in the per capita enlistments, for the entire United States. It is your constant publicity that has made this great task easier.

We, of the recruiting service, who in many instances, are working day and night to keep up with the tremendous Naval expansion program, will be calling on you for a continuation of your good work. In turn, if there is any way that we can better co-operate with you in serving the people of your community in this national emergency, it will be our pleasure to do so. STANLEY A. JONES.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

I WONDER

Sometimes I wonder if I have any sense at all. Ever feel that way? Fully convinced that I know very little at best, I try always to be slow to disagree with my neighbor, whether it be on the question of the right time of the moon to plant beans, the right direction of the wind to catch fish, or what to do about the upset conditions in the war-torn world.

Even so, I can't bring myself to disagreement with so many of our honored and trusted leaders who appear to be devoting all their time to post-war plans, with the world on fire. I grant the wisdom of trying to win the peace as well as the war, remembering how tragically we fumbled the ball after the last World War; but I do believe that our first task, right now, is to win the war.

I have just finished reading about the meeting at Delaware, Ohio, last week, called by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, "to plan the program for a just and durable peace after World War II." Bishop Ivan Lee Holt says: "It was the most distinguished American church gathering I have seen in 30 years of conference-going." There were 375 appointed representatives of 30-odd denominations in attendance. The sessions were held at Ohio Wesleyan University.

"Ultimately a world government of delegated powers.

"Complete abandonment of United States isolationism.

"Strong immediate limitations on national sovereignty.

"International control of all armies and navies.

"Worldwide freedom of immigration."

"Progressive elimination of all tariff and quota restrictions on world trade."

"Autonomy for all subject and colonial peoples, with much better treatment for Negroes in the United States."

"A democratically controlled international bank."

Here's my question: What good will all these high-sounding phrases be if we lose the war? Suppose it should turn out that we do not make the peace? Wouldn't it be wiser to pitch in right now and make a few first downs before spending so much time and money in planning the nightshirt parade?

I repeat, sometimes I wonder if I have any sense at all. Ever feel that way?

Scents Delayed! Mother Nature BalksGovernor

Crabapples Just Won't Blossom When They Are Transplanted.

The Governor's plans to perfume the state capitol and the executive mansion with the sweet scents of crabapple blossoms have run into a little difficulty with Old Mother Nature.

It seems crabapple trees just won't blossom right after being transplanted. And what's more, they'll shed whatever blossoms they have when they are moved.

In explaining this yesterday, State Entomologist J. H. Girardeau said if a crabapple tree is five or six years old when transplanted, it may blossom the next year. But even then you can't be sure.

The best time to transplant them, regardless of age, is as early as December, when they are still dormant, he said.

The Governor directed the entomology department Monday to set out four crabapple trees on the capitol lawns and six on the lawn of the executive mansion, together with some sweet shrubs.

He said he wanted to leave things smelling sweet when he left, but he didn't say when that would be.

Stop Sniping Churchill Lady Astor Demands

PLYMOUTH, England, March 19.—(AP)—Lady Astor, who has not hesitated to speak out against Prime Minister Churchill and his ministers in the past, declared today that parliament should "stop sniping" so he can run Britain's part of the war without the threat of another governmental crisis.

The American-born member of parliament who was one of the more vocal members of a parliamentary group which forced the prime minister to make his recent cabinet changes, said the reorganization was what the country wanted—"to keep the prime minister and change the government . . . and now we should leave him alone."

Hitler Abandons 'Intuition,' Recalls Fired Generals

BERN, Switzerland, March 19.—(AP)—Confronted by a critical new situation in Russia and threatened with the possibility of an Allied second front against Germany, Hitler has abandoned his "intuition" and called back nearly all the high-ranking generals he dismissed during the winter, German dispatches indicated today.

The Fuehrer apparently has become convinced now that he cannot direct his war alone, as he tried to do in December, when he personally supplanted Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch as commander-in-chief.

Von Brauchitsch and other keen military men who quit or were fired when the German army's march on Moscow collapsed early last winter now have been called back to Berlin to map a gigantic offensive expected to be launched soon on the Russian front, said a Berlin dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Basel National Zeitung.

Others named are Field Marshals Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt and Fedor von Bock, both among those who left their commands in reported disfavor. Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, who remained in command in Africa throughout the winter campaign, also was reported called to Berlin to take part in the planning parleys.

First Job.

The generals' first job is to turn the tide of the desperate fighting on the Russian front—to lay down a superlative strategy of "new and surprising methods," as one paper put it—by which the German defense and counterattack tactics can be turned into the big spring offensive Hitler seeks.

The second job is to work out a broader detailed plan for the spring and summer which, if the Russian fighting permits, the Nazi army is expected to apply in Africa and throughout the Mediterranean area.

The third task is to advise on the best method of guarding against the opening of a second front by the Allies, a subject much discussed in German news columns recently. This may account for Stockholm press dispatches reporting a movement of stronger Nazi troop detachments into Norway and Denmark.

Von Brauchitsch is back in Berlin, officially still convalescent but available for staff consultations. Rommel came to Berlin to talk over strategy, and his absence from his African post for the past several weeks may account for the comparative lack of activity there.

Other Officers.

Other officers, taking their old positions on the eastern front, have gone to Hitler's headquarters to discuss the future campaign, the Basel National Zeitung's Berlin correspondent reported.

These men are thus reported called back at prob bly the most critical period since the Russians started the push-back of the German army earlier in the winter. The Germans in the past few days have slowed, but have not stopped the Russians.

In the present situation, Nazi units up to the strength of a division are cut off from the main body of troops and now are behind the Russian lines.

The Germans hope that these units can break through in attacks from the Russian rear when an offensive is possible thus becoming an important element in the battle strategy. Right now, however, they must be fed and equipped from the air, and their position could easily become critical.

Winter Comes Back.

The weather, after turning warm suddenly, has resumed its winter aspect, seriously hindering plans for spring, German newspapers acknowledged.

Foreign military observers felt at the beginning of February that the Germans had entered a critical period which would determine Nazi ability to wage an effective spring warfare. The Russians did not recapture Smolensk that month, which many observers felt was one requirement for successfully disrupting the German plans.

Nevertheless, continued discussion in the German press of new hardships, along with Russian claims of continued successes, would indicate a sharp setback. One expert section of foreign military opinion, for instance, believes that a German offensive in Russia may now not be possible before the middle of May.

Earthquake Recorded By Chicago Seismograph

CHICAGO, March 19.—(AP)—An earthquake of rather severe intensity was recorded today on the seismograph of the University of Chicago. It began at 7:06 a. m., central war time, and reached its peak at 7:15.

Dr. Helmut Landsberg, associate professor of meteorology, in charge of the station, estimated the center of the disturbance as being 2,200 miles from Chicago.

BRITISH CONVOY ATTACKED.

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—A British convoy was attacked by Axis planes today off the southern coast of Portugal, dispatches from Lisbon reported. Three British planes were seen in combat with enemy planes and one machine, unidentified, was seen to fall.

The cosmopolitan distinction of the suit shown above is achieved by subtle lines and exquisite detail. It expresses the feminine elegance always noted in the clothes worn by women of experienced taste. It is fashioned of 100% virgin wool in a lightweight and beautiful weave. The epaulet shoulders have a draped line, effected by narrow bands of the material cut to follow the natural slant of the shoulder. The beautifully cut skirt is softly pleated across the front. The stunning, tulip-shaped pin is finished in bright gold, the flowers being formed by dark red, single stones. The suit is priced at $69 50. The frothy blouse is made of sheer white batiste and dainty lace and costs $4.98. The just-right hat is a small sailor of navy blue baku, the brim being trimmed with navy blue felt scallops. The pompons also are felt, and the soft veiling is matching navy blue. $22.50 is the price of the hat. The large bag of soft navy blue leather has an unusual shape and is priced at $15.00. The ensemble is completed by washable white doeskin gloves priced at $3.50. Mrs. Lillian Robertson is the model. (If you want to find these articles call Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, WAlnut 6565. Or if you live out of town, write us.)

'Mouthpiece' For Nazis Asks End of Trials

Dropping of War Guilt Hearings Sought by De Brinon.

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), March 19.—(AP)—Fernand de Brinon, Vichy's envoy to the German authorities in Paris, has recommended to Marshal Petain that the Riom trial of French war leaders be dropped, German dispatches from Vichy said tonight.

(De Brinon usually conveys the German view to Vichy. The Germans, including Hitler, contend that the Riom trial is based on the wrong charges, that the real offense was going to war against Germany, not unpreparedness for war.)

De Brinon, the dispatches said, urged "that it would be better to put an end to the Riom trial, since the trial, as conducted at present, is detrimental to the interests of France, particularly to the interests of the occupied zone."

(This might mean an indirect threat of more rigorous German control as punishment for therelative independence of the Riom court and the views, distasteful to the Germans, expressed by the accused and witnesses.)

De Brinon also discussed with Petain the employment of French workers in German industry.

Elmon C. Barel Is Dead at 51

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Evelyn Burel; two sons, Lloyd and Raymond Burel; a sister, Mrs. B. H. Sloan; four brothers, L. M. Burel, of Decatur; E. H. Burel, of Hartwell; T. N. Burel, of Milledgeville, and A. J. Burel.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Duncan's Creek church, Gwinnett county, with burial in the churchyard.

'Gloomy Dean' Laments in Book

While Dean Inge, the "Gloomy Dean," laments in a new book published in London, he is taken sharply to task by a cheery canon. The dean is now 80 years old; the canon 84. "Like most old men whose lives have been prolonged beyond the Psalmist's span," writes Dean Inge, "I wish that my call to rest had come before the outbreak of this hideous and suicidal war." Canon Poole, Vicar of Christ church, Hartlepool, in a speech referring to the dean's book, said: "I am in my 84th year, and I am glad to be alive and not to have missed the war. I think possibly he might have altered his point of view if he had looked around a bit."

Funeral in Marietta For Mrs. Sarah Gober

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., March 19.—Private funeral services were held Wednesday from the residence of Dr. and Mrs. William Mayes Gober for Mrs. Sarah Athlean Gober, wife of the late William Mayes Gober Sr. Mrs. Sarah Gober died Tuesday night at the home of her son. The Rev. B. C. Gamble officiated. Interment was in the city cemetery.

Surviving Mrs. Gober are five daughters, Mrs. N. B. Browne, Mrs. W. H. Steele, Mrs. A. G. Conoley, of Atlanta; Miss Alice Gober, Miss Gladys Gober, of Marietta; two sons, Dr. William Mayes Gober, of Marietta, and Mr. T. A. Gober, of Clarkston.

Unit Is Formed To Aid Crippled Children

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 19.—(AP)—Elton E. Wright is president of the Coastal Empire district unit of the Crippled Children's League of Georgia, formed here yesterday "to foster the discovery, treatment, education, rehabilitation and employment of crippled and disabled persons."

Alabama Youth Killed In Moore Field Crash

MOORE FIELD, Texas, March 19.—(AP)—Aviation Cadet Cecil Richardson, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Richardson, of Kinston, Ala., was killed instantly late last night when a plane crashed east of here during a routine night training flight.

It was the first fatal crash at this Rio Grande Valley field since training started in February.

Richardson was a graduate of the University of Alabama.

Farm Labor Shortage Reported in Hancock

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

SPARTA, Ga., March 19.—Hancock county farmers, faced with the most acute labor shortage ever seen in this section, are getting a late start with their crops on account of the recent rains. Some have decided to use tractors so as to overcome the shortage of labor and hope to make a success of it.

Sawmills are taking much of the labor.

ADVICE GIVEN ON TAXES.

Free advice on income taxes is being provided in England for members of trade unions and workers' organizations because of the large number now paying their first income taxes. The service is being given at London offices of the Inland Revenue Staff Federation.

Man Who Escaped Twice Is Paroled

A parole for a prisoner convicted in Fulton county and sentenced in 1931 to serve four to five years was received yesterday and for a time it looked as if the convict, Jerry Robinson, had served six years too many.

But a telephone call to the State Prison and Parole Commission cleared it all up. It appeared Robinson had escaped in 1931 and had been recaptured, and that he escaped again in 1933 and had not been recaptured until 1940.

Paroles were issued for Tom George, sentenced in 1939 to serve 10 to 20 years, and George Ray, sentenced in 1933 to life imprisonment.

Inventor, Alien Enemy, Free in Army Custody

Gunmaker Holds Rights to Manufacture of Oerlikon Gun.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) Antoine Gazda, 47, an inventor and munitions salesman, has been released from Ellis Island, where he was held as an enemy alien, the Justice Department said today.

He was released in custody of the Army.

Describing the case as unique, a Justice Department spokesman said the Army had requested the action because of Gazda's activities as a gunmaker and because his inventions were regarded as important to the war effort.

It was pointed out that Gazda's case had not been passed on finally. The enemy control unit still must adopt one of three courses for Gazda:

Order him interned for the duration, paroled, or released. In the meantime his status is merely that of being in the Army's custody.

Gazda, an Austrian, was taken into custody by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in New York December 9. He had come to this country a year ago. He is said to hold exclusive manufacturing rights here of the rapid-firing Oerlikon gun, developed in Switzerland.

Contracts for these guns are understood to be on order in this country, to be manufactured in several places.

Gazda was described as the inventor of numerous other weapons and accessories.

Unload Freight Quicker, I. C. C. Official Urges

More promptness in unloading freight cars was urged by Colonel J. M. Johnson, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, at yesterday's luncheon of the Southeast Shippers' Advisory Board.

More co-operation with the railroads, he said, would materially assist in furthering the country's war effort.

E. R. Oliver, vice president of the Southern Railway, described what his road and others had done to speed transport of war materials. Other speakers were C. R. Cunningham, of Atlanta, whose subject was "Textiles," and W. B. Jester, also of Atlanta, who spoke on "Peanuts."

Ray McCaffrey, of Birmingham, was elected general chairman; J. T. Hiers, of Wilmington, N. C., vice chairman; and Ted Maurer, of Jacksonville, general secretary. T. R. Blackmarr, of Atlanta, was re-elected field secretary.

A flip of the dial and your Easter shopping chores are done! With her, with him, the teen-ager and the small fry in mind, we've scoured the town for distinctive items combining eye and pocketbook-appeal. Too, we kept our Sherlock Holmes eye open for articles in which to array yourself, your husband, or to give as welcome Easter gifts.

1. Fresh as your Easter bonnet, subtle as your eye-shadow and wickedly distracting is the new perfume especially created to beguile your best beau or catch you a new one! Its teasing odor will tantalize his senses and keep him bemused. The little crystal barrel of a bottle comes packaged in a glossy black box over which fragile, white-winged butterflies skip vivaciously. The lighter eau de cologne nestles in a white box etched with black butterflies. The perfume is priced $1.50 the dram, $3.75 to $12.50 for the special package; the eau de cologne, $1.25 to $2.25.

2. No matter how smart your ensemble, how just-right your hat, you can't march in the Easter parade with sureness and poise unless you're conscious of being dressed up from the inside out. Nothing gives a woman that subtle sense of elegance like the feel of pure silk. So, to wear under your finery we chose a frothy, feminine slip trimmed with alencon lace in a rich, creamy shade. Cut to fit the graceful lines of your figure, there'll be nary a wrinkle to cause bulges in strange places. Your dress or suit will fit like it should. It's lace-trimmed bodice and lace straps are designed to be seen through the sheerest blouse. And its lace-finished hem won't embarrass you if perchance a naughty breeze should lift up your skirt. It is available in white, eggshell, tearose and black. A slip for those special occasions it comes in a wide range of sizes and is priced at $5.98.

3. Sassy as a jaybird, blithe as spring, and just right for the young teener is the adorable white straw beanie and matching bag we discovered. Flat felt flowers in red, yellow and blue encircle the beanie, a spray of matching flowers decorating a corner of the roomy, under-arm zipper bag. Similar sets are available in other colors and styles for the very small fry as well as the teeners. One in particular is a saucy brimmed hat, with tiny bouquets of flowers encircling the crown. The sets are priced at $3.98.

4. If your husband grumbles that he WON'T give up his lunch hours to search for a new hat to wear Easter, give him the grand one we found, or place this paragraph on his breakfast plate. Tall or short, fat or thin, round-faced, long-faced, young or old, can wear this hat with true masculine confidence. It's a versatile light-weight hat trimmed with a narrow band and binding of contrasting color. It can be worn three different ways—with a center crease and brim up (if he wants to look like Big Business); the crown creased into a raised telescope and the brim snapped (if he likes to be casual or is given over to wearing sport coats), and, lastly, it can be creased into a triangular block pinched in front and the brim snapped (if he's the average man who likes to keep his hat shaped for general all-around wear). Suitable for spring and summer wear, it comes in sky gray, sand, air blue, dune and carribou gray. It's his for $7.50.

5. Imagnie owning a $4,500 bracelet! Just the thought leaves us slightly dizzy! You can have an exquisite copy of one for $24.75, and unless you told no one would ever guess you weren't wearing the original. Its appeal lies in the fact that its design is most unusual and that it has the appearance of having been handed down to you by your great-grandmother. It's what we call good taste. The links (about an inch wide) are keystone-shaped with a black onyx background outlined in gold fill. Each link is skillfully etched with yellow, green and pink gold to fashion a delicate leaf design. You'll never grow tired of its loveliness, you'll cherish it for years to come, and you'll hand it down as a prized heirloom.

6. A pair of white gloves has always been the symbol of true feminine elegance. Always smart, they lend a dressy air to the simplest costume. Let them be a high note in the symphony of your Easter ensemble. There are gloves and gloves, but the ones we chose wash and wash and wash, keep that new look and wear like mad. Fashioned of glove silk in a gauntlet style, it comes in your favorite four-button length. Decidedly a dress glove, it is embroidered with tiny white roses. The sizes range from 6 to 8, and they also may be had in navy blue and black for those more conservative moments. They are priced at $1.00.

7. If you want your husband to look like a bank president or a wily financier, tell him about the handsome suit we discovered for him to wear in the Easter parade. It's a Shetland suit that will do wonders for him even if he already looks like Apollo. The single-breasted, three-button coat has natural shoulder lines, notched lapels, center vent and a slight body trace. The coat has the new, long length advocated by leading tailors. This style can be had in twill, herringbone and pebble weaves. They come in a variety of tan, blue and gray shades. An extra pair of contrasting pants is also available. The one that appealed the most to our feminine eye is a tan herringbone with a touch of blue. It's priced at $35.00.

8. We discovered a darling pump for the growing girl whose foot is difficult to fit. She'll adore its cut-out toe, its perky bow. A little circular fringed tongue gives it a jaunty air, and tiny perforations decorate the vamp. The heel is just the right height for her. It is available in black patent leather, beige and white kid and the sizes range from 3½ to 8. Its cost is $3.49.

9. Flatter your legs when you step out on Easter. Cover them with nylon hose as sheer as mist, so diaphanous that they feel like air to the touch. After Easter put them away and bring them out only for that very special occasion, for it won't be long before you'll be wearing cotton ones for everyday. The pair that caused us to sigh with unbridled yearning is a 20-denier (slightly sheerer than a regulation two-thread silk). It is obtainable in nearly all sizes and its colors are Dixiana and Cla-tan, all-round shades that look well with almost any color costume. They are priced at $2.50.

10. The most important Him in your life will make you proud to claim him if he struts in the Easter parade wearing one of the new heather tone shirts that come with ties to match in dulcet tones of blue, tan and green. They give the effect of a solid color at a distance, although close inspection reveals a resemblance to a herringbone weave. Since the tie is made of the same material as the shirt, it has the same washable qualities. Sure to be popular, let Him be among the first to introduce it. $1.95 is the price.

11. Pure romanticism in a miniature hat box! One of your favorite perfumeries had you in mind when they distilled two new and delectable fragrances, one for the occasion when you want to be flower-like and fragile and the other for you to use when you want to give the impression of sophistication. A smart idea, for a woman's moods are ever variable. Both fragrances, attractively bottled, come nestled inside the clever little hat box, which has a blue-gray background with white pin-stripes. It is tied with a perky bow of cerise ribbon and a spray of valley lilies. The flower fragrance is especially suitable for wear on Easter morn, for its scent is nostalgically redolent of the familiar lily we associate with the day. Subtly hint to Him that it would make a wonderful Easter gift for only $2.75. It's so new that it isn't even displayed in the stores yet, but he can order it for you now, or buy it in a day or two.

12. Elegant touch to give his attire that air of studied carelessness that is the ultimate achievement of every male who likes to look like the last word (even though he refuses to admit it) is a matched tie and handkerchief with that desirable silky sheen. The one that caught our eye has a blue background with a design of lighter blue and white circles, although it is available in green and cocoa-brown. He can match his eyes or his suit, whichever he prefers. The set is $1.50.

13. Your young Miss will walk on air in the beautiful white kid pump we chose for her to wear with her Easter dress. It has the proper low heel, and that dressy look that she insists on for party and special occasion wear. Tiny perforations on vamp and instep, a perky perforated bow and tongue give it style. The same model comes in black patent leather and is available in sizes from 12 to 3 at $1.98.

14. Here's good news for you smaller women who complain that you have difficulty finding your size, because it comes under the heading of "junior." For you we found a beautiful light-weight woolen coat in a pastel California plaid with a belted back and soft tie front. It boasts patch pockets and leather buttons and the very newest shoulder treatment. The flared skirt has a deep pleat in the back. This particular one is priced at $8.98, and other colors and styles range from $7.98 through $13.00 in sizes from 9 through 17.

By JOHN A. HETHERINGTON
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

CAIRO, March 19.—The desert front from which I have just returned is still quiet and there is no indication of immediate renewal of heavy fighting there.

Some idea of the uneventfulness of daily life in the war area at present may be gained from the fact that a Libyan village still stands in the middle of the 25-mile-wide no-man's land separating the Allied and Axis front lines. The villagers with typical Libyan indifference to the danger of injury if the battle should develop just flatly refuse to move out and they go about their affairs as though the war was a thousand miles away from them instead of literally on their doorsteps.

The South Africans who go out on daily armored car patrols, sometimes supplement their desert rations by dropping into the village and buying eggs from the villagers. These Libyans profess strong pro-Ally sympathies but it is shrewdly suspected that they sell eggs with equal enthusiasm to the German patrols which come out into no-man's land.

General Erwin Rommel's visit to Rome might be the prelude to more vigorous action by the Axis forces in the near future. It is reported here that Rommel is completing arrangements which will give him supreme command over all Germans and Italians in Libya. In other words, Rommel officially will hold the position which he occupied for all practical purposes ever since he arrived in Libya.

Rommel's task in Libya is not particularly enviable. He faces a solid British line. Observers who have seen it think this line gives him no chance of breaking through by means of his familiar tactics. He might alternatively try to turn the Allies' flank but he knows this would bring his German Panzers and Italian mobile forces to grips with British armored strength.

It is not unlikely that any new German push in Libya would be timed to coincide with a possible Axis thrust towards Syria and Palestine through Turkey. But the resoluteness of any future enemy moves in the Middle East must largely be governed by events on the Russian front. It seems unlikely that the Nazis will be able to divert any considerable forces from Russia for many months, if at all.

One branch in which Rommel has had fairly substantial reinforcements is in the air but the Royal Air Force still holds superiority. There is an occasional strafing raid on the British lines but generally the Axis troops are suffering far more severely from air attacks than Allied soldiers. British squadrons have taken advantage of the recent lull to have their aircraft reconditioned after their gruelling campaign and with the return of these temporarily immobilized planes to the battle front the Allies definitely are on top in the air.

You simply must splurge yourself to a bit of elegant nonsense this spring, either to wear on the lapel of your suit, at a saucy angle on a dark frock, like the one pictured, or to carry in your purse. Shown above are five new gadgets, four of them lapel pins and one a compact, that will bounce your spirits into a new high. Seen at top right is a saucy owl, who'll make YOU blink when you see him! He has an emerald body, ruby eyes, head, wings and tail of rhinestones, and is perched upon a sapphire twig. He's priced at $6.60, tax included. Capricious as a spring zephyr and utterly mad is the lively young colt of shining gold, his mane and tail set with rhinestones. His front hoofs play havoc to a bed of pearl and green enamel posies and in his mouth he holds a pink and green enamel rose. He costs $2.50, including tax. An ingenious lapel watch is attached to a fan-tailed tropical fish of oven-baked enamel in natural colors. His eyes and mouth are garnets and his gills and swirling tail are inset with rhinestones. The sterling silver watch has a 17-jewel movement. The price is $32.50. You'll go all-out for the new blackout compact. Fun to own, it's a gay "converastion piece" that you can talk about in difficult moments, instead of the weather. Gold finished, it's pastel enamel top is decorated with a flower motif that glows in the dark! It holds a generous amount of loose powder and the puff is large enough to be really useful. It costs about $4. Deep-sea denizens come off the wall of the den onto your lapel this spring, the one pictured above being a baked enamel sailfish in shades of blue, with gills and tail set with sparkling rhinestones. His price is $5.50, tax included. The frock modeled above is described elsewhere. (If you want to find any of the articles mentioned, telephone Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, Walnut 6565, or write her if you live out of town.)

Sato's Russian Job Similar to Kurusu'sInU.S.

By PERTINAX.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The appointment of Naotake Sato as Japanese ambassador to Moscow bears comparison to the mission on which, last October, Saburo Kurusu was sent to the United States. It may be taken as the portent of a conflict.

Sato at one time was the rising star of Japanese diplomacy. He successively served in Brussels, Warsaw and Paris. A broad-minded man, thoroughly liberal and moderate, he headed the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations in 1932 and the task of defending the Japanese general's action of Manchuria fell upon his shoulders pending Yosuke Matsuoka's arrival. In general, he did what he could to patch up some compromise. The military clique consistently hated him.

In 1937, while in Paris, he did not conceal from his friends that he thoroughly disapproved of the anti-comintern pact concluded in November, 1936. He was speedily placed on the retired list.

Called Weakling.

The promoters of a forward policy labeled him a weakling, for whom they had no use under their plans of imperialist expansion. To some degree their feelings were the same relation to Kurusu, who, although he had appended his signature to the axis tripartite pact of September, 1940, was wont to tell some of his colleagues of the diplomatic body in Berlin that he did not see eye to eye with the Tokyo government about that instrument.

Kurusu had to report to Washington last fall to carry out there the instructions of the Japanese rulers. Similarly Sato was persuaded the other day to replace Lieutenant General Yoshitsuga Tatekawa, a soldier of questionable ability in international affairs.

Explanation Simple.

What is the explanation at the back of those moves? A very simple one. Japan is being urged by the Nazi government to participate in the offensive which the latter proposes to launch on Soviet Russia. In accordance with her common practice she intends to lull Stalin and his advisers into a false sense of security so as to strike all the more deadly blows at her own selected moment. At any rate, a true sign that Japanese policy is not to be conducted in Moscow on lines very different from those marked by the will of the army can be detected in the designation of Goro Morishima as counsellor to the newly appoited ambassador.

Morishima is one of the army men in the diplomatic service. While in charge of an important consulate in China he was the passive servant of the military leaders and those military leaders are sure to have a hand in the shaping of the policy to be followed toward Russia, not to say more. In Moscow Morishima will be, indeed, a kind of political commissar. He will keep close watch on the ambassador and, if necessary, compel him to toe the line.

True Bulwark.

The Japanese are pushing further and further in the Pacific area. The strategic zone once described as the A.B.D.A. (American, British, Dutch, Australian) command is now in ruins. The United Nations are shifting their resistance to India and Australia. But a growing number of competent observers are agreed that the Russian front will prove this year the true bulwark of the Allies. In that zone the odds against the Axis are much greater than anywhere else.

For the spring offensive in Russia, if authoritative sources are to be believed, not more than 15 armored divisions are available to the Reichswehr, and the elite of the troops trained to mechanized warfare has probably been wiped out in the long campaign of attrition, which still goes. That fact accounts for the Nazi call to Japan and also for Russia's call to her partners.

Bread Supply To Be Fortified ByNew Vitamin

'Niacin' New Name for Objectionable 'Nicotinic' Acid.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Henceforth American bread will be fortified with "niacin".

A special committee of the Food and nutrition Board of the National Research Council has adopted this name for the anti-pellagra vitamin to replace the objectionable "nicotinic acid" which threatened for a time seriously to disrupt the government's better foods program.

The term "tobacco bread" was being spread widely over the country. In some rural communities it was believed firmly, according to reports reaching the council, that it was proposed to mix tobacco juice with flour.

"Nicotine" suggested tobacco. It is well known that this alkaloid is a deadly poison, widely used to poison insects on garden plants.

"Nicotinic Acid."

Now the vitamin known as "nicotinic acid", it is explained by the American Medical Association, first was produced in the laboratory in 1867 by a very complex chemical treatment of nicotine, which resulted in a product bearing very little relation to the original alkaloid. At that time nobody realized it ever would be used as a food. For more than 70 years it remained a laboratory curiosity. Hence the unfortunate name.

"Although nicotinic acid first was produced from nicotine," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, "and although even now a small proportion of this substance is being produced commercially in this manner, the implication that tobacco is contained in the enriched bread is far from true. Most of the nicotinic acid is produced as a coal tar derivitive. Although nicotine is a toxic substance, nicotinic acid is a vitamin essential to life."

Objection to Name.

The widespread objection to "tobacco bread" caused a lot of worry to some of the nation's foremost vitamin experts. It was hard, however, to pick another name which would not give a false idea of the substance.

The new name has been selected by Dr. C. A. Elvehjem, of the University of Wisconsin, who first discovered the identity of the laboratory curiosity with the elusive substance in food which prevented palagra; Dr. W. H. Sebrell, nutrition expert of the Public Health Service; and Dr. Tom D. Spies, of the Univeristy of Alabama, foremost experimenter with the substance in treatment of pellagra victims.

The new name, comments the Journal of the American Medical Association, also gets rid of the unfortuate term "acid" which, to the general public, "denotes a corrosive substance such as the liquid used in automobile storage batteries."

The objection to the old term, which will be retained for strictly scientific use, has been most pronounced in parts of the south where it has come near wrecking the nutrition program.

OTTAWA, March 19.—(Canadian Press.)—The wartime prices and trade board announced today it has permitted farm machinery companies in Canada to make minor adjustments in their prices for certain types of machinery but has not allowed adjustment upward to the full extent of the increases put into effect in the United States for similar machines.

Woman Labor Said Boon To Aircraft Plant

Solution To Shortages by Draft Believed Found on Coast.

By HAROLD KEEN.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March [illegible].—Hiring of women in numbers undreamed of six months ago may provide the solution harassed aircraft plant executives are seeking to the problem of a stabilized labor supply. This is being dramatically illustrated here in the nation's "hottest" defense spot, where 1,500 newcomers are flocking every week for an industrial pot of gold.

Because mere employment in an aircraft plant is not considered grounds for deferment by selective service officials, employment managers here already are hesitating to hire men under 28. Recent draft registration of men in the 20-44 age group has made vulnerable to plucking by the armed forces almost the entire male pay roll of such giant plants as Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, where a majority of the tens of thousands of workers are youngsters with little more than a year's experience.

Unless the employer can prove, every six months, that the worker is indispensable, he has to hunt a replacement. And this fear of a constant turnover, harmful to production, is causing a reorientation of attitude toward women workers. A few months ago, the hiring of women by Consolidated was looked upon here as an experiment or dubious value. Today it is considered an ever-growing necessity, and 80 per cent of the pre-employment training for positions in the aircraft industry here is being given to women.

Deft Hands Required.

Large-scale use of women in assembly line operations has its advocate in Tom Girdler, the hard-bitten Republic Steel Company head who has taken the reins at Consolidated for the duration.

"A woman is less inclined to become bored with the monotonous routine of the assembly line," he comments. "And she's usually more proficient in certain painstaking jobs, such as electrical assemblies, where deftness of hands is required."

Defense training educators believe that any retooling of the aircraft industry with mass production as its goal should take into consideration the inevitable employment of large numbers of women.

"Tool designers must begin thinking of machinery in terms of the ability of women to operate them," declared Thomas A. Watson, supervisor of the University of California's tool engineering defense training program recently established in San Diego for the aircraft industry.

"Pay rolls in such defense centers as San Diego, where the reservoir of manpower has been virtually exhausted, can be enlarged today without importing labor from outside. Production can be increased by hiring women already residing in the community."

This is of particular significance to cities like San Diego, where the aircraft industry estimates it will need at least 32,000 more workers by October to add to its present total of 51,000.

Housing Problem Solved.

Municipalities already overburdened with terrific problems of housing, water supply, sanitation, and traffic caused by an influx of thousands of defense workers depend on the employment of women residents for a partial solution.

That was the motive behind Consolidated's policy of restricting women applicants to wives or relatives of men already employed in the plant. The rule has been liberalized, but still operates to block a large hegira of women jobseekers from outside the city.

The pre-war prejudice against both husband and wife holding full-time jobs has broken down completely in today's stress. Families that a year or two ago were struggling to keep off the relief rolls are earning a combined husband-wife income approaching $100 weekly in San Diego, where Consolidated workers compile some of the biggest overtime records in the industry in work weeks ranging up to 63 hours.

Before going all-out on employment for women, Southern California's aircraft manufacturers have insisted that the state law setting a 48-hour ceiling on the female work week be suspended for the war.

Can Do All Jobs.

Plant efficiency, they argue, is impeded when work shifts of men and women are of different durations, though they perform the same tasks.

Among the most remarkable aspects of the changing employment picture in the vital aircraft industry is that without a struggle California women have established their right to pay rates equal to that of men. The work they are performing today in aircraft plants was at one time considered exclusive male property. Hitherto restricted to such typical feminine occupations as sewing of fabric for wings, the fair sex now has gone into defense work with a vengeance. Today you'll find women sheet metal workers, stock clerks, riveters, welders, and inspectors.

And soon the nation will hear of draftswomen, as well as draftsmen. Training of college women to take positions in engineering drafting rooms already has begun in Southern California.

Injured Soldiers Get New Legs

New limbs for soldiers are being turned out by the commonwealth artificial limb factories of Australia. The first factory was established in Melbourne during the last war and proved a great boon to sadly maimed men. Artificial limbs in those days were comparatively crude. The English article was cumbersome, a completed leg weighed 14 pounds. Commonwealth factories have reduced the weight to six pounds. The federal government employed Clive Aunger, a New Yorker, an authority on artificial limbs, to give the factory a start. Australia has 27 men who were fitted with artificial limbs after having both legs amputated. In Melbourne a returned soldier does well with artificial arms operated by pulleys set in motion from the shoulders.

Whether you have a few suitcases or many items of furniture to be removed, you can find somebody for the job by turning to Classification 84 — "Moving and Storage."

Nation's Cows Are Faced With Boost in Milk

WASHINGTON, March [illegible].—(NANA)—The nation's 26,000,000 cows must produce 125,000,000,000 pounds of milk—nearly 62,000,000,000 quarts—this year.

This is necessary to provide the American people with the customary amounts of milk, butter and cheese and at the same time maintain shipments to Europe. It means a 5 per cent increase over 1941.

Can the cows do it? A crucial experiment, extending over three years, which gives an affirmative answer to this question, has just been completed by the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Husbandry. Approximately 400 cows in 10 states—South Dakota, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, New York, Maryland, Virginia and Mississippi—were studied.

Each cow was considered as a milk-making machine. Her job was to turn grain, grass and silage into milk. The experimental animals were divided into six groups. One was fed approximately the same rations as 40 per cent of the milch animals in the United States. Other groups were fed progressively larger amounts until a point was reached where their appetites failed. If they ate any more they became ill.

The Department of Agriculture experts found there was a progressive increase in milk production with the amount of feed, up to the maximum. The animals provided with all they could eat yielded approximately half as much again more than those fed on the lowest level.

It also was determined, says T. E. Woodward, who was in charge of the experiments for the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, that a cow herself is a very good judge of how much she can eat. Once she gets sick she is not apt to make a hog of herself again. The milk-making machine has a semiautomatic shutoff in the animal's own nervous system.

The increase, it was found, is progressively less as the food is increased above the median ration. Eventually the economic problem supersedes the physiological and the dairy owner's problem is to balance the cost of extra grain against the price of the extra milk. This varies with market conditions through the year.

For the present, Mr. Woodward and his colleagues believe, the best solution is to increase the amount of silage and the quality of the pasturage which can be accomplished with increased fertilization before the growing season is well under way. Pasture grass is cheaper than corn.

An enormous increase in milk production might be brought about with improvement of herds, but this is hardly a practical solution during the emergency. The average American cow produces about seven quarts a day for 10 months of the year. The best 25 per cent of the animals in improved herds give nearly 14 quarts a day.

It is recognized, however, that for the time being the country must make the best of the kind of cows it has—and the only way is to feed them better.

The Business Opportunity column in the Want Ads of The Constitution furnishes a fertile field for small investment and profitable effort.

THERE'S A New Spirit IN THE EASTER PARADE

Never his head so proud as now . . .
Stars and bars and gold braid on it.
This year a woman must somehow wear her heart upon her bonnet . . .

There's a new tilt to our chins . . . a new lilt in our walk . . . as we step out on Easter inspection this year. For this—of all our Springtimes—cannot come and go unnoticed.

The usual seasonal tributes take on brave new significance. Gay Easter bonnets and festive frocks become our individual thumbsnap to tyranny, reflecting the indomitable spirit of a great, free people.

We will look our best. And, beneath flower corsages, our hearts will stir to a resolute new tempo . . . echoing drum beats from the distance . . . keeping time with those who march on far-flung fronts.

And deep within us there will burn the steady conviction that ours shall be the ways of victory and . . . after victory, lasting peace.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Templeton To Renew Friendships Here

• • • WHEN ALEC TEMPLETON, the famous pianist and composer, appears here in concert next week, he and his charming wife will renew their friendship with Mrs. John B. Suttles. They met several years ago in Kansas City at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Snyder, their mutual friends, and have kept in touch with each other ever since. Mrs. Suttles and her daughter, Mrs. Jamie Roberts, of Rome, will entertain at luncheon on March 25 in compliment to Mrs. Templeton, the important affair to take place at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Blond and stunning-looking Mrs. Templeton accompanies her distinguished husband wherever he goes. They reach Atlanta late tomorrow evening and will spend Sunday in the city. Bright and early Monday morning they depart for Clemson, S. C., where Mr. Templeton gives a concert Monday evening. They will return to Atlanta Tuesday.

In her recent letter to Mrs. Suttles, Mrs. Templeton wrote that she had much to talk about and is eager to get to Atlanta. You may recall that Mr. Templeton was scheduled to give his concert here last winter, but when the auditorium caught on fire, the concert necessarily was postponed.

• • • INTERESTING news of Ruth Hinman Carter's activities in New York continues to reach Sally's keen ears. The popular Atlantan has been spending the past several weeks in the metropolis, and her friends here will be delighted to know that she expects to return home the latter part of next week.

Ruth's stay in New York has been (and is) a kaleidoscope of editors, publishers, the Metropolitan opera, theaters, night clubs and cocktail parties. Among the interesting social activities she has enjoyed were lunching with Gertrude Wixon, editor of the New York Journal's "Smart Set," as guest of the New York Women's Advertising Club; tea with Elinor Hillyer, a former Atlantan who is now an editor of House and Garden; cocktails in the charming apartment of Grace Bangs, manager of the Club Service Bureau for the New York Herald Tribune; visits with Nina Hansell MacDonald, Eleanor Boykin, the Harry Hansens, and many others whose names are familiar to Atlantans.

Grace Bangs' apartment is in Sutton Place, overlooking the East river, for she loves the water. She elected to read "Gone With the Wind" while vacationing in Bermuda, and says that her first act on returning to New York was to go out and stand in front of the gilded statue of Sherman and voice her indignation that such an outrage should have been allowed. She doubled up her fists and shook them at the statue:

"To think that the people of New York actually erected a statue to you! With a shining gilt angel in front! It is outrageous!"

She had passed the statue for years without giving it a thought!

MR. AND MRS. ALEC TtempleTON.

• • • CHARMING courtesy to fifth district clubwomen is the informal cocktail party which Mildred Seydell has planned for their guest, Senorita Minerva Bernardino, on next Wednesday. The affair will be held in Mildred's "celebrity den" at her home on Pace's Ferry road.

Senorita Bernardino, who is a delegate from the Dominican Republic, will come to Atlanta to address the fifth district convention next Wednesday. Invited to meet her are Mrs. Chester Martin, fifth district president; Mrs. W. L. Thomason, and Mrs. P. J. McGovern. Mildred, as you know, is president of the Atlanta Federation of Clubwomen.

• • • DO YOU KNOW? . . . That a well-known matron bought an extra rubber girdle and has stored it away in her safety deposit vault at the bank? . . . That Jane Noland is on the dean's list at Stephens College for outstanding achievement in academic work? . . . That one of the most attractive members of the sub-deb set is going to marry a handsome young medical student and will announce her engagement on Easter Sunday? . . . That Margaret Harmon and Virginia Dulaney, who were among feted debutantes last season, are taking Spanish lessons twice a week? . . . That Ben Osbun, who is with the U. S. Air Corps, is now stationed in Denver, and that Irving Gresham is on the west coast? . . . That Bill Manry, who is also with the air corps in St. Louis, spent the weekend with friends in St. Louis on leave from the barracks? . . . and that he keeps up with Atlanta news each day through his Atlanta Constitution, which was a "going-away" present? . . . That Lieutenant W. G. Henderson, who attends Gordon Military College, chose Martha Eunice Duggan as his band sponsor at the college, and that the latter motored to Barnesville to represent the band at the dress parade held Sunday at Memorial Stadium? . . . That Pat Slater, who attends school in New York, will arrive on March 26 to spend the spring holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Slater, on Brookhaven drive? . . . That a titian-haired belle will soon announce her engagement to an out-of-town suitor? . . . That a "Back-to-the-Farm" ball will be given next Friday at Sea Island? . . . That Sara Cates, who attends Ogontz School, took a major role in a recent school play presented at Camp Dix, N. J.? . . . and that she recently spent two weeks at Lake Placid enjoying the winter sports, and is a frequent visitor at the Lehigh University weekend dances? . . . That Carolyn Howell, who attends Sophie Newcomb College, was recently elected to the student council as representative of the freshman class? . . . That Mardel Conger, who is studying art at Auburn, was awarded a "first mention" at the school's latest art project, and that she designs evening gowns for herself and her classmates to wear to the spring formals at the college?

Miss Carolyn Huey And Rodney Harris Announce Plans

The Little Chapel of Glenn Memorial church will form the setting for the marriage of Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Huey and James Rodney Harris on Saturday, March 28, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. No invitations will be issued.

Rev. Pierce Harris, cousin of the groom-elect, will perform the ceremony. Richard Felder, organist, will render a program of music.

Miss Elizabeth Ray, of Calhoun, will be maid-of-honor and only attendant to the bride. Richard F. Harris Jr., of Charlotte, N. C., will act as best man for his brother.

The ushers will be Seaborn Fullilove, John Thomas and Audley Harris, brother of the groom-to-be, of Athens, and P. Rufus Brown.

Several parties have been planned for the bride-elect. Miss Morie Burns has planned a dessert-bridge for Miss Huey today. Mrs. John H. Carnes has chosen Tuesday as the date for the party she will give for the bride-elect. Next Wednesday Miss Mildred Reese will entertain Miss Huey with a miscellaneous shower. Mr. and Mrs. P. Rufus Brown Jr. will honor the future bride and her fiancee next Thursday. The details of the party will be announced later.

Legion Auxiliary.

The American Legion Auxillary of Capitol View Post No. 161 meets Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Euzelian room, Capitol View Baptist church. Speakers will be Mrs. C. R. McQuown and Mrs. Vernon Frank. There will be a roll call of charter members. Arrangements will be made for installation of officers.

Johnson Estates Club Plans Benefit

The second of a series of benefits planned by the Johnson Estates Garden Club for the Red Cross will be an old-time square dance to be given under the leadership of Mrs. W. J. Gage, Saturday at 8:30 o'clock, in the Morningside Civic Hut.

Miss Rosalind Rieman will call the figures. A grand march will be held to select the best costumes, the prizes to be defense stamps. Mrs. Claude Grizzard Jr. will be in charge of concessions.

Members and friends who will attend include Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Carver, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ozmer, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Zach Cravey, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Worrall, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dorn, Mr. and Mrs. George Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Yancey, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Pleasants, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cheatham, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Lockwood, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Bayliss, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Grizzard Jr., Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Roach, Mr. and Mrs. Tignor Wiggins, Dr. and Mrs. S. Y. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. M. K. Sapp, Dr. and Mrs. V. H. Lake, and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Gage.

Mrs. Broyles Honors Neighborhood Club.

Neighborhood Garden Club met recently with Mrs. Arnold Broyles on Peachtree road. Mrs. William Owens presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. John Sanford.

Dr. Wallace Rogers, district superintendent of Atlanta-West Methodist district, spoke on birds, illustrating with slides. Dr. Rogers has made a life study of birds and his keen sense of humor, combined with his extensive knowledge of birds, makes him an interesting speaker.

La Fontaine Twins To Observe Birthday.

Misses June and Jane La Fontaine, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles La Fontaine, will celebrate their tenth birthdays today at a party and tea dance to be held at their home on Euclid avenue.

Spring flowers and hundreds of colorful balloons will decorate the home for the party. A program of songs and dances has been arranged for entertainment of the guests.

The young hostesses will wear bouffant dresses of blue silk net, and their flowers will be sweetheart roses and pink sweet peas. Fifty young friends have been invited to their party.

Lt. Martin Schofield Arrives To Marry Miss Butters

Lieutenant Martin Schofield, of San Angelo, Texas, arrives tomorrow for his marriage to Miss Ruthanna Butters, which will be a social event of Monday at All Saints Episcopal church.

The groom-elect will be accompanied by Lieutenant Malvern Brown, who will be his best man, and by Lieutenant Jake Greenwell and Lieutenant Jack Hayes, both of San Angelo, who will be groomsmen in the wedding. The Army officers, including the groom-elect, are all stationed at Goodfellow Field in Texas, with the United States Army Air Corps.

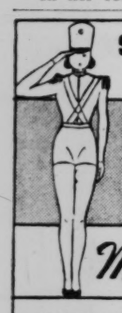

Mrs. Wright Paulk, of Milan, Tenn., who will be matron of honor for her sister, is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Butters, and will be joined tomorrow by Mr. Paulk. Mrs. Ethelyn Davis Schofield, of Oklahoma City, Okla., mother of the groom-elect, will also arrive tomorrow.

Among other visitors arriving tomorrow are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoeffer, of Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. T. E. Ulmer, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mrs. E. M. Durant, of Miami Beach. Mrs. Hoeffer is the former Miss Lila Farrell, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Ulmer is the former Miss Alice Palmer, of Jacksonville, who has often visited Atlanta.

An additional party planned for the bridal couple is the buffet supper to be given on Sunday evening, following the wedding rehearsal, by Mr. and Mrs. Wright Paulk. The affair will take place at the Piedmont Driving Club and will assemble only members of the wedding party and the two families.

Yesterday Miss Butters was honored at a luncheon given by Mrs. Nat Harrison Jr., and Mrs. Ewell Gay at the Piedmont Driving Club.

The table was centered with two miniature airplanes adorned with American flags, the motif arranged in honor of the groom-elect's connection with the United States Army. Small military place cards marked the covers for the limited number of friends present.

EASY to Make Milk MORE TEMPTING

There's no doubt children need plenty of the nourishment that milk supplies best . . . calcium for strong teeth, body-building proteins, protective vitamins.

Yet many children get tired of drinking so much milk; some cannot digest it readily. Here's an easy way to increase daily milk consumption. Make it into delicious eggless, non-cooked custards with "Junket" Rennet Powder (six flavors). Takes but a minute, and these colorful, tempting desserts appeal to the appetite of everyone. The rennet enzyme makes them easier to digest than plain milk. (At all grocers).

For economy, make rennet-custards also with "Junket" Rennet Tablets—unflavored, add sugar and flavor to taste. (At druggists and grocers).

SENORITA MINERVA BERNARDINO.

Mrs. Glenn Plans Victory Tea For City Federation Group

Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, art chairman of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, will entertain the federation at a Victory tea on Sunday afternoon at the High Museum of Art from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Receiving with Mrs. Glenn will be Mildred Seydell, president of the Atlanta Federation; Miss St. John Barnwell, co-art chairman, and Miss Emma Scott.

Miss Scott is the first club member to complete the five defense stamp albums, which have been given toward the bond that will secure a painting to be hung in honor of the past presidents of the Atlanta Federation. The painting will be installed in Memory Lane, presented last Easter by Mrs. Glenn as a memorial wing gallery at the High Museum of Art.

A special greeting committee will be formed by the officers of the federation, including Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, first vice president; Mrs. Clyde L. King Jr., second vice president; Mrs. Louis H. Moss, third vice president; Mrs. J. B. Chisholm, recording secretary; Mrs. Byron Mathews, treasurer; Mrs. John W. Turner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. A. Homer Carmichael, auditor; Mrs. Norman Sharp, parliamentarian, and Mrs. Joseph Moody, honorary president for life.

Assisting in entertaining will be the club presidents and art chairmen. They will be given recognization badges, and the name plates, distributed to executives by Mrs. Seydell at the spring convention, are requested to be worn. Any president who did not get her nameplate then will receive it at the reception.

Each club member is requested to bring her defense stamps and albums. Mrs. Turner Smith, Victory chairman, will have extra stamps available, and a gold picture frame with a box behind it will receive the stamps for the painting to honor the past presidents.

Pouring tea will be Mrs. Charles Haden, chairman of fine arts, and Mrs. E. Bates Block, co-entertainment chairman of the Atlanta Art Association. Assisting in serving will be the presidents of the high school class at Washington Seminary, who helped in collecting defene stamps for their principal, Miss Scott. They are Misses Jane Ward, Mathilde Turner, Mary Humphries and Laura Burgess. Patriotic music will be presented by Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, entertainment chairman.

Invitations have been issued to club members through their presidents. Notification of acceptances should be made to the co-art chairman, Miss St. John Barnwell.

Methodist Women To Meet Next Week in Cartersville

Delegates of the Woman's Societies of Christian Service from the North Georgia Methodist Conference meet for the second annual session March 24-26, at the Sam Jones Memorial church in Cartersville.

The meeting opens Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock with Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, of Acworth, presiding. Reports from the conference standing committees will be given as follows: Spiritual life, Mrs. H. B. Trimble, of Emory University; missionary personal, Mrs. D. R. Little, of Marietta; finance, Mrs. M. E. Tilly, of Atlanta; status of women, Mrs. J. N. McEachern Sr., of Atlanta, and administrative committee, by Mrs. W. C. Cantrell, of Carrollton, for Mrs. Awtrey. Highlights from each of the 10 districts will be given by the corresponding district secretaries.

The Tuesday afternoon session at 2 o'clock will be dedicated to the memory of those for whom the host church was named, the Rev. and Mrs. Sam Jones, parents of the Rev. and Mrs. Walt Holcomb, of Atlanta. Dr. J. Owen Smith, pastor of the Washington Street Methodist church in Columbia, S. C., will speak, in addition to Mrs. E. W. Brogdon, treasurer of the North Georgia Conference, and Mrs. Rembert A. Green, secretary of literature and publications.

Mrs. Elmo Moore will present the national executive secretary of Wesleyan Service Guilds, Miss Marion Lela Norris, of New York city. Guild members will discuss their work with Miss Norris and Mrs. Moore at the supper hour.

The Tuesday evening program at 8 o'clock will be devoted to honor guests of jurisdictional prominence. Mrs. E. L. Hillman, of Rocky Mount, N. C., will speak. Jurisdictional officers on the program include Mrs. D. R. Little, of Marietta; Mrs. M. E. Tilly and Miss Daisy Davies, of Atlanta.

The speaker Wednesday morning will be Dr. W. A. Smart, of Emory University. Conference officers scheduled include Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, Mrs. H. B. Trimble, Miss Mildred Mealor, of Gainesville, and Mrs. C. O. Copelan Jr., of Smyrna.

The Wednesday afternoon session will include reports from Mrs. G. C. Walters, of Toccoa, and Mrs. J. H. Williams, of Decatur. District presidents appearing on this program will be Mrs. R. H. Downs, of Watkinsville; Mrs. R. H. McDougall, of Atlanta; Mrs. T. J. Hamby, of Marietta; Mrs. M. H. Hendee, of Augusta; Mrs. S. Elmer Hambrick, of Cartersville; Mrs. E. C. McDowell, of Social Circle; Mrs. Marvin Gillespie, of Demorest; Mrs. A. A. Hardy, of Thomaston; Mrs. Fred Vandiver, of Manchester; Mrs. Harry Trumbo, of Cedartown.

The memorial service for those who have passed away during the year will be conducted by Mrs. Trimble at the close of the Wednesday afternoon session.

The hostess Society of Christian Service at Cartersville will entertain with a fellowship tea at the church Wednesday at 5 o'clock.

Speaker for Wednesday evening will be Mrs. Otis Moore, of New York. Her subject will be "Christ in the Heart of India." Mrs. Moore is executive secretary on the board of missions and church extension for the whole Methodist church.

The speaker for Thursday morning's conference session will be the Rev. Ed Mattingly, of Emory University. Conference officers reporting are Mrs. Stewart Colley, of Grantville; Mrs. Mac Moore, of Conley, and Mrs. R. C. Singleton, of Athens.

Miss Bert Winter, north Georgia rural worker, will also report. Mrs. W. E. Letts will present the work of the Wesley Community House in Atlanta. Miss Ethel Harpst, of Cedartown, will tell of the work being done in the Ethel Harpst Children's Home in Cedartown.

Pan American League Meets This Evening.

Atlanta branch of the Pan American League meets at the Georgian Terrace hotel today at 8 o'clock preceded by dinner in the coffee shop at 7 o'clock.

Irvine Walker, who recently spent several months in South America, will speak. A movie in technicolor of Caribbean countries will be shown.

Mrs. Joseph E. Buffington has just opened another chapter of the league in Knoxville, Tenn. She recently addressed the faculty at the University of Tennessee.

Plans will be made for the part the Atlanta branch will take in the Pan American Day program, April 14.

D. A. R. President General To Be Honor Guest in Macon

Interest is attached to the annual meeting of the State Officers' Club of Daughters of the American Revolution due to the fact that Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the National Society, will be honor guest.

The meeting will be held at the Dempsey hotel in Macon, Ga., on March 24 and will be presided over by the president, Mrs. W. F. Dykes, who has served the organization for three years. Mrs. Dykes has held many high offices in Joseph Habersham Chapter, of which she ably filled the office of chapter regent during the first World War. She served the state society as corresponding secretary and first vice regent.

Mrs. Pouch was elected at the congress in Washington in 1941, having been a popular national figure in D. A. R. circles for many years. She won wide recognition in her own state of New York, and held many positions of honor in the national society. She served as national president of the Children of the American Revolution. She pledged support, loyalty and co-operation with the government during this war-torn period.

Mrs. Pouch endeared herself by her gracious personality and gentle manners to the members of this great organization and her visit is anticipated with pleasure by the members of the club. The most interesting feature of the occasion will be the address by Mrs. Pouch, who as the leader, has pledged the full support, loyalty and co-operation of the D. A. R. to our government during this, the most critical period of the national history.

Other distinguished guests will be Mrs. W. R. Belk, of North Carolina, chaplain general; Mrs. C. Edward Murray, of New Jersey, curator general, and Mrs. John Logan Marshall, of South Carolina, vice president general.

Prominent members attending will be Mesdames Thomas C. Mell, state regent; William Harrison Hightower, vice president general, and former state regents. Mesdames James A. Rounsaville, Howard H. McCall, James S. Wood, Max E. Land, Charles Akerman, Julius Y. Talmadge, Herbert Fay Gaffney, Bun Wylie, John W. Daniel and John S. Adams.

Club officers are Mesdames W. F. Dykes, W. E. Mann, John W. Daniel, J. D. Wadsworth, Bun Wylie, James N. Brawner, E. Blount Freeman, Mark Smith, Ober D. Warthen and J. Harold Nicholson.

Benefit Party.

The ladies' auxiliary to the Atlanta Police Relief Association will give a party this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the schoolroom at the station house. The public is invited. The proceeds of the party will be donated to the Red Cross.

A Dancer's Advice On Looking Your Best

By Ida Jean Kain.

Do you want to know how to be better looking? Here's the formula: See yourself clearly as you are, but keep in mind a definite picture of the beauty you would like to be. Then live up to your ideal in every possible way. If you can do that, you will have taken the initial step toward that inner circle of women celebrated for their beauty.

So says Martha Graham, famous both for her dancing and her vivid personality. She believes that the women who win acclaim for their beauty do so mainly not because of their good looks but because they see clearly the way they want to look. By keeping this picture in mind, they acquire the distinctive style which sets them apart.

We are inclined to be ahead of ourselves, this interesting woman observed, in whatever we may be doing. We think of the end and fail to enjoy the means. "When a woman walks down the street, she is usually, mentally, already at her destination. Instead of taking pleasure in the walk, she is thinking about what she is going to do in 10 or 15 minutes. That accounts for some of the terrible postures—when women hurry ahead of themselves they poke their heads and shoulders forward. But the remedy is not to hold the shoulders back! That causes sway back. The best rule, I believe, is to use the entire spine, to stretch the spine to its full length, and not cuddle down into the neck and settle into the waist."

Her favorite suggestions for improving posture are these: "Think of the line at the back of your neck and make it as long as possible—then you won't have to worry about leading with your chin. And hold your shoulders slightly extended at the sides, like the padding in a coat, with the armpit open but elbows down at sides."

Stretching exercises are given in the leaflet "Stretch the Fat From Waistline, Ribs, Wishbone." Please enclose large stamped envelope, self-addressed to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

'Gone With the Wind' Has Just Skimmed Past $30,000,000 Mark

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD, March 16.—"Gone With the Wind" has just skimmed past the $30,000,000 grossing mark and is still going strong. Before its release, Al Lichtman, sales manager of M.-G.-M., wagered heavily with doubting associates that it would do $11,000,000 or better. They thought he was crazy.

War blasted another Hollywood tradition today—leg art! The Navy ruled that scantily clad movie starlets can't be photographed on the beach without special permission, and that means too much red tape. So, all such art is now being shot in studio galleries in front of phoney marine backgrounds. Sun reflectors used by the still men were confusing to the Coast Guard and the order was issued to prevent a possible outburst of shooting.

There's a running gag in the Columbia picture, "He Kissed the Bride," which makes frequent use of the line, "You must have been a beautiful baby." To protect it, the studio went out and bought the old song of that name.

Charlie Chaplin, who changes his story mind oftener than any film maker, is now determined to make Paul Vincent Carroll's "Shadow and Substance," for which he has just paid $20,000.

TREND OF TIMES:

Veronica Lake and Ann Sothern pedaling bikes to and from work. . . . Penny Singleton, suffering from servant trouble, is doing her own cooking. . . . Claudette Colbert, introduced to a handsome young buck private, asks for his autograph. . . . George Brent gives his bride, Ann Sheridan, a three-week-old, two-foot-high burro. . . . Mechanical rakes equipped with magnetic gadgets drive over studio lots to pick up nails and iron scraps which cause enormous tire bills when neglected.

"I can hit 'em just as far," says the Sultan of Swat, "but the old pins aren't so good any more. I gotta hit a home run or I can't get to first base."

Don Ameche stands at the curb, just outside the Twentieth Century-Fox studio, grimly appraising a blow-out tire on his station wagon. Preston Foster pulls up behind and offers a lift. Ameche shrugs, kicks the shattered hunk of rubber and rides off with his colleague. . . . Shirley Temple's "Little Annie Rooney" has been written up to date. The revised plot has Shirley's father, Bill Gargan, playing a slick promoter who tries to market a scheme for making rubber out of milkweed.

Big Andy Devine, who has made seven quickies in a row at Universal, ambles onto the stage where George Raft is filming "Broadway." He is in cowboy paraphernalia and rasps, "I just dropped in to get the smell of an A-picture on me again."

The Steps In Learning To Tango

Even a man is expected to manage a tango without tangling! As for a girl, if she wants to be asked out at all, she really must dance well.

She can—every one can! In an evening you can teach yourself the popular tango steps, as diagrammed by the noted teacher, Lawrence Hostetler.

The Three Step is one of many simple tango variations. The count is a slow One-and-Two, One-and-Two, and it's—

Of course, dancing isn't just knowing steps. Each dance has its own distinctive manner—as the music hints and as you quickly learn. In the tango you take smooth, gliding, but very deliberate steps. In the rumba your hips sway and you take short little steps.

Masks To Protect the General Public

By Dr William Brady

Today the doctor is working overtime as a mock-heroic figure in a thousand and one films. He doesn't actually knock over the adoring nurses as he strides through the hushed corridor in his nighty or ku-klux costume on his amphitheater, but certainly he is making up for all the sheet drawing episodes of the past. But how dull all this turgent surgical romance would be if the doctor and nurses were not masked with cheesecloth!

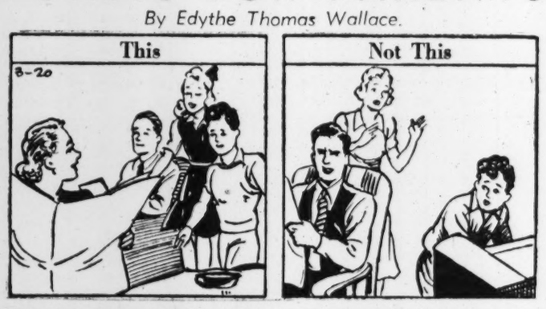

Not only surgeons and nurses in the operating room but nurses and physicians attending infants in the nursery, patients ill of any respiratory infection (whether diphtheria, tuberculosis, pneumonia, scarlet fever, influenza or whatnot), should always wear a suitable mask. Likewise, in time of epidemic or whenever any respiratory infection is prevalent, dentists, nose and throat specialists, barbers, hair dressers, oculists, opticians fitting glasses, cashiers and others whose work involves close contact with people should avail themselves of the protection of a mask and at the same time give their patrons the assurance a suitable mask gives.

Aside from the hideous appearance a gauze or cheesecloth mask gives, it is uncomfortable to wear. Unless it is made of not less than 10 layers of gauze having 32 threads to the inch mesh, such a mask is inefficient—does not prevent the finer droplets of spray from passing through. Wearing such a mask of only half a dozen layers of coarse meshed gauze is only pretense.

A transparent screen or mask, which is not uncomfortable to wear all day if necessary, is 100 per cent efficient. It was designed by Dr. Lewis J. Silvers expressly for surgeons, throat specialists and dentists. Dr. Silvers made his first mask with washed X-ray film (safety film), cut about seven by nine inches, with rounded corners, with two snap fasteners inserted near the upper seven-inch edge to snap it on the band of head lamp or head mirror. Firm cellophane may be used to make the mask. Such a mask might be given a convex or rounded shape and held in place by means of a support similar to spectacle frames. It permits free ventilation between the mask and the wearer's face. It may be washed or sponged with soapy water or with any ordinary antiseptic solution.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edythe Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "Here is this week's radio program. Let's choose those we want and agree what to do when there are conflicts."

Son: "We can still change our plans when there's something important."

Father: "Don't turn that off! I want to hear the news."

Son: "But this is the time for my serial."

Mother: "I sometimes wish we didn't have a radio."

Plans made and agreed upon ahead of time can save much family conflict.

Girl Had Best Forget Boy, If She Is Ashamed of Him

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I am a young girl 20 years old and am in love with a man who is 30. We do not have dates, but I am sure that we love each other very much. We meet at various places and talk. His social standing is very much lower than mine, and his family is not as well-to-do as mine. My family would die if they knew that I loved him, and he knows this, for I have told him so many times. To be perfectly frank, I would not like to be seen in many public places with him, but I do love him. Do you think I should stop seeing him? Peg.

By all means stop going with him. You are wasting your time, in the first place, and in the second place, what use is there to go with him if you do not intend marrying him? And certainly I would not think that you would consider marriage with a person whom you admit that you are ashamed to be seen with now. Going with him may be a temporary pleasure, but pleasures of this type are not foundations for future happiness, and you will be wise to forget him now, before you love him any more.

I can hardly see why you could love anyone whom you would be ashamed to be seen with, for one of the first requisites in marriage or in friendship, in my opinion is respect, and there does not seem to be much respect in this case. I believe you are just infatuated with this man and that if you stop seeing him, you can forget him. The odds are against you as far as I can see, for you do not even have the backing of your family. And, then, too, having to slip out to date him does not add much to the romance. In your case I think that your mind should rule your heart, which, when you come right down to facts, should be the case in any marriage. The wild romantic love of youth simmers down to a sensible companionable sort of understanding as the years roll on, and you need a level head to carry you over the pitfalls and detours on the marriage journey. Forget this boy and get you one whom you can introduce to the family and to your friends with pride. Every girl wants to be proud of her man and show him off, so think of that before you run out to meet him again.

MY DAY: Young Korean Tells Of Japanese Control

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY, Wednesday.—A young Korean girl, Miss Grace Kim, brought me a silk flag yesterday as a token of the devotion which the Korean people feel to the cause of liberty. I could not help thinking of some of the propaganda in this country, inspired, of course, by the Japanese government, which has tended to make people feel that race equality would be immediately recognized in any realm under Japan's control.

The Koreans would like to bear witness to what it means to be under Japanese control. Race equality does not enter into it. A subjugated race does not have a happy time.

My Latin-American student guests turned out to be mature men and women, many of whom are already practicing their professions. They had come here to Columbia University to make more contacts and to gain knowledge on some very specific points which would increase their usefulness.

One young woman is a surgeon and wishes to perfect her technique so as to return to work among the women of her country. There was a teacher studying methods of instruction, a civil engineer who also taught and was much impressed by our abundance of laboratories.

All in all, it was an interesting group, but one which I should think would mean much more specialized work for Columbia University. In many cases, people in the community have had to be drawn in to provide the special experience needed.

Mrs. Enit Kaufmann, sent by Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, brought me some photographs of her water-color portraits. She is a charming person, a refugee, who in gratitude for what this country has meant to her, wishes to make a portrait record of the people in this period who have contributed something to the life of the nation.

Mrs. Kaufmann will deposit this record in one of the museums, so that, in years to come, people can see the soul of those who lived through this period, because she claims that only a painting can show what a subject is really like. The artist certainly has done some very charming things and I hope she will have an opportunity to achieve her objective.

Last night I went to a concert given by the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy. Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist, was the guest artist and played the Brahms Concerto in D major very beautifully. I have never before heard Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." I enjoyed it very much, especially the "Ballet of Chicks in Their Shells." Every child should have that particular bit of music on a record and I understand it is available.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The entire day is a time to be cautious. The feelings of people around you may be extremely sensitive, or you may meet chilly receptions, which is not conducive toward good results. Dealings with women or work pertaining to the needs of women bring some bright spots during the day.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The entire day is one of those days that are all embracing for good. That is, put your best foot forward, seek favors and begin those things which are your greatest desire. The period past 7:10 p. m. favors social activities.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—The combined influences of the day tend to produce a feeling of nervousness and erratic action. The day does not especially favor new beginnings. An excellent day to stick to established routine. The best aspects of the day are previous to 2 p. m.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Today is an excellent day to decide just what you want to do. Make new contacts. Revive old ones. Press your pet projects. Be as cordial and expansive as you can. Make some definite plan for the ensuing year.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Previous to 5:06 p. m. favors routine matters, but suggests caution in secretive ideas, around liquids, water and chemicals. The remainder of the day is auspicious for making progress in those things that will advance your standing.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Today until 6:58 p. m. you should go ahead with courage and confidence, when you can advance your ambitions, but don't waste time in frivolities.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—While new beginnings may have a tendency to run into obstacles if started before 11:28 a. m., old, practical ideas may be pushed forward to advantage. Before 5:04 p. m. favors matters pertaining to land, mining and property.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—The day through 6:45 p. m. favors energetic and aggressive efforts along business and industrial lines for literary work and constructive effort along new lines of endeavor.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—Greater gain will be attained by sticking to routine matters today. Remain away from things that are not strictly aboveboard and cannot stand the "light of day."

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The morning hours and until 11:15 a. m. favors important plans, dealings with those in authority, buying, selling trading and matters concerned with art. After 11:15 a. m. favors dealings with organizations and for working on affairs that have a systematic foundation.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The best aspects of the day operate previous to 1:20 p. m. The period favors general business activity, literary and educational matters.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Between 9:37 and 6 p. m. favors general business and professional activities, matters pertaining to law, religion and philosophy. After 6 p. m. suggests care in driving.

Mrs. Dewey Gives Tea in Honor Of Mrs. Hunter

The interior of Mrs. Dewey's home presented a scene of springtime beauty with its decorations of multi-colored tulips, snapdragons, daffodils and pink roses.

The tea table was covered with an embroidered cloth and centered with a series of three crystal bowls arranged on a mirrored plaque. The center bowl held an exquisite Dresden figurine, and the other two were filled with pink and lavender sweetpeas, daffodils and freezias. Flanking the central arrangement were four old Sheffield candlesticks holding tall white tapers.

Mrs. Dewey, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Hill P. Redwine, of Fayetteville, mother of the honor guest, and Mrs. Walter R. Hunter Sr., of Quitman, received the guests in the library, where the floral decorations were entirely in tones of pink.

The honor guest chose for the occasion a lovely bouffant gown of white mousseline, and she carried a colonial bouquet of Dresden tinted flowers encased in a lace paper holder.

Mrs. T. O. Marshall, of Americus, and Mrs. Carmichael Greer, of Loudon, Tenn., poured tea.

Assisting in entertaining were the honor guest's sister, Mrs. Wilbur Rountree, of Thomaston; Mrs. J. Sam Guy, Mrs. Harry Redwine and Miss Elizabeth Redwine, of Fayetteville; Miss Olivia Wise, of Fayetteville; Mrs. Walter Stapleton and Miss Mary Hunter, of Savannah; Miss Sarah Smith, of Lawrenceville; Miss Katherine Jones, of Thomaston, and Miss Hattie Mina Reid, of Madison.

For Miss Turnipseed.

Mrs. Samuel Lockhart entertains this evening at a kitchen shower at her home on Richland road, complimenting Miss Marian Ozburn Turnipseed, whose marriage to Harry Penn Templeman will be solemnized on March 28. Artistic arrangements of delphiniums and jonquils will decorate the home.

The guests will include Miss Turnipseed, Mrs. H. P. Peacock, Mrs. Arthur F. Hale, Mrs. George R. Turnipseed, Mrs. Marion Dodgen, Misk, Miss Mary Saywell, Mrs. T. C. Green, Mrs. W. H. Cofer, Miss Grace Haynes, Mrs. John H. Moore, Mrs. W. E. McAdams, Miss Evelyn Mayes, Mrs. John O. Shackleford, Mrs. Marjorie Kingston, Mrs. Charles E. Fleming, Miss Nell Franklin, Miss Leverne Kirkland, Mrs. Gene Lewis, Miss Tena Suttles, Miss Claudie Twiggs and Mrs. T. M. Lineupo.

College Belles and Visitors Will Be Honored at Parties

Popular members of the college set will return home during the next few weeks to spend the spring holidays with their parents, and will be accompanied by attractive visitors. A series of social affairs will honor the visiting belles and their hostesses.

Miss Bessie Bellinger, a student at St. Genevieve-in-the-Pines, in Asheville, N. C., arrives on March 30 and will be accompanied by Misses Betsey Anderson, Mary Ann White and Dale Hilliard, all of Asheville, N. C.

On April 3 her sister, Miss Lucia Bellinger, who is a student at Rosemont College in Rosemont, Pa., will arrive with seven schoolmates in the senior class. They will be Misses Jennie Areneta and Cosuela Madrigal, of Manila, Phillipine Islands; Regina McCount, of Baltimore, Md.; El Eileen O'Connor, and Marie Nevel, of New York; Gerry Cremens, of Patterson, N. J., and Helen Boylan, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The latter group will go direct to Cornelia, where they will be met by Major and Mrs. G. C. Dugas, parents of the Misses Bellinger. From there they will go to Lakemont, where they will join Miss Bessie Bellinger and her guests for a house party at the Dugas summer home on the Tallulah river.

Major and Mrs. Dugas will be hosts at a square dance for the visiting belles on April 4, the affair to be preceded by a hay ride in ox carts. Returning to Atlanta on Easter Sunday afternoon, the Atlanta belles and their visitors will be honored informally by Mrs. Perry Pappenheimer at her home on Woodward way.

On Monday, April 6, Mrs. Dugas will honor her daughters and their guests at a luncheon in the Mirador room of the Capital City Club.

Miss Carolyn Howell, a student at Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, La., arrives on April 3 to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Howell, on Park lane. She will be accompanied by her classmates, Miss Patricia Platte, of Vicksburg, Miss., and Miss Betsey Barrett, of Decatur, Ill.

Among social affairs planned for these belles is the party to be given on Saturday afternoon, April 4, by Mr. and Mrs. Howell.

Miss Sara Cates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Cates, will arrive on March 27 and will be accompanied by her roommate, Miss Kay Dorsey, of Denver, Col. These belles are students at Ogontz school, near Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Ledlie Conger are expecting their daughter, Miss Mardel Conger, and her lovely roommate, Miss Bette Jane Willson, students at Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, on April 2.

Miss Willson, whose father, Lieutenant Colonel Alvin Willson, is on active duty in the Philippines, is one of the most popular of the pre-medical students at Auburn. Miss Conger is majoring in art in addition to her regular course.

Miss Anne Wagar returned yesterday from Athens to visit her mother, Mrs. Wilkinson Wagar, on Peachtree street. She is enrolled at the University of Georgia.

Atlanta D. A. R. Elects Nominating Group.

The Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., met recently at "Craigie House" with the regent, Mrs. John W. Rice, in the chair. The nominating committee elected to submit a report at the May meeting of the chapter includes Mesdames Lucius McConnell, Eli A. Thomas, James O. Wynn, James L. Logan and James S. Moore.

Mrs. Thomas C. Mell, state regent of the Georgia D. A. R., announced that the national D. A. R. Congress would be held in Chicago instead of in Washington, D. C. The headquarters of the congress will be at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, Ill., from May 1 through May 7.

The program featured Mrs. James E. Hays, who spoke on "Dorothy Dix" and Mrs. J. J. Harber Sr., on "Emily Post." Mrs. Henry J. Baker, chairman, presented Katherine Dozier in a group of violin numbers.

A number of antiques were on display under the supervision of the chairman, Mrs. James O. Wynn. Tea was served by Mrs. W. E. Beckham, chairman; Mrs. Bun Wylie and members of the hospitality committee.

Service League Plans Rummage Sale.

Mrs. Walter Bobo announced at the recent Decatur Service League meeting that a rummage sale will be held on April 4. The members voted to give $50 to the Red Cross. Mrs. Robert Alston Jr., recreation chairman, asked the league to furnish refreshments for a party to be given by the Decatur recreation board at General Lawson hospital on April 1.

Mrs. William Pauley, marionette chairman, announced the marionettes would open their season with a show on March 31 at Clairmont school. Mrs. E. C. Brink announced that the league, with other Decatur organizations, is sponsoring a dance to be given by the Civilian Defense on April 17 at the Decatur city auditorium. Mrs. Brink announced the following nominating committee: Mrs. Dick Buskirk, chairman; Mrs. Robert Alston Jr., Mrs. Philip Alexander, Mrs. John Thompson, and Mrs. Ralph Heath.

Radiance Garden Club Holds Annual Meeting

Mrs. C. T. Greer, president of the Radiance Garden Club, spoke at the annual birthday party of the club held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Suttenfield on Harold avenue. Mrs. A. J. Long was cohostess. Mrs. Greer reported the purchase by the club of a $100 defense bond.

Mrs. Charles N. Walker gave the charge to the new officers.

An executive board meeting of the Radiance Garden Club will be held Friday at 11 o'clock at the home of the president, Mrs. C. T. Greer, 475 Page avenue, N. E. After the meeting Mrs. Greer will entertain at luncheon both the incoming and retiring boards.

Senior Hadassah Will Hold Purim Shower on Monday

Atlanta Chapter of Senior Hadassah holds the annual purim shower on Monday, at 2:30 o'clock at the Mayfair Club. At this shower members and friends bring their contributions to the Palestine supplies project in the form of linens and wearing apparel which are sent to the Holy Land for distribution. The British government has granted free shipping space for all supplies and garments that Hadassah sends.

Mrs. Alex Sherman, Palestine supply chairman, requests that members bring sheets, size 81x99, regulation size pillow cases, all size towels, or cash contributions. Garments fashioned by the Hadassah sewing groups will be displayed at the shower. Tribute will be paid to the South Side Sewing Group, which has completed over 300 garments. The garments to be sent to Palestine will be used for distribution in Hadassah hospitals and Hadassah welfare stations, for the benefit of residents and victims of war, who have found refuge in Palestine.

A purim program has been arranged by Mrs. Charles Bergman. The poem "Harassah," written by Mrs. Evelyn Bloom Epstein, and inspired by the recent twenty-fifth anniversary, will be delivered by Mrs. Joe I. Zimmerman, assisted by the Hadassah choral group. Current Events will be dramatized by Mesdames J. M. Rosenfeld, Jack Fred and George Alterman. A play entitled "The Victory Ship" will be presented. Participating will be Mesdames Morris Toronto, Albert Bernath, Jack Edinburg, E. Fogelman, S. Arnowitz and D. Mensh. The scrap book of Hadassah's twenty-fifth anniversary celebration will be on display. Mrs. S. O. Klotz, president, invites members and friends of Hadassah to attend.

Veterans Honored.

The Agnes Lee Chapter, U. D. C., honored General H. T. Dowling and J. T. Pittman at their recent meeting. Dean Goodrich White, of Emory University, addressed the gathering and told of the plans for the University Center in Atlanta.

The chapter house was beautifully decorated, and the tea table was presided over by Mrs. Jack Johnson and Mrs. W. S. Nelms. Mrs. E. A. Stead, president, presided over the meeting.

Tech Tankmen Favored To End 'Gator Monopoly

S. E. C. Meet Begins Today In Jacket Pool

Florida Has Won Five Straight Titles; Small Field Entered.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

The University of Florida mermen, Old Man Neptune's favorite sons, face the unusual prospect (for them) of being outsplashed in the Georgia Tech pool today and tomorrow in the annual Southeastern Conference swimming meet. If they are, one of the greatest tank monopolies in the nation will come to an unceremonious end.

Coach Frank Genovar's 'Gators, who are as familiar with the "drink" as a Chattahoochee catfish, have amassed the enviable record of having captured five straight conference swimming crowns, and they don't intend to relinquish the title and the chance to lengthen their tenure of office without some mighty splashing, but for once they will not be favored to win.

Coach Fred Lanoue's host Georgia Tech water treaders sit serene in the driver's seat this time, and with good cause. The Jackets are unbeaten in dual competition this year, and only recently invaded the 'Gators home pool at Gainesville to end the Florida streak of 48 consecutive triumphs in dual competition.

Due to war conditions only a few of the conference schools are expected to enter the meet. Besides Florida and Tech, only Tennessee, Auburn and Georgia are certain to compete. L. S. U. may send a last-minute entry.

The meet will open with the swimming of the 1,500-meter freestyle finals at 10 o'clock this morning. If there are sufficient entries to warrant trial heats they will be held this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock each day. Finals will be run off tonight and tomorrow night, beginning at 8:30.

Friday night events will include the 50-yard freestyle, 150-yard back stroke, 220-yard freestyle, low board fancy diving, and the 300-yard medley relay.

Saturday night finals will include the 100-yard freestyle, 200-yard breast stroke, 440-yard freestyle, high board fancy diving and 400-yard relay.

The coaches were guests of Georgia Tech last night at an informal buffet supper at the Athletic Club.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Going Back ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 19.—What do you remember about the 1941 Southern League season, outside of Atlanta winning the pennant and losing out in the screwy play-off system to Nashville?

Well, the league doesn't seem to produce any .400 hitters unless they have the benefit of Nashville's bandbox park. Les Fleming came along to hit .414 and erase the former S. L. record of Phil Weintraub, who batted .401 as a Vol in 1934.

A real hitter who overcame the handicap of breaking a wrist and spraining another in a grandstand collision, Fleming was sold to Cleveland and probably will make the grade.

Of seven players who appeared in every game, Atlanta's Charlie Glock was one. He played in 155. And, of course, Les Burge led in home runs (38) and runs batted in (146). Nick Cullop's Atlanta mark of 139 went by the boards.

Atlanta had one of three 20-game winners in Ed Heusser, and Bob Chipman pitched the most shutouts, six. Emile Lochbaum's earned-run average of 2.74 runs per nine innings was tops. Chipman, by the way, pitched 27 consecutive scoreless innings.

Driving in eight runs in a game, Willard Marshall tied the league record. It was in a game against Birmingham. For the second straight year the rookie outfielder drove in more than 100 runs.

Homer Barrage It was in the madcap month of June, without any warning, that Nashville cut loose against Cracker pitching and socked eight home runs in the first game of a doubleheader. Tommy Tatum, now with Brooklyn, hit three of them.

There were four players to score five runs in a game and Atlanta had two them—Emil Mailho and Buddy Bates.

Optimistic note for 1942: Charlie Letchas, new second baseman, had a streak of 35 consecutive games without an error with Chattanooga.

Former Cracker Marshall Mauldin, who has decided to join Memphis instead of remaining as a county policeman around Atlanta, was one of two players to get more than 200 hits. Culley Rikard, of Memphis, was the other. Mauldin also played 95 consecutive games in the Knoxville outfield without making an error. Mailho, by the way, didn't make an error in the last 90 games of his Cracker career.

The season's best slugging mark was turned in by two confirmed second-division teams—Knoxville and Little Rock. It was a league record when the Travelers and Smokies clouted seven doubles, eight triples and three homers for a total of 18 extra bases.

There was only one no-hit, no-run game and it was a seven-inning game. Willis Hudlin, now managing Little Rock, turned it in against New Orleans.

DiMag Stopped Do you recall who stopped Joe DiMaggio's great consecutive hitting streak of 56 games? An Atlanta boy, Jim Bagby Jr., and Al Smith did it.

Speaking of records in reverse, or those of dubious distinction, the Philadelphia Americans ran their number of cellar finishes to 12, hit into 141 double plays and, as a team, stole the new low of 27 bases.

What American League team has never won a pennant and hasn't finished in the first division since 1929? Why, the St. Louis Browns, of course.

Jimmy Foxx doesn't have any competition in home-run totals. The Red Sox first baseman has hit a total of 517 in 17 years. In team hitting the Yankees now have led the league 22 years and rank as the only team to do it 17 years in a row.

For durability Arkansas Bill Dickey takes front rank among the catchers. He has caught 100 or more games in 13 different seasons.

Answering all critics as to whether or not they are slipping, the Yankees also turned in 196 double plays and won more than 100 games for the seventh time.

Did you notice that Adolf blamed his defeat on the Russian winter?

Well, what would you think of a screwberry who started a picnic in a blizzard?

Adolf's latest ultimatum is that the Japs are Aryans with blue eyes and golden curls.

Is it possible with all his other rackets Adolf is running a mail order marriage bureau?

What Adolf doesn't know about the Russian summer is it is the same as winter with perspiration.

Ray Robinson To Meet Rubio In 12-Rounder

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—Ray Robinson will try to pull ahead of his idol, Joe Louis, tomorrow night when he fights Norman Rubio, of Albany, N. Y., in a 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Ray is one of Joe's greatest admirers. He was born in Detroit, Louis' home town, uses the same training quarters that Joe occupies at Greenwood Lake, N. Y., and like Louis, he's aiming for his 29th consecutive victory. Robinson, in fact, has an even longer string of victories than Louis. He never has been beaten in 117 bouts as an amateur and 28 as a professional.

A lot of wise boxing men argue that Robinson will have a tougher time against Rubio than Louis will have when he shoots for his 29th straight against Abe Simon a week later.

THE JUNGLE-GUARDED RUINS OF ANGKOR VAT
French Indo-China

The magic city of Angkor Vat was hidden by jungles for over a century. When rediscovered, this treasure house was found to have 26,000 feet of carvings—2 miles of picture galleries. Angkor Vat stands out alone. And so, too, does Old Jordan—the standard for men who know their bourbon best.

Among Bourbon Whiskies It's OLD JORDAN

Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey

Still Made the Genuine Old-Fashioned "Slow" Way

Men who know bourbon know what it takes to achieve the delicious extra-smooth, extra-rich taste of Old Jordan Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey. We stick to the genuine old-fashioned method that takes more time, more care—the "slow" way we started 100 years ago. We still buy premium grains. Use more of them to the gallon. Simmer our mash slowly. That's how we get such extra smoothness, extra richness. That's why Old Jordan—genuine Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey every drop—sells so well in the "bourbon country," where men know their bourbon best. Yes, Old Jordan costs more to make but not to drink. So treat yourself to the extra pleasure of the genuine—Old Jordan.

Harry Kingston shot his first 400 set in a long time Tuesday night in the Gate City Bowling League, tossing in beautiful games of 164, 143 and 94—401. He came right back Wednesday night in the Industrial League with 14-109-96 for a set of 347, or an average of 128 for the six games, which is good man's bowling. His son, Buddy, was also hot Wednesday with a set of 119-120-142—381.

Miss Freeman, of Georgia Power team, turned in high game for the large Ladies' Commercial League with a game of 144. Estelle Warrington had a set of 320, and Bebe Bangert turned in 344 for her three games. Phillips and Ross, of Model Laundry, turned in twin games of 12 together, and the team totaled 539 to win two out of three games from Original Waffle Shop.

Thirty entries have been received for the Saturday night handicap sweepstakes, in which the entry fee is only $1.50 per person. Every entrant is to receive a handicap that will enable him to shoot on an equal basis with all others. Five games will be bowled, with cash prizes for each division of both men and women.

In the First National Bank League, Hardy, of the Teller No. 1 Team, blasted games of 134, 120 and 99, for a nice set of 353. Stainback, of Transit, turned in a game of 127.

Ross Towns, of the Queen Pin team in the Capital City League, had games of 103-133-103—339, to enable his team to take two games from Colonial Stores. Harmon of Rogers Stores, also had a good set with 122, 125 and 93 for 340. Otis Fuller, of Gasco, led his team to a three-game sweep over Georgia Refrigerating, with games of 122, 121 and 105, for a 348 set.

In the big Gulf Oil League, F. W. Wooding led his Gulf Supreme team to a two-game win over Gulf Airline, with games of 130, 120 and 11, for a 361 set.

Suggs To Meet Mrs. Page in North-South Finals

SURE SIGN OF SPRING—Yessir, when the runners start hitting the dirt and the wires are flooded with action baseball pictures, it's a sure sign of spring. This shot was taken during a recent Detroit-Brooklyn exhibition game and shows Pinky Higgins, of the Tigers, sliding safely into home after a single by Jimmy Bloodworth. Cliff Dapper is the Dodger catcher, but was unable to make the putout.

Dorothy Kirby Loses To Medalist on 19th

PINEHURST, N. C., March 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, faced with the specter of defeat, laid a perfect stymie on the 18th hole which enabled her to get a half, and then went on to win the 19th hole in the semi-finals of the North and South golf tourney here today for her fourth consecutive victory over Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga.

In the final round tomorrow, the Chapel Hill veteran will meet Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., who won easily today from Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., 6 and 5.

Miss Kirby, who lost to Mrs. Page in the finals of the last three North and South tournaments, was on the threshold of victory on the short 18th. Her approach from the edge of the green was eight feet short of the hole, and needed only to sink it for a three.

Mrs. Page was bunkered off the tee. She exploded out 15 feet from the cup. Then missed her try for a three but stymied the Atlanta girl perfectly. They halved the hole in 4s.

On the 19th both got good drives and second shots to the far edge of the green. Mrs. Page rolled an approach to within a foot of the hole. Miss Kirby pitched 10 feet beyond. She missed her putt, Mrs. Page holed hers, and the match was over.

Dead Stymie Costs Kirby Tough Match

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

PINEHURST COUNTRY CLUB, March 19.—It was the same old story this morning in the match I had with Estelle Page, the difference this year being that I gave her a match instead of just handing it to her.

As you can guess by this time, I lost to Mrs. Page on the 19th hole. This w one of the toughest matches I have ever lost.

We halved the first hole with birdie 3's. The second was halved in par 4's and I won the third with a par to go 1 up. We halved 4 and I took 5 with a birdie to be 2 up.

EVEN THROUGH NINTH.

I really felt good at this stage of the game. My feelings feil, however, when I went in the trap on the short sixth and lost it to ier par 3. I also lost the seventh to a par when my putt just stayed out. This put us on even terms again. The eighth was squared in pars, as was the ninth in 5's. Mrs. Page had a 37 to my 38. So we were on even terms at the end of nine holes.

The back nine went about like the front side. I took the 10th to be 1 up and the 11th was halved. I lost the 12t to a par and the match was even. Mrs. Page won the 13th with a par and I took the 14th with a par to bring the total to even again. We both took 5's on the 15th and halved 16 and 17 in par figures.

Now this 18th is something I will remember for a long time. As we stepped up to the 18th all even I hit first and was just off the green while Mrs. Page was in a trap. She came out in two and I chipped up about four feet short. Page putted and missed, but her ball stopped right in front of the cup and left me a dead stymie. So I couldn't even attempt to sink the putt I had for a win, so the hole was halved in 4's.

AND THEN THE 19TH.

The 19th was rather bad for me. We were both off the green in two, but Estelle chipped up dead for the 4 while I went too fr with my chip and left myself a long putt, which I missed.

The total scores were a 76 for Mrs. Page to a 77 for me. I just can't seem to win lately, although I have hit my shots better during the last two weeks than I have in some time.

Louise Suggs is Mrs. Page's opponent for the final round of 18 holes. She beat Jeanne Cline by 6 and 5. Louise played very nice golf. This will make the third time they have met, Estelle taking the first match and Louise winning last May in the Southern. So this will be a battle. It is an 18-hole final.

Horses Named For Big Races At Keeneland

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 19.—(AP)—Seventy-seven two-year-olds a record number, were nominated for the $2,500 added LaFayette stakes, and 24, including Whirlaway, were nominated for the 79th renewal of the $2,500 added Phoenix handicap, to be run at Keeneland's spring meeting, it was announced yesterday.

The Phoenix is the feature of the opening day, April 9, while the LaFayette will be run on the next to last day, April 22.

In addition to nominating Whirly for the Phoenix, Warren Wright also named two of his Kentucky Derby eligibles, Sun Again and Some Chance. Wright won the event last year with Easy Mon.

Other Derby eligibles nominated for the handicap were Mrs. Ethel V. Mar's Dogpatch and Black Raider and Greentree farms' Devil Diver and Shut Out.

Mrs. Mars and Wright, both of whom have won the LaFayette since it was renewed in 1937, led the nominators for that stakes with six each. Black Raider was the winner last year.

Yale Releases Vet Joe Wood And 2 Others

Tennis, Golf Coaches Also Dismissed in Economy Move at School.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 19. (AP)—"Smoky Joe" Wood, one-time big league pitching ace, who tutored Eli baseball teams for two decades, got his dismissal notice from Yale today, a victim of a wartime economy move that simultaneously eliminated two other coaching positions.

Athletic Director Ogen D. Miller announced that Wood, pitching star of the 1912 Boston Red Sox world champions and later an outfielder with the Cleveland Indians, was being let out as of June 30, together with Tennis Coach Bill Hinchliff and Golf Coach Ben Thomson.

Hinchliff will retire on pension; the contracts of the other two were terminated without compensation.

Today's dismissals, following by a few days announcing of the pensioning of Yale's veteran athletic publicity director, Paul Barnett, were part of a retrenchment program begun by the Yale Athletic Association soon after war was declared.

Wood received the announcement of his dismissal with a terse, "I have nothing to say; I have no plans." He came to Yale in 1922 as freshman coach, after seven years with the Cleveland club to which he went after his pitching arm went bad in Boston. He was made varsity coach in 1923.

Hinchliff has been with Yale for 28 years; Thomson for 17 years.

Knoxville Signs Vet Andy Reese

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 19. — (AP) — Knoxville Manager Bert Niehoff announced today the signing of Andy Reese, veteran infielder formerly with the New York Giants and Memphis, and indicated Reese's role for the season would be that of general utility man and pinch hitter.

The veteran plays first base, second base and the outfield.

Today's four-hour workout, staged under a sizzling sun, cheered Niehoff, as the infield, particularly "Skeeter" Scalzi at short, showed all sorts of enthusiasm.

Niehoff also expressed satisfaction with the way Lou Fette, veteran hurler, was rounding into shape.

Jimmy Foxx Is Headed for Manager's Job

Blood, Sweat and Tears Carried Ol' Double-X to Top of Ladder.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

NEW YORK, March 19.—A few days ago Leroy Atkinson had a column in the Worcester Daily Telegram which we liked very much. Liked it not only because it was about one of our favorite athletes, but because it brought out an idea of merit.

The athlete is Jimmie Foxx, the Red Sox first baseman, and the idea is that when the next major league managerial job opens up Jimmie Foxx should be the 1-A candidate.

As Atkinson pointed out, Dame Fortune has been a heartless old hag so far as Jimmie is concerned. Not that he hasn't won his share of gold and fame on the diamond. He has, but that wasn't luck; that was just blood and sweat and tears. He won them the hard way.

It has been in his efforts to make pennies sprout into dollars in outside activities that the breaks have gone against him. Everyone knows that his golf course ventures at St. Petersburg didn't pan out so well.

COULD RETIRE.

Jimmie has made enough out of baseball so that with conservative investments he probably could retire now. He thought he had conservative investments in his golf courses, but it wasn't the golf courses that were conservative. It was the tourist trade around lovely St. Pete. A nice spot in the ever-present sun where they could squat in peace appealed to the citizenry more than touring Jimmie's vast acres.

While the shuffleboard courts were crowded, Jimmie's golf courses were sparsely populated regions, feeding on his dollars and producing nothing. Now, at 34, he is out there trying to save his job from ambitious youngsters who couldn't carry his bat three or four years ago. And probably can't yet, is our guess. Old Jimmie will be in there, have no fear. He hit .300 last year and rapped out 19 home runs. You can count those kind of guys on your fingers.

But he's at an age when it probably isn't much fun any more. That astonishingly powerful body has its aches and pains. He'll grin them away, just as he always grinned away injuries, and batting slumps, and all-around bad breaks.

That round, Jack o' Lantern face would just light up cheerfully under the most adverse circumstances, and if he ever complained, except about his salary, we never heard about it. He held out his share of times, and usually won out, as he had the records to back him up.

NEVER COMPLAINED.

He never went top-hat. Everyone is his friend and he treats them all alike—like a gentleman. He is generous and thoughtful, and with his lifetime batting average of .332, covering 18 years, and his 519 home runs, he's much more approachable than some rookie whose head is ignoring the rubber shortage because he is trying out in the majors.

It isn't that Jimmie has dissipated away his fat earnings. In a case like that you can't feel sorry for anybody. Not that we feel sorry for Jimmie. He would not want that. But you can sympathize with him. He has lived cleanly, through the tough years; years with injuries, operations, or his ever-torturing sinus have had him in periodic misery.

Some might say Jimmie Foxx is too quiet to be a manager, but that's a lot of horse radish. They said that about Mel Ott, and our guess is Mel will do okay. And if a fellow doesn't learn something in 18 years of active play, well, it just isn't worth learning.

Naval Team Held To Only Two Hits

Constitution Sports Editor.

FRANCIS FIELD, ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 19.—Atlanta's Southern League defending champions found Naval Air Station pitching to their liking today and won their second exhibition game of the spring. The score was 10 to 0.

While the Crackers clubbed Tom Killifer, son of the old major league catcher, and Charles Tutweiler for 11 hits, the Naval Air Station Fliers from Jacksonville were limited to two hits by the combined efforts of Earl McGowin, Elwood Lawson and Floyd Stromme.

BIG 2D INNING.

The second was a particularly big inning. Four runs were tallied on three hits. Thomassie went safe on an error, Ligon beat out an infield hit, and Cox also was safe on an error, with Thomassie scoring. McGowin fanned. Ligon scored on Treadway's force out. Letchas and Glock singled in order, with Treadway scoring. Then Browne and O'Brien walked, forcing in Letchas.

Thomassie's triple and Ligon's homer accounted for two runs in the fifth. Two more were scored in the seventh.

O'Brien was safe on an error and safe hits by Thomassie and Ligon followed. Catcher Bob Peterson made a wild peg over the pitcher's head, and O'Brien and Thomassie scored. Dozier's home run, scoring Letchas, who had walked, accounted for the other two runs in the eighth.

McGowin and Stromme allowed the hits. Charley Jones got them both. The Fliers previously had played Birmingham and outhit the Barons, eleven to seven, although losing, 6 to 4.

PLAY TODAY.

The Crackers will pay a return visit to Jacksonville tomorrow to play the Fliers, whose lineup is studded with former college stars and pro players.

Harlan Gustafson, first baseman was an All-America football player for Pennsylvania, while Don Cross played for Maryville; Owen Reeves for Auburn; Joe Jayne for Dartmouth; Tom Killifer for Sanford; Dick Beeler for Haverford; Bob Peterson for Lake Forest. Killifer was a Phi Beta Kappa at Stanford. Lieutenant George Earnshaw, former Athletic pitching star, is the Fliers coach.

ACTOR SIMON.

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—Heavyweight Abe Simon, the bulky belter who gets his second shot at the crown worn by Joe Louis here March 27, now has an added inducement to whip the champ. Jimmy Johnston, Simon's manager, disclosed today that a picture company had offered Abe $50 to play the lead in a movie based on a comic strip hero—if he beats Louis.

Ex-G.M.C. Gridder Re-Enters Hospital

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., March 19.—Jake Isenberg, of Gordon, former Georgia Military College football star, was reported "getting along nicely" today in Baldwin Memorial hospital.

He underwent a minor operation about three weeks ago and was released from the hospital. However, he was readmitted Monday due to complications.

Upstart Blues Turn on Yanks And Win, 4 to 3

LAKE WALES, Fla., March 19. (AP)—The appearance of Joe DiMaggio and Charlie Keller and the two-hit pitching of Ernie Bonham for five innings didn't keep the Kansas City Blues, of the American Association, from stopping the parent New York Yankees, 4-3, today.

The Blues hopped on Al Gettel for two runs in the sixth, and in the seventh Gettel walked Jimmy Adlem and Gus Niahros. Don Erickson scored Adlem with a single and Niahros came home on a forced out to provide the margin.

DiMaggio got on base for the first time when he walked in the ninth. Keller tripled him home and scored as Gordon grounded out.

Scribe Big Star In Pebble Game

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 19.—(AP)—The Little Rock Travelers held their first intracamp game of the training season today and a sports writer stole the show. He was Bill Shirley, 20-year-old assistant sports editor of the Arkansas Democrat.

Shirley, former American Legion Junior baseball star, filled in at second base for one of the teams during the seven-inning 1-1 game. He got two for two, handled five chances without a flaw and was in the middle of a snappy double play. None of the Traveler hopefuls did any better.

ON THE LINE

With Considine

BROWNSDALE, N. Y., March 19.—(INS)—Gray-haired, steely-eyed Bill Brown—the best conditioned septuagenarian in the country—believes that Jack Kelley's Office of Civilian Defense should erect hundreds of health farms from coast to coast, for the sake of a nation going flabby.

The former wrestler, boxing promoter and referee, and currently one of the members of the New York State Athletic Commission, has been a foremost champion of physical education for 50 years. His health farm on the Hudson river, across from West Point, has reconditioned thousands of business men, professional men, athletes, public officials, clergymen and representatives of every other calling in life. He believes sincerely that the physical condition of the average American is a national disgrace.

ON THE FARM.

We first heard about the routine at Brownsdale while in Honolulu, where lives one of Brown's most enthusiastic patrons. Up until the war, an Englishman on colonial duty in India made regular trips here to breathe, exercise, eat and relax his way back to health. A perennial client comes up from Panama. Hollywood sends overworked producers, directors and rundown actors. On the farm at the moment is a Spaniard with extensive business interests in South America. Also a young professor of English who is building up his weight and muscles to make himself acceptable to the Army.

The variety is endless—the effect always the same. Men go away from here with a new grip on themselves, a new interest in life, a new appreciation of the way they have been abusing their systems, and a general feeling of cleanliness for having lived for a time under the spell of Bill Brown.

We don't know anyone who takes the physical condition of his country as much to heart as blunt Bill. His overwhelming interest isn't purely academic, either. In his prime as a wrestler, 45 years ago, Bill weighed 175 pounds. Today he weighs between 165 and 170. He has a body better than most 20-year-olds. He lives cleanly, talks cleanly and those who come here do the same.

Thirty-five years ago, when he was getting this place started, and often since then, he has thrown out of camp all who broke the simple but unbendable rules of Brownsdale. Yet he's no martinet. He's one of the kindest men we ever met and certainly the fairest.

Bill was shocked when 50 per cent of the first crop of draftees were turned down for bad physical condition. It led him into new attacks on the easy life of modern youths, the misuse of the automobile, of tobacco and sweets. Never one to mince words, he said:

"I hate Hitler as much as the next fellow, but you've got to give him this: He turned a nation of pot-bellied, beer-swigging men into a nation of lean, hard athletes."

Bill still feels that we've got to adopt a little of that. He thinks Kelley is doing a fine job of stirring the drowsy liver of the average American, especially the defense worker, but Bill would like to see the program broadened.

"Take the ping-pong money and build hundreds of places like this, all over the country," he said today in his little office that looks down the clean hills of the Catskills. "Put responsible men in charge. . . . Good physical education men, good rubbers, good men to lead hikes.

LET'S GET TOUGH.

"We've got to get toughened up. We've got to get the poisons of gluttony and physical laziness out of our systems. We've got to be prepared individually as much as the country must be prepared as a whole. Do you suppose that if the nations were individuals that any of them would have picked on Joe Louis?"

The boys now in the Army will get plenty of exercise, from marching, calisthenics and organized games, Bill thinks. His concern primarily is the civilian.

"More Americans kill themselves eating than drinking themselves to death," Bill said. "It's a grave mistake to work hard all week and then play like mad for a few hours on the weekend. We should exercise a little each day, before breakfast.

"We have too many conveniences. We can't burn up the fuel we take into our bodies at full dinner tables. You can kill a horse in a month by feeding him working rations, if you keep him in the barn.

"God put health within reach of all of us. Let's reach a little for it."

Bill's advice: If your work is sedentary, eat meat only once a day. East light breakfasts, stressing fruits and fruit juices. If you drink, drink in moderation, and the same is true of smoking. Develop will-power enough to go through a daily setting up exercise. Walk more.

If you take his advice, Bill said, there won't be any more need for places like this.

Wildcats Play Illinois Team In Elimination

Victor To Meet Penn State-Dartmouth Winner Saturday.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 19.—(AP)—With their coach giving the impression of a man awakened by by a telephone in the dead of night—fearful the news more than likely will be had—the University of Kentucky basketball squad left last night for New Orleans and a date with Illinois in the N. C. A. A. eastern elimination tournament Friday.

The victor of the clash between the Southeastern and Big Ten conference champions will meet the winner of the Penn State-Dartmouth game Saturday night for the right to represent the east in the N. C. A. A. meet in Kansas City next week.

Coach Adolph Rupp said Kentucky was going up against one of the strongest teams in the country, an aggregation, he added, that had the Wildcats bested in height and manpower, but not in experience, since Illinois has four sophomores in the regular starting lineup.

Rupp said further that Kentucky had not scouted the Big Ten champs and that all he knew about them was what he had read in the papers. Illinois scouted the Bluegrass squad in its game last Saturday against the Great Lakes Naval Club. Incidentally, Kentucky didn't play so well in that contest.

On the other hand, Rupp admitted that his teams had found the Tulane University floor (where the tournament will be played) much to their liking, having won about seven of their nine appearances there over the years, including two out of three Sugar Bowl engagements.

In all games this season against college competition, Kentucky has averaged 47 1-3 points. Marvin Akers and Mel Brewer are the individual scoring leaders, with 164 and 163 points, respectively.

However, Rupp indicated that Jim King, who starred in the conference tournament, might start at center instead of Brewer. Otherwise, the regulars will hold down the other starting berths. Ermal Allen and Waller White at forwards, Captain Carl Staker and Akers at guards.

Syracuse Wins Golden Gloves Boxing Crown

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—Golden Gloves boxers from Syracuse, N. Y., went home today with the team trophy of the annual tournament of championships, although the award was won by the New York city squad.

The two teams finished in a deadlock at the end of last night's finals in Madison Square Garden, each with 15 points. But the New Yorkers won the team trophy by taking three individual titles, one more than Syracuse.

After the bouts were over, however, the New York boxers, in a display of generosity as tournament hosts, voted to relinquish the award to Syracuse.

The Newark, N. J., team also took two individual titles and Trenton, N. J., one. Newark finished third in the team scoring with 13 points.

Other team scores: Washington, D. C., 7; Huntington, W. Va., 6; Buffalo, N. Y.; Philadelphia and Trenton, 5 each; Jacksonville, Fla., 4; Union City, N. J., 2; Charlotte, N. C., Miami and Southeastern A. A. U. (Atlanta), 1 each.

Flyweight — Ralph McNeill, Newark, N. J.

Bantamweight—Al Turner, Trenton, N. J.

Featherweight—Tommy Potolo, Syracuse, N. Y.

Lightweight—Gene Burton, New York.

Welterweight—Benn Beans, Newark, N. J.

Middleweight—Joe Carter, Syracuse, N. Y.

Light Heavyweight—Clem Conway, New York.

Heavyweight—Jimmy Corollo, New York.

The SPORTLIGHT By Grantland Rice

BEST OF THE CARDINALS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—This may be disturbing news for Larry MacPhail, who doesn't disturb easily or softly. Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, says this 1942 collection might be the best Cardinal team of all time.

"We had a great team in 1926—the year we trimmed the Yankees," Sam remarked. "We had another great team in 1931, and still another in 1934, when the Gashouse Gang with Dizzy Dean and Pepper Martin were riding high. But it wouldn't surprise me to see this bunch we are looking at now turn out to be our all-time top. This is certainly the best pitching staff we ever had, and one of the best all-around teams in every department."

"MacPhail says his Dodgers are much stronger than last year and after a few early flurries should never be headed," we told Breadon.

"His Dodgers had better not have too many early flurries," Sam said. "Brooklyn has a good ball club, but we have a better one. We have better pitching and more speed. And if our club had any more spirit it might explode. Billy Southworth has the entire squad hustling to the limit—and I can tell you now those Dodgers will be seeing Red Wings in their broken dreams this summer. They'll be after those Dodgers from the first game to the finish.

"Look this ball club over," Breadon said. "We have all the catching any team needs, and the best pitching staff in either league, so far as both quality and quantity go.

"You'll be hearing from this kid Pollet all season. He isn't 21 yet, but he works like a 10-year veteran. He hasn't blinding speed, and he hasn't any back-breaking curve ball. But he is smart, cool, cunning and a tough fellow to beat.

"And Pollet isn't the only one. We have at least 10 high-grade pitchers, although one or two could use a little more experience. Munger has a world of stuff. You know about Warneke, White, Cooper, Lanier, Shoun and Krist, who won all the ten games he pitched last year.

"Trade our infield for the Dodgers? Nothing doing. Hopp and Sanders are both good first basemen. Crespi, Marion and Brown are ball players of top rank. They give us one of the best infields we ever had.

"In my opinion, Terry Moore defensively is the finest outfielder I ever saw. He can cover all the ground that Speaker or DiMaggio or anyone else ever covered and maybe a few yards more. And Moore is also a .300 hitter. He is a ball player who has never received the publicity he deserved. If Terry hadn't been hurt in the stretch last fall we'd have been going away from Brooklyn at the finish.

"Enos Slaughter is another fine outfielder. And keep your eye on a kid called Musial. Hopp can play the outfield as well as first base. And Hopp can hit and run."

These are the disturbing items we think Larry McPhail should know about. Sam Breadon gives MacPhail credit for being one of the smartest showmen, promoters and handy guys baseball has seen. But Breadon has an idea that MacPhail has underrated this Cardinal team, and the Dodger chief with Leo Durocher may be in for a number of nervous shocks.

"I don't think they quite understand just what would have happened to the Dodgers if we had had as many of our regulars in action as they had last year. It might have been distressing—quite distressing. It might not even have been close."

From here we turned to the spirit of Cardinal players through the years. They have been the Notre Dame of baseball.

"We've looked for two things,"

Breadon said, "speed and spirit. We want ball players who love to play baseball, who like to hustle and who are out to win. Last year the Cardinals were crashing into fences, dugouts, anything in the road, to win a ball game.

"In that southwest country from where many of the great ball players come, baseball is the greatest game in the world. Football is next. Most of them, like Dean and Martin and many more, come up the hard way. They know how to take a beating and come tearing back.

We made an attempt to get MacPhail on the phone along the east coast of this tropical peninsula in order to break the bad news as quickly as possible. Having no ear for music, we like to hear MacPhail roar.

There isn't any doubt that MacPhail is completely confident his Dodgers can win again, with more room to spare. There is also no doubt that Sam Breadon feels the same way about his Cardinals.

And all this has no propaganda tinge. This happens to be the way they feel about things, and neither is on the shy, retiring side.

Emile Lochbaum Defeats Browns

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 19.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers "B" team defeated the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 3, today combing three pitchers for 11 hits to even their series at one-all.

The Browns gave Denny Galehouse a 2-to-1 lead, but the Junior Dodgers fell on Rookie Southpaw Stanley Ferens for two runs in the fourth and added another in the sixth after St. Louis had pulled even in its half of the inning.

Chief supporter of the seven-hit pitching of Emile Lochbaum and Webber for the Brooks was Catcher Howell, who had four hits in as many tries. Lochbaum was the winning pitcher.

Wade Will Serve With Ex-Teammate

FORT BRAGG, N. C., March 19. (AP)—Wallace Wade, football coach at Duke University, who was recently commissioned a major in the Field Artillery, will serve his first active duty under his old college football teammate, Lieutenant Colonel John C. Butner Jr., it was announced today by Brigadier General Edwin P. Parker Jr., commanding general of the Fort Bragg Field Artillery replacement center.

Colonel Butner commands the 10th Training Battalion in the replacement center. Wade played guard and Butner played end on the Brown University gridiron team that went to the Rose Bowl in 1916. Major Wade will work under Colonel Butner in the capacity of assistant battalion executive.

Camp Verde Wins Marquette Purse

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 19. (AP)—Sam Briskin's Camp Verde won the $800 Marquette Hotel purse race over six furlongs at Oaklawn Park today in 1:11 for his second straight victory.

Tigers Hit in Pocketbook After Dismal 1942 Play

Bengals Roared for Good Reason After Briggs Paid for Pennant He Didn't Get.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

NEW YORK, March 19.—When you bring up the kids on lollypops and then suddenly switch to castor oil there's bound to be a little yowling, so the squawks of the Detroit Tigers aren't entirely surprising. Those 1942 contracts weren't coated with the kind of sugar they're used to.

Pat Mullin took Uncle Sam's $21 a month in preference to the money Walter Briggs offered. The job is steady, for a while anyway, and he doesn't have to worry about being shipped back to a minor league. He's in the real major league for the duration.

Rudy York held out until he suddenly remembered about comfortable hotel rooms and the easy hours and what fun it is to eat. He then signed, possibly influenced by the order to sign, or else.

NEWSOM MUMBLES.

As this is written Buck Newsom still is mumbling in his beard and trying to think up a good argument for a fat 1942 salary based on a fine 1940 record, and hoping Mr. Briggs suffered from amnesia during 1941.

Johnny Gorsica wants Commissioner Landis to speak to Mr. Briggs for him, after not getting anywhere with that "why don't you speak for yourself, John?" stuff. Bud Thomas is sulking in silence, and Billy Sullivan was sold to the Brooklyn Dodgers when he showed signs of not showing a sign on his contract.

The big, happy, overfed family is no more, and the boys are grousing around wondering who shot Santa Claus. There are no more jingle bells. In fact, there's nothing to jingle.

For Walter Briggs has decided he will henceforth pay his ball players journeymen wages, not like they were all chirmen of the board. For some unannounced reason he has lost interest in the I-pay-bigger-salaries-than-you pay game he played with Alva Bradley last year to the great delight of Newsom and Bob Feller. The unannounced reason may be the fact the club finished in a tie for fourth place last year. We might as well announce it. That is the reason. Had the Tigers won the pennant again last year, Mr. Briggs could have found no reason for drastic cuts. He was paying the boys to win a pennant. They didn't.

They not only didn't, but some individuals, like Newsom, practically transposed their 1940 records, and even Mr. Briggs, lavish as he is with his money, can't see a 12-win-20-loss pitcher as worth $35,000. To be a generous spender is one thing, to be a sucker is another. Mr. Briggs is just the one thing.

YORK'S SLASH.

We don't know what Mr. Briggs has been offering this year. It is reported Rudy York will get around $9,000 in straight salary with a $5,000 bonus if he bats in 100 runs. That's not a Joe DiMaggio salary, but Rudy York is no Joe DiMaggio, even sitting down, and many a guy would trade Rudy jobs even-stephen, and to heck with the bonus clause.

Dick Wakefield, whom Mr. Briggs paid around $47,500 for signing, just got under the wire before the retrenchment program went into effect. If Dick were on the loose right now, he might wind up signing for Joe Cambria and the Washington Senators for 50 cents and a free ticket to Uncle Tom's Cabin as far as Mr. Briggs was concerned.

When Mr. Briggs starts trimming the overhead, he doesn't stop with a haircut.

Pair Indicted In Murder of Federal Agent

Deserters From Georgia Camp Had Offered Plea of Guilt.

HARRISONBURG, Va., March 19.—(AP)—Two young Army deserters were indicted today on charges of murder of FBI Agent Hubert J. Treacy and will be tried in the United States district court session opening at Abingdon on April 13.

The men, James Edward Testerman, 22, Clinchburg, Va., and Charles Lovett, 21, Philadelphia, runaway privates from Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., had pleaded guilty to the gun battle murder charge at a United States commissioner's hearing at Bristol Saturday.

The government placed the case before a district court grand jury meeting here today in an effort to accelerate its passage through the courts.

Treacy was shot to death, and another FBI agent, Charles Tignor, was wounded seriously when they attempted to arrest Testerman and Lovett in an Abingdon cafe Friday morning. The fugitive soldiers were wanted, the FBI said, for attacking a guard at Fort Oglethorpe, theft of four revolvers and a quantity of ammunition, and kidnaping a Chattanooga, Tenn., taxi driver.

A quickly mobilized posse of more than a hundred law enforcement officers surrounded Lovett and Testerman in a house at Abingdon several hours after the shooting and forced them out with tear gas.

Mayor Vetoes Acceptance of Incinerator

Lyle Wants Official Information Before Signing Paper.

Mayor Lyle yesterday exercised his veto power for the first time since he took the post Monday and refused to sign a council resolution accepting the city's giant new $550,000 incinerator pending further information regarding its performance.

Acceptance was recommended by the sanitary committee of council and approved by council at its session Monday, but the acceptance resolution was devoid of any official information as to the new plant's performance and Lyle said he believed it should have been attached to the resolution "because we are asked to pay out $474,570."

"I want the record to show before I sign a resolution providing for payment of such a large sum," Lyle said.

Hardaway Construction Company built the plant, with Robert & Company as engineers. Acquisition of additional land and other incidentals pushed the total cost of the project to $550,000.

The mayor also vetoed an ordinance giving the Area Army Engineering Division permission to park on West Peachtree street. The measure did not go to the traffic board in accordance with council ordinances. Lyle said he vetoed it so the opinion of the traffic board may be ascertained.

All other measures passed to the mayor's desk from Monday's meeting of council and the aldermanic board were approved.

11 Jailed as Tire Burglary Suspects

Rounding up of 11 suspects believed responsible for a recent epidemic of tire stealing was announced yesterday by Fulton county detectives E. G. Fitzgerald and Fred Bradford.

The detectives said they had recovered 14 stolen automobiles and most of the parts that had been stripped from them.

The detectives said many of the tires from these cars had been sold for fractions of their value and if it can be proved buyers knew they were stolen they are liable to prosecution for a felony offense.

Smyrna Couple Hurt in Fight With Intruder

A midnight intruder was beaten off after a terrific battle with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Eubanks at their home, three miles south of Smyrna, near Route No. 41, it was disclosed yesterday. Both the Eubankses were injured before the Negro fled.

Eubanks was admitted to a Marietta hospital, suffering from five broken ribs, a fractured collarbone and scalp wounds, Cobb County Sheriff J. F. Hicks' office reported. Mrs. Eubanks was treated for head wounds.

Their assailant jumped on Eubanks in bed when he realized he was aware of his presence, the sheriff's office said. Eubanks was struck with a pipe cutter, an implement larger than a monkey wrench and built along the same lines, according to the report.

Then the attacker, who was reported as weighing about 185 pounds, jumped on Eubanks' chest. Mrs. Eubanks turned on the light, and the intruder grabbed the lamp and struck Mrs. Eubanks on the head.

NBC Officials From 9 States To Meet Here

Parley To Plan Wartime Schedule of Operation for Network.

More than 100 radio officials from nine states, many of them leaders in the industry, will gather at 10 o'clock this morning at the Biltmore hotel for a two-day conference to draft a wartime plan of operations for the NBC network.

Among the visiting radio officials will be representatives of NBC-station affiliates in Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Virginia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Headed by William S. Hedge, NBC vice president in charge of stations, the NBC group is on tour of the nation to establish a cooperative broadcasting service of wartime proportions.

Among the NBC officials in the touring group are Max Jordan, former chief of the NBC Continental-European staff; Harry Stone, general manager of WSM, Nashville, and national chairman of the NBC stations' planning and advisory committee on national defense.

Decatur Ensign Is Missing in Pacific Sector

Ensign William Henry Harris, United States Naval Reserve, son of Mrs. Helen C. Harris, of 534 Ponce de Leon avenue, Decatur, has been reported missing, "following action in performance of his duty," according to word received by his mother yesterday from the Navy Department.

Ensign Harris had completed two years as a theological student at Emory University when he registered in the first naval officers' training school July 15, 1940, in New York, getting his commission four months later.

He was transferred to the Pacific fleet, on duty in Hawaii, and last July was transferred to the Atlantic fleet. November 10, he was ordered to duty in the Pacific. He stopped to visit his mother and was with her when he heard the announcement of the Pearl Harbor attack over the radio December 7. He left by plane for the west coast 40 minutes later.

New Light Cruiser Ready on Schedule

NORFOLK, Va., March 19.—(AP) The 10,000-ton light cruiser Birmingham will be launched at the plant of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. without the formalities of peacetime launchings of such craft.

Ordered on July 3, 1940, the cruiser is being completed on schedule. Little more than a month ago the 36,000-ton battleship Alabama was launched at the Norfolk Navy Yard, at Portsmouth. The light cruiser Mobile, of the same class as the Birmingham, also is under construction at the Newport News yard.

JUST NUTS

Nelson Opposes Changes in Law On War Labor

Patterson Also Wants Legislation Left at Present Status.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) Donald M. Nelson, war production chief, and Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, opposed new war labor legislation today, while the administration endeavored to obtain labor's consent to abolishing double-pay rates for Sunday and holiday work.

Meanwhile, Representative Smith, Democrat, Virginia, for years a critic of the closed shop and the wage-hour law, took a view directly contrary to that of Nelson and Patterson. He told the House Naval Affairs Committee the country wanted to know "whether congress is running the war effort, or labor."

He urged approval of his bill to limit profits on war contracts to 6 per cent, suspend maximum hour legislation on work done under naval contracts, and abolish for the duration of the war all overtime pay rates and the closed shop on such contracts.

Nelson, testifying before a senate subcommittee, said increased production could be obtained "without the use of force," and Patterson bluntly asserted that Smith's bill would work a violent change which "might result in deterioration, rather than an improvement, of labor relations."

Patterson also said that progress had been made in eliminating double-pay for Sunday and holiday work. "Most labor leaders," he reported were "in favor of dropping it."

Double pay is provided for in a number of contracts between unions and business concerns, although union officials have emphasized that many of their members work Sundays without double pay. The wage-hour law merely stipulates that time and a half must be paid for all work beyond 40 hours weekly.

UAW-GM Contract Parley Opens Today.

DETROIT, March 19.—(AP)—The United Automobile Workers-CIO announced today a flat $1 a day wage increase and further increases every 90 days based on a cost of living index, would be among the union's major demands when negotiations open tomorrow with General Motors Corporation for a new contract.

Company and union spokesmen said that if the negotiations go beyond the date of expiration of the present contract, April 28, there probably would be no interruption of work, but that whatever agreement was reached would be made retroactive to the expiration date of the agreement now in force.

Meantime, a proposal came from C. E. Wilson, GM president, that the forthcoming negotiations be open to the press. There was no immediate union reaction to the proposal.

Payment of a $100 maturity value defense bond in lieu of vacations currently based on one week's pay averaging $44; a 30-minute paid lunch period; the addition of Armistice Day to the list of double-time holidays; five hours' pay allowance for men for whom no work is available after they report for duty; a 10 and 15 per cent premium for night work; a 10 per cent premium for shifts on which more than half the work hours fall between 3:30 p. m. and midnight and 15 per cent for work between midnight and 8 a. m.

Sixty days' pay also will be asked for employes entering military service in place of the two weeks' full pay now given by the company.

Men's Clothing Workers Get Raise.

BOSTON, March 19.—(AP)—A general nationwide wage increase of approximately 10 cents an hour for 150,000 workers in the men's clothing industry has been agreed upon by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union (CIO) and management representatives, the union announced today.

300 Women Study Theater Managing

The nation's first school for women motion picture operators and theater managers will open tonight at the Hangar theater with an estimated attendance of 300 women.

Started by Fred Coleman, suburban theater operator, to train women to take over the operation of motion picture houses when the men go to war, the class is sponsored by a large number of southern theater men. Aptitude tests will be given by members of the Emory University psychology department.

Inexpensive Desserts

To many persons, and not all of these are children, the dessert is the best part of the whole meal. And to almost all of us, it is certainly an important part, the course to which we look forward. Since desserts do not have to be elaborate, over-rich or expensive dishes, there is no reason why they should be eliminated in a discussion of readjusting the family food budget. Many desserts, such as the ones below, are a help to the housekeeper who plans meals to use up leftovers and who wants to please her family with "surprises" now and then.

A luncheon dessert that should please everyone is a plate of warm Scotch scones served with pear, peach or grape conserve—or any of the other jams or preserves you have on the pantry shelf.

Scotch Scones: Sift 2 cups flour with 1-2 teaspoon salt and 3 teaspoons baking powder. Add 3 tablespoons sugar and a pinch of grated nutmeg. Then rub in with a fork or pastry blender 1-3 cup margarine or butter. When well blended, stir in 1 beaten egg mixed with 1-3 cup milk. Mix to a soft dough, adding an extra tablespoon or more of milk, if needed. Turn the dough out on a floured board and knead lightly into an oblong mold. Flatten this into a sheet about one-half inch thick and cut with a large, fluted round cutter—one about 3 inches in diameter. Mark each scone into quarters with the back of a knife but do not cut through. Brush with milk and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Place on a greased baking pan and bake in a hot oven for 12 to 15 minutes. Serve warm with butter and preserves.

Caramel Bread Pudding is a well-liked dessert. Smooth, delicately flavored with caramel and served with a fruit sauce or a caramel-nut sauce it has nothing in common with the lumpy, flavorless bread pudding we sometimes meet! To make it, put 2 cups dry bread crumbs in a bowl—the kind of crumbs you have made by putting stale bread through the food chopper. Scald 1 quart milk or 2 cups evaporated milk and 2 cups water, pour over the crumbs, stir and add 3 tablespoons butter and 1-2 teaspoon of salt. Cover and let the crumbs soften. While this is happening put 1 cup granulated sugar in a small, heavy frying pan, and stir until it has melted to a light brown. Add 1 cup boiling water, being careful of the sputtering, and let the mixture boil until the sugar is melted again and the syrup lightly thickened. Remove from the fire and put 4 tablespoons of the syrup with 2 well-beaten eggs and 1-2 cup brown sugar. Beat until smooth, add to the softened crumbs and stir in 2 teaspoons vanilla. Pour into 6 buttered custard cups, into each of which you have put 1 teaspoonful of the syrup. Stand the custard cups in a pan of warm water and bake in a moderate oven for about 40 minutes or until as firm as custard. Remove from the oven, cool slightly, turn out on individual serving dishes and sprinkle a few chopped nuts over each pudding. Serve cold with or without a dab of whipped cream or whipped evaporated milk.

Fruit Sherbet is a very "ritzy" appearing dessert that you might use for a company dinner. It is not expensive, however, and as it has so many possible variations in flavor, it is a good recipe to add to your file. This particular one is made of orange, lemon and pineapple juice. Mix 1 1-2 cups sugar and 1 1-2 cups hot water and boil for 5 minutes. Remove from fire, add 1-2 teaspoon grated lemon rind and let cool. Strain and add 1 cup each of orange juice (fresh) and canned pineapple juice, and the juice of 2 lemons. Stir in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into the freezing pan of the refrigerator and freeze to a mush. Or freeze to a mush in a freezer for 2 to 3 hours. Serve with fresh or canned fruit or with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with rum or sherry. Cranberry and pineapple juice make a good combination; so does peach nectar and orange juice.

Bread puddings take on new glamour with the addition of 1-4 teaspoon of ginger and a teaspoon of cinnamon. Chip semi-sweet chocolate into it as a special treat for the children.

A 'Light Hand' Is The Secret of Making Good Pie Crusts

For some reason, many women attach a sort of a mystery to the making of pie crust and even some of the best cooks contend they simply cannot make nice, flaky pie crust—that they never can depend on it turning out as they wish it. You, yourself, may be one of these people, for it seems to me that every week we have some call or letter asking for advice or help on this one subject.

Actually, pie crust is not at all difficult to make and make right. Use a reliable recipe, always be sure to follow it exactly, and keep on trying until you get perfect results. Don't work too hard over it—pie crust requires what old-fashioned cooks called "a light hand."

There are many kinds of pies, but in all those using pie crust, the basic crust recipe is the same. You may bake the crust separately, making a pie shell which is filled, after baking, with a cream mixture, used for chiffon pies that depend on gelatine for thickening, or filled with fruit. There are criss-cross pies, open faced pies, deep dish pies and plain, two-crust pies, each named for the manner in which the pie crust is used.

The ingredients needed for piecrust are simple: flour, shortening, salt and water. Use all-purpose flour or pastry flour, sifted before measuring and sifted again after measuring; lard, butter, vegetable shortening as you prefer, or a mixture of these; and very cold water.

A good general rule is 1-3 cup shortening to each cup of flour. For a medium sized, double crust pie, use 3 cups sifted flour, 1 cup shortening, 1 teaspoon salt and about 1-2 cup very cold water. Put the flour, sifted with the salt, into a bowl. Drop in the shortening and rub it lightly into the flour with the tips of your fingers or with a fork, or chop it in with a wire pastry cutter. This latter may be bought in almost any housewares department and is a handy little gadget. When the shortening has entirely disappeared into the flour and the mixture looks like coarse cornmeal, add the ice water a little at a time, mixing the whole thing with a fork. Add just enough water to make a stiff dough—the exact amount is impossible to give as it depends on the type and kind of flour used and the amount of liquid in the shortening, but approximately it is 1-2 cupful. When the dough is mixed, put it on a lightly-floured board, pat lightly, then roll quickly and lightly with a circular motion from the center out. This is where many people court failure—they bang down the rolling pin and work as though they were rolling rubber! Be as quick as you can and work with that "light hand" that I mentioned above. Very little pressure is needed to roll out the dough.

If you are making a two-crust pie, cut the dough in half and roll each piece separately.

Bake pie crust in a hot oven. Pie shells require about 15 minutes baking; double crust pies anywhere from 30 to 60 minutes depending on the filling. Reduce the heat for two-crust pies after the first 20 minutes or when the pie begins to brown.

Fresh Rhubarb Applesauce Pie.

Fresh pink rhubarb is beginning to appear in abundance in our markets and rhubarb pies are wonderful as a spring tonic. Here is a good and rather new combination for a double crust pie. Line a deep pieplate with pastry. Mix 3 cups sliced, fresh unpeeled rhubarb with 1 cup sugar mixed with 3 tablespoons flour, add 1 cup thick apple sauce. Pour into the pieplate, dot with 2 tablespoons butter or margarine cut in small pieces and cover with top crust. Press the edges firmly together, prick the crush in the center, trim off any excess crust from the sides. Bake the pie in a hot oven 425 degrees, for 15 minutes, then reduce the heat to about 350 degrees and continue baking for 30 minutes more or until well browned. Here's the recipe for the luscious strawberry pie pictured:

Strawberry Sponge Pie.

1 1-2 cups strawberries, crushed
1 package strawberry - flavored gelatin.
1-4 teaspoon salt.
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten.

Sprinkle 4 tablespoons sugar over berries and let stand 10 minutes. Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Drain 1-4 cup juice from berries, add to egg yolks, and cook in double boiler until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from fire. Stir gelatin into egg mixture. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat salt and remaining 4 tablespoons sugar into egg whites. Fold lightly into gelatin mixture. Pour into cold pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whole strawberries.

Cook's Notebook

Special Economy Hint.

Save all bacon or sausage fat and use as shortening when making gingerbread or ginger or molasses cookies. Here, for example, is a grand economy recipe for molasses-raisin cookies:

Put ½ cup bacon or sausage fat or a mixture of the two, in a saucepan, add ½ cup hot water and heat until the shortening is melted. Pour into a bowl, add 1 cup dark molasses and 1 cup seedless raisins. Mix together 2 cups sifted flour, ½ teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 2 teaspoons powdered ginger. No salt is necessary as the fat is somewhat salty. Mix well, add to the molasses mixture and add enough more flour, if necesary, to make a soft dough—one that is just too soft to roll out. Drop from a teaspoon onto greased cookie pans and bake in a moderate oven—350 degrees—for about 12 minutes or until firm and slightly brown.

Known among her friends as a good cook, Mrs. L. J. Hulsey shows us how she cuts in the shortening with a "pastry blender" preparatory to making a pie. What kind of filling she put into that crust we couldn't wait to see. But you won't go wrong if you fill a flaky crust with the rhubarb or strawberry recipes given in another column. The pie shown below is a strawberry sponge.

Why not revive that old-fashioned shortcake recipe for early strawberry time? Fluffy biscuit dough makes the foundation and is sparing of the family sugar bowl. Enriched flour in the biscuit dough insures extra food values.

Hot Cross Buns.

2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups milk, scalded and cooled
7 1-2 cups sifted flour
1-2 cup shortening
2-3 cup sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, well beaten
1-2 cup raisins or currants

Glaze: 1 egg, beaten with 2 tablespoons cold water.

Dissolve yeast and 2 tablespoons sugar in lukewarm milk. Add 3 1-4 cups flour to make a sponge. Beat until smooth; cover and let rise in warm place, free from draft, until light, about 1 hour. Cream shortening and the 2-3 cup sugar; add salt. Add to yeast mixture. Add eggs, raisins or currants, which have been floured, and remaining flour. Turn out on floured board and knead lightly. Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise again until doubled in bulk, about 2 hours.

Shape into medium-sized round buns. Place in well-greased shallow pans. Cover and let rise again until light, about 1 hour. Brush tops with 1 egg beaten with 2 tablespoons cold water. With a sharp knife cut a cross on the top of each bun.

Bake about 20 minutes in hot over (425 degrees F.). While hot fill cross with plain icing.

Food Parade

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
Edited by SALLY SAVER.

ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY, MARCH 20, 1942.

Below, slices of beef liver are cooked by braising, and served with French fried lattice potatoes. To the right is a bowl of mushroom gravy quickly made from canned mushroom soup, an excellent gravy for any meat.

You'll have no trouble with sleepy-heads if for breakfast they're expecting griddle cakes topped with a golden egg. "An egg a day" is a good nutrition rule to follow.

Eggs, Pancakes

Because of their remarkable food value it is advisable to serve eggs in some form each day. A child should have at least one egg a day, a grownup at least four or five eggs a week. Some of us like to start the day off with an egg for breakfast, but the eggs count in the day's food total whether they're eaten for breakfast on toast or fluffy pancakes, as those pictured, or consumed in a soft, delicately flavored custar, in cakes or breads.

There are egg recipes too numerous to count, but there's only one invariable rule to follow in cooking eggs: This rule is to cook them slowly or at moderate heat. A correctly cooked "hard boiled" egg is never really boiled at all, but is simmered just at boiling point. Intense heat toughens the egg white, and should never be applied to eggs no matter how they're being cooked. If an egg is being poached keep the water 'round it just at simmering. Pour an egg to be fried or an omelet into a heated pan, but not into a pan that is sputtering hot.

Feather-Light Griddle Cakes.

2 eggs well beaten
2 cups rich sour milk or buttermilk
2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
3 tablespoons melted fat

Sift dry ingredients thoroughly; add milk to beaten eggs and gradually stir into dry ingredients. Stir only enough to make smooth batter. Bake on ungreased hot griddle.

Country Omelet With Chives or Green Onions.

Beat eggs, enough to serve any number, slightly, and pour into heavy pan lightly greased with bacon fat. Cook over moderate heat, piercing eggs occasionally with bread knife so that liquid eggs go to bottom of pan, but do not stir. When done, remove to hot platter and sprinkle over eggs chives or small green onions, finely chopped.

Cheese, Egg and Olive Canape.

¼ cup top milk or cream
6 eggs, hard cooked and chopped
9 olives, stuffed and chopped
1 cup celery, diced
¼ cup green pepper, diced
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon minced onion
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Cream cheese, add top milk or cream. Add chopped eggs and olives, diced celery and green pepper. Add remaining ingredients. Makes about 1 pint . . . enough to spread 50 to 60 crackers.

Liver Is Health Insurance

Liver has well been called "cheap health insurance." Serve it at least once a week. Slices of beef liver, as seen in the photograph, are browned, then cooked slowly, until very tender, covered, with a little water added to the pan. French fried lattice potatoes or potato chips add an appetizing note. Here's another good liver recipe:

Liver Rolls With Sausage Stuffing.

6 large slices liver
1-2 pound bulk sausage
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1 small onion, grated
Salt and pepper
6 slices bacon

Wipe liver with damp cloth. Brown and partly cook sausage, stirring so that sausage will be in particles. Combine sausage with bread crumbs, onion and seasonings. Moisten a little, if necessary with hot water. Pile a spoonful of dressing on liver slices, roll up, wrap a slice of bacon around and fasten with toothpicks of skewers. Place in baking dish, add 1-2 cup hot water, cover and cook in moderate oven 375 degrees for 45 minutes. Remove cover to brown.

Prize Recipes

Quick Rolls

Submitted by
Mrs. Cliff Mooney, Box 83, Flowery Branch, Ga.

1 cup milk
2 tablespoohs sugar
2 tablespoons shortening
1 yeast cake
Salt as for biscuit

Scald milk, put in shortening, sugar. When cool, add yeast that has been dissolved in 1-4 cup of lukewarm water. Add enough flour to make a stiff batter. Beat well, then add salt and enough flour to make dough nice for rolling. Make rolls any shape desired, let rise double in size (about 2 hours).

Whole Wheat Raisin Muffins

Submitted by
Miss Ruth Teague, Route 2, Lawrenceville, Ga.

1-2 cup sifted, white flour
1 1-2 cups whole wheat flour
2 1-2 teaspoons baking soda
1-4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup shortening
1-2 cup raisins, chopped
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk

Sift flour, with baking powder, sugar and salt. Cut in shortening. Add raisins. Combine egg and milk. Turn liquids into dry ingredients and stir vigorously until all flour is dampened. Bake in greased muffin pans in hot oven (425 degrees F) 18 to 20 minutes. Makes 12.

Spanish Toast

Submitted by
Mrs. James R. DeLay, 1555 Olympian Way, S. W., Atlanta, Ga.

1-4 cup milk
1 egg
1-4 cup tomato juice
1-8 teaspoon salt
2 slices toast
1 tablespoon grated cheese (optional).

Stir egg in cold milk until thoroughly mixed. Add salt and cook over low heat until mixture begins to thicken, stirring constantly. Add tomato juice. Cook mixture until it boils and is the consistency of scrambled eggs. Pour onto toast, sprinkle with grated cheese, and place in oven until cheese melts. Serves two.

Buttermilk Custard

Submitted by
Miss Lillian Hardin, White, Ga.

2 cups buttermilk
1-4 cup butter
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
3 eggs

Melt butter and add; beat egg whites stiffly and fold them into mixture. Pour into pastry shell and bake in moderate oven until firm. Serve hot or cold.

Molasses Crumb Pie

Submitted by
Mrs. Zella Honea, Route 1, Dunwoody, Ga

LIQUID
1-2 cup molasses
1 egg yolk
1-2 teaspoon baking soda dissolved in 3-4 cup boiling water

CRUMBS
3-4 cup flour
2 tablespoons shortening
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-8 teaspoon each nutmeg, ginger and cloves
1-2 cup brown sugar
1-4 teaspoon salt

To make crumbs, combine flour, sugar, salt and spices, then work in shortening.

To make liquid, beat molasses, egg yolk, soda and hot water.

Line pan with pie pastry. Make alternate layers of crumbs and liquid. Top with crumbs, and bake in hot oven (450 degrees) until edges of crust begin to brown. Reduce heat to 375 degrees and bake until firm (about 20 minutes). Serve plain or with sweetened whipped cream.

French Fried Pepper

Submitted by
Mrs. S. M. Reese, 3118 Overton Road, Homewood, Ala.

3 large bell peppers
Fat for frying

Wash and cut peppers in 1-4 inch slices. Fry until brown in deep hot fat (375 degrees). Drain and serve with scrambled eggs and sausage. Serves 6.

State Health Office To Have Merit System

Completion of plans for starting a merit employment system in the State Department of Public Health was announced yesterday by Director T. F. Abercrombie.

"We are ready to go ahead just as soon as the federal government approves the plans," he said.

The health department will be the third state agency to adopt a merit system in compliance with regulations of the federal government. The other two, with the systems already functioning, are the Labor Department and the Welfare Department.

All three receive more than 50 per cent of their funds from the federal treasury.

Dr. Abercrombie said that upon receipt of federal approval of the projected setup some 200 jobs would be advertised and competitive examinations would be held a few weeks later. Employes who have been with the department since 1935, he said, will only have to stand oral, qualifying tests rather than written, competitive examinations.

Although all sorts of jobs, clerical as well as clinical, will be thrown open to competition, many of the positions will be highly technical, requiring a doctor's or an engineer's training.

PRIVATE BUCK .·. By Clyde Lewis

Acquittal Made In Draft Case

A federal jury swiftly acquitted yesterday an illiterate Negro farm hand, Crawford Ruff, charged with failing to notify his McDonough local selective service board when he came to work at the Atlanta farmers' market.

Ruff testified no one had told him he must contact the board, that he drove through McDonough three times a week and had made an unsuccessful effort to enlist in the Army.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood, presiding, termed the case "very weak" but refused a defense motion to direct an acquittal. It was brought out more than 90 days elapsed between Ruff's registering and his being sent a questionnaire.

FORMER ATLANTAN GAINS PROMOTION

Clarence O. Raper, who was employed in Atlanta before his enlistment in the Army, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant at Sheppard Field, Texas. He is the son of James C. Raper, of Etowah, Tenn.

PROMOTIONS GIVEN GEORGIA MARINES

Four Georgians, second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, have been temporarily appointed first lieutenants. They are Charles J. Bailey Jr., of Augusta; William E. Pierce, of Chamblee; Homer G. Hutchinson, of Griffin, and George W. Herring, of Rockmart.

JAMES HOBGOOD BECOMES AIR CADET

James Hollister Hobgood Jr., 27, of Calhoun, has been appointed a flying cadet at the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Station, it was announced yesterday. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hobgood, of Calhoun and a graduate of the University of Georgia with a degree in journalism.

TIRES FROM PANAMA TO BE INSPECTED

The tire inspection and rubber conservation program being carried on by the Motor Transport Division of the Fourth Corps Area Quartermaster's office, has reached far fields, it was revealed yesterday with announcement that Lieutenant Hugh M. Lokey Jr., in charge of that branch, is en route to New Orleans where approximately 4,000 used tires from Army trucks and cars have been received from Panama, Canal Zone.

Two civilian inspectors accompanied Lieutenant Lokey. They will inspect and classify the tires and those fit for further possible use will be repaired and recapped, then returned to service on Army vehicles, either in the United States or in Panama. All tires not fit for repair will be turned over to salvage.

ATLANTA SERGEANT FINDS MODERN MINUTE-MAN.

First Sergeant I. N. Alexander, Camp Blanding artilleryman from Atlanta, believes he has a minute-man in his outfit.

"How do you know it will take you only 23 minutes?" Alexander asked.

TENNESSEE JUDGE ORDERED TO BENNING

COOKEVILLE, Tenn., March 18.—(AP)—Judge John A. Mitchell, of the fifth judicial circuit, left today to report for active duty as a lieutenant colonel in the Army.

Judge Mitchell, who received the Distinguished Service Cross in World War I for capturing a tank and its crew in France, was ordered to the Fort Benning Infantry school to take a battalion commander and staff officers' course.

TWO ATLANTANS JOIN MARINE CORPS

An ex-Leatherneck and an ex-soldier, both Atlantans, were accepted for enlistment in the Marine Corps at the recruiting station in the Ten Forsyth Street building Wednesday.

Harley Green Sanders, of 696 Peachtree street, N. E., is the ex-Marine. He was appointed a private first class upon his enlistment and assigned to duty at the Marine barracks, Parris Island. The former Army man is Frank Zachry, of 827 Park street, S. W., who was enlisted in the limited service reserve for guard duty within the continental limits at naval stations. He served with the Army during the first World War and will go to Parris Island for training in interior guard duty.

Elberton Citizen, Robbed, Wounded

ELBERTON, Ga., March 19.—(AP)—Local and state police today sought a car bearing three men who robbed and seriously wounded John Henry Ruff, about 25, here last night in a mid-town holdup.

Policeman C. W. Johnson said Ruff was shot three times, receiving a leg, knee and back wound when he attempted to flee from the men after being robbed.

According to Johnson, Ruff and a companion were walking along the main street when two of three men got from a parked car and held up Ruff. They removed Ruff's money from his pockets, and opened fire when he started to run. His companion escaped without injury.

Johnson said Ruff, a filling station worker scheduled to enter the Army this week, reported losing $1,500.

U. S. Pay Asked For Philippine Scouts, Army

MacArthur Recommended Move, Stimson Tells Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—(AP) On recommendation of General Douglas MacArthur, Secretary Stimson suggested to congress today that legislation be enacted raising the pay of officers and enlisted men in the Philippine scouts and the Philippine Commonwealth Army to the level for the United States Army.

The change would cost more than $60,000,000 a year.

The pay for officers of the Philippine scouts now is the same as for the United States Army officers but the salary for enlisted men in the scouts, established by the secretary of war, is below that paid United States Army enlisted men. The Philippine legislature set the pay for personnel of the Commonwealth Army at less than the amounts paid officers and men in the Philippine scouts.

The former Philippine Army now is in service of the United States armed forces, Stimson said.

"It has been recommended by General MacArthur that by reason of the equalization that battle has imposed upon all classes of personnel engaged in combat in the Bataan peninsula, and further in the interests of sustaining high battle morale among all these troops, the pay of all the personnel concerned should be the same while they are taking the same risks," the secretary wrote Speaker Rayburn.

Cost of Living in Year Increases 10 Per Cent

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—The upturn in the cost of living in the last 12 months is put at 10.6 per cent by the National Industrial Conference Board.

Of 67 cities surveyed throughout the country, the board reports that all showed an increase in living costs, with the largest jump, 16.2 per cent, noted in Syracuse, N. Y., and the smallest, 7.4 per cent in Newark, N. J.

STOCKHOLM, March 19.—(AP) President Roosevelt sent a telegram today to King Gustaf V, expressing hope that Sweden's 83-year-old King would recover speedily from an operation which he underwent March 9. The American-Swedish News Agency reported that the King's physicians said he was well along toward recovery.

Georgia Steel Stock Enough For New Tags

Further Study To Determine If It Can Be Used.

Although Georgia has enough steel to issue new automobile license plates next year, W. L. Joiner, director of the State Motor Vehicle Division, said yesterday he did not know whether this could or would be done in view of federal restrictions.

A decision, he said, will have to await further investigation by state officials.

Joiner pointed out the state bought 100,000 sheets of steel last May, the same number purchased in the previous year, in anticipation of making two plates for each car. Later, the state decided to provide only one tag for each.

As a result, Joiner said, Georgia has steel available for new plates next year. He added he expects only about half as many would be required anyway because of war-time restrictions on sales of cars, tires and gasoline.

The plates are made at the state prison.

A War Production Board order Wednesday provided that, instead the issuance of new plates next year, small date tabs should be attached to present license plates to bring them up to date.

Commerce Fraternity Will Initiate Seven

Foam green is the exquisite color of the coat pictured above and is remindful of the soft green of young, growing things—when they first begin to push through the spring earth. It is a spring coat that looks like spring, a coat with zest in its lines as well as its color. The pique collar, its wide lapels inset with cutwork, was added by a wily designer who knows that white next to the face is always flattering. The material of the coat is 100% virgin wool in an interesting weave that has a pebbly look, but is smooth to the touch. It is styled along princess lines, the large buttons and the gracefully flared skirt giving a desirable young effect. It is priced at $24.79. The padre sailor worn with the coat is fashioned of rough, braid straw, the brim is white and the crown and pompon trim black. Misty veiling gives it that come-hither look. The hat is priced at $10. The envelope bag, of black patent leather, costs $2.98. The model is Mrs. Lillian Robertson. (If you want to find any of these articles call Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor, The Atlanta Constitution, WAlnut 6565. Or if you live out of town, write us.)

Georgians Urged To Buy Coal Now

The Governor yesterday urged Georgia home owners and business men to buy and store now the coal they will need next winter.

He also said he wanted to impress on the public "the necessity for using coal sparingly due to the situation facing us."

His proclamation urging Georgians to join the "buy-coal-now" campaign, which will open April 1, cited the difficulty anticipated after mid-summer in moving coal needed for the domestic market due to lack of sufficient shipping facilities.

LUMBER AND GASOLINE.

OTTAWA, March 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Because the government had asked the lumber industry to increase its output by 40 per cent, there will be no limit, according o present expectaions, on he amount of gasoline supplied for the actual needs of timber tractors and trucks, it was announced today by G. R. Cottrelle, oil controller in the department of munitions and supply.

Eight Cousins Of MacArthur Reside Here

Millirons Didn't Know His Whereabouts 'Til War Started.

Not least among Atlantans who have been rooting for General Douglas MacArthur in his heroic defense of Bataan were a second cousin and seven third cousins here.

W. R. Millirons, East Point automobile mechanic, of 1315 Day street, S. W., is the grandson of the late Mrs. Mary MacArthur, who was the famous general's aunt.

Thus Millirons is MacArthur's second cousin and his seven children—Vivian, 24; William, 22; Virginia, 19; Earl, 16; Vedia, 14; Morgan, 12, and Juanita, 9—are his third cousins.

None of the family has seen General MacArthur since he visited them here about 15 years ago. In fact, until December 7, when he forged into the war spotlight, the Millironses didn't even know where their cousin was.

All the family are proud of their kinship with the war hero. After learning of the relationship following the Japanese attack on Hawaii, young Morgan boasted to his schoolmates next day:

"I'm kin to Pearl Harbor."

Construction Awards Show Sharp Increase

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—Engineering construction awards in the week ended today were the second highest ever attained, "Engineering News-Record" reported today.

The total of $273,702,000 was 105 per cent better than in the preceding week and 206 per cent higher than a year ago and only slightly under the peak figures of $298,718,000 in the week of July 10, 1941.

Government Threatens To Close London Mirror

LONDON, March 19.—(AP)—An official spokesman said today the Daily Mirror, a tabloid whose editorials generally have been critical of the government, had been warned that it might be suppressed.

Under defense regulations, any newspaper that systematically publishes matter calculated to foment opposition to the war effort may be closed down.

Mrs. Myrick Warns Group On Inflation

'Unbridled Buying Must Be Curbed' Club-women Told.

VIDALIA, Ga., March 19.—(AP)—Inflation is the most dreaded spectre of the war and to prevent it unbridled buying must be curbed, the First District Federated Clubs were told here today.

"That dreaded spectre—inflation—if it comes, will come from extravagance in the purchase of every artiele in use by the American people, said Mrs. Shelby Myrick, state chairman of the women's division, Citizens Defense Committee.

"If there is one dangerous thing in this land of ours that might tend to cause defeat in this war, it will be inflation."

Mrs. Myrick warned against jealousy in any organization about war work, and said "we cannot all be leaders. We cannot all be prominent. There must be thousands and thousands in the ranks who must carry on unheralded and unknown."

MacArthur Is 'Part Filipino'

PORTLAND, Ore., March 19.—(AP)—There's Filipino blood in General Douglas MacArthur's veins, President Ernesto Mangaoang, of the Philippine Commonwealth Defense Council, says. And that has a lot to do with the gallant defense of the islands.

"The general may be an American to you, but he is a Filipino to us—a Katipunan," Mangaoang said in an interview yesterday. "The Filipino blood was put into his body when he joined the society, a very secret organization for the defense of the Philippines. It is composed of natives and a few Americans who have helped us.

"The Katipunan Society was formed during Spanish rule of the islands to fight against the oppressors but was not active during American rule.

"But when this war came, it soon became very active, and we received word that MacArthur was a member. That's why our soldiers fought so well under him."

Atlantic Toll Of Torpedoed Ships Now 41

Attacks on 3 Allied Vessels Revealed by Survivors.

By The Associated Press.

Torpedoes crashing into the sides of three Allied vessels brought the submarine toll of ships officially announced as attacked off the United States Atlantic coast to 41 last night.

After 33 survivors landed at Lewes, Del., the fourth naval district disclosed that the 5,402-ton Yugoslavian freighter Trepca had been sunk in daylight on March 13. Thirty-four members of the crew of a lost Norwegian tanker told on arrival in Miami, Fla., of being torpedoed and shelled.

The radio operator of a medium-sized freighter torpedoed in the Atlantic March 12 stuck to his post in spite of shellfire and managed to send distress signals, survivors related on landing in Miami.

Nine crewmen were lost and the other 38, including Captain R. J. Murphy, of Barnstable, Mass., were rescued from an open lifeboat about 32 hours after the vessel went down.

Jinx Blamed.

In New York city, six survivors from the Trepca, who were among those landed at Lewes, blamed the loss of their ship on Friday the 13th, the wireless operator declaring that the ship sailed from its Caribbean port on a Friday and it was attacked on Friday, March 13.

The shuddering explosion of a torpedo below the bridge in midmorning was the first sign of a submarine's presence, the Trepca crewmen said. Four men, the only ones known to have been lost, were killed instantly, two of the lifeboats were destroyed, and the radio damaged, preventing an appeal for help.

Captain Stanko Marochini declared in Lewes, Del., that the attack was carried out "by a cruiser sub, the largest I have ever seen, apparently German." Marochini said two torpedoes were fired, although other survivors asserted only one struck.

Apprentice Is Hero.

The lives of several shipmates were saved by a 22-year-old apprentice officer, Zvonimir Jurisic, who leaped into the water and aided those who could not swim. He also made possible the escape of 24 others by freeing a lifeboat from fouled gear.

Survivors of the Trepca drifted three days in open lifeboats through rain, fog and cold before being rescued by a Swedish freighter. Eight men were placed in a hospital, suffering from exposure.

The complete identity of the Trepca, naval officials in Washington explained, was given out by authority of the Yugoslav minister, although contrary to the Navy's usual policy of not announcing ship names.

Identity of the Norwegian tanker was not disclosed. Its sinking was first reported from Nassau, the Bahamas, on March 10, two days after 38 survivors of the 40-man crew arrived there.

Ship Is Shelled.

The tanker crewmen said two torpedoes smashed into their ship, the first explosion killing one man. The submarine then shelled the vessel, killing another man. The others reached safety without injury.

Thirty-four survivors of the tanker were brought to New York city. Four other members of the crew, including Captain Knute O. Bringedahl, were left in Miami for hospital treatment.

They said their ship was sent to the bottom at 8:25 p. m., March 5, by shell fire, about 12 hours after the first of two torpedoes struck. Three times during the day, survivors said, the captain and several crew members boarded the ship, after first abandoning it, and made inspections and sent radio distress calls.

Toward evening, two submarines broke the surface and shelled the ship. The captain and his boarding party were injured then by flying splinters. The boarding party immediately left the ship.

WPA 'Unmarking' Georgia Airports

Taking a tip from Jap Fifth Columnists who had air fields of Pearl Harbor all too plainly marked that fatal Sunday in December, WPA workers are busy this week "unmarking" airports of Georgia.

A program to obliterate the markers which WPA crews painstakingly put down to lead fliers to the airports of 300 Georgia towns, was launched by request of the War Department. The program of marking the state for aerial identification had been under way for several months and was instigated by a group of women fliers with the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

All identification is expected to be blacked out by the end of this week, WPA officials said yesterday.

Camp Bowie Prowler Shoots Sentry in Leg

BROWNWOOD, Texas, March 19.—(AP)—Private Clark McGee, a sentry in the quartermaster warehouse area of Camp Bowie, was shot in the leg by a prowler early today.

McGee reported he saw two civilians lurking near the warehouse, commanded them to halt and they opened fire.

Military police intelligence officers are investigating

At the City Hall

M. A. Wilson, commander of the third Atlanta Civilian Defense Zone, and Earle Smith, director of training for the same zone, yesterday reported the state-wide Alabama blackout Tuesday night was a success in Birmingham, where they went as representatives from Atlanta. They told Brigadier General E. G. Peyton, commander of civilian defense activities in Atlanta, that they were "royally entertained and the blackout was as good as our first try."

Immunization of children against smallpox and diphtheria will take place at 9 o'clock Wednesday, April 8, at the Couch school, it was announced yesterday by city health officials.

Civilian defense firefighters will demonstrate accepted methods of fighting incendiary bomb fires at station No. 15, on West Peachtree street, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, it was announced yesterday. Aerial ladders will be used.

Mayor Lyle yesterday approved council measures setting May 27 as the date for the special mayor's election to select a successor to Mayor LeCraw, resigned, and also providing registration rules. LeCraw's term runs until the first Monday in January, 1945.

WAR INFORMATION.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., March 19.—The Gwinnett County Library at Lawrenceville is one of the number chosen to be used as a war information center. All of the latest leaflets and information on the war and civilian defense will be available there.

Moore Rites Held In Milledgeville

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., March 19.—Funeral services for Robert Boling Moore, 73, veteran Milledgeville newspaperman and publisher of the Union-Recorder, were held Thursday morning at the First Methodist church. The Rev. E. D. Rudisill, pastor, and the Rev. F. H. Harding, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, officiated. Burial was in the city cemetery.

Mr. Moore, one of Georgia's leading weekly newspaper editors for more than half a century, died early Wednesday at the home of his son, Major Jere N. Moore. He had been in ill health for several years and his condition became worse Sunday.

Survivors include four sons, four sisters and one brother.

UNIFORM QUALITY

Mrs. S. R. Dull, the South's foremost cooking authority, says that White Lily is unquestionably the finest flour modern science can produce. Besides being pure and wholesome, flour should be uniform in quality, she says, so that your favorite recipes, and hers, may be used year after year with no uncertainty about results. In White Lily, Mrs. Dull's seal of approval on each sack assures you of the utmost in constant quality.

Enjoy THE FINER, FRESHER FLAVOR OF A&P COFFEE!

★★★ Now, more than ever, you need the enjoyment that comes to you with the magnificent flavor of A&P Coffee. It's truly finer, fuller, fresher flavor! No wonder! Here's the pick of the South American plantations—expertly blended and roasted—rushed to your A&P still in the flavor-sealed bean—and Custom Ground for you when you buy, ground just right for your own coffeepot. All this sounds costly—but that isn't so! A&P Coffee is downright thrifty. And you're invited to join the thousands who thrill to the finer, fresher flavor of Eight O'Clock, Red Circle or Bokar Coffee—and who save up to 10¢ a pound!

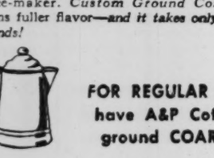

WARTIME.. AND THE STORY ABOUT COFFEE

Is there a coffee shortage? At present, no—and every effort is being made to assure a sufficient supply. But this is wartime—and supplies of coffee like those of any imported product may be temporarily curtailed by shipping problems. As America's largest coffee merchant we advise you to buy normally. Don't create a false shortage. As fresh coffee flavor is what you want, don't store coffee in any form. We will do everything possible to assure our customers a normal supply of really fresh A&P Coffee.

Will there be a change in coffee quality? American coffee lovers have shown their appreciation of the fine product that the coffee industry has provided. Naturally we can speak only for A&P Coffee, in which there will be no change from the high quality that has always marked these fine blends. A&P Coffee will continue to represent the pick of South American plantations . . . blended and roasted expertly . . . delivered to A&P Stores and Super Markets in the flavor-sealed bean . . . Custom Ground exactly right for your own coffeepot at the very moment you buy.

Will coffee prices soar? No. The Office of Price Administration of the U. S. Government has established for your protection, top prices for green coffee. This has been done to prevent further rises. Should an increase in the price of roasted coffee occur, it will be due to advances in war-risk insurance rates, carrying charges, and other costs. Needless to say, A&P's pre-war policy of asking a very small profit for bringing its fine coffee to you—will continue. Further, we will go right on extending this invitation: Join the thousands who enjoy A&P Coffee and save up to 10c a lb.

Why Your Coffee Should Be CUSTOM GROUND

Different types of coffeepots bring hot water into contact with ground coffee for different lengths of time. So, it is necessary to have your coffee Custom Ground (specially ground) for your particular type of coffee-maker. That's why we insist on grinding your coffee exactly right for your coffee-maker. Custom Ground Coffee means fuller flavor—and it takes only 11 seconds!

Stocks Leaders Take Downward Path

NEW YORK, March 19.—(AP)—The stock market displayed faint signs of recovery here and there today, but the general course of prices was downward.

MacArthur optimism continued to prop boardroom sentiment, but further skepticism anent taxes, labor and maintained dividends served to limit bids in most cases and inspire mild selling.

The list did fairly well at the start. Dealings soon faltered along with trends and, at the close, fractional declines were in the majority, with a few losses of as much as 4 in the chemicals.

There was not much in the war news to spur bullishness and a smattering of good business indicators failed as a real bolstering influence.

In a mixed curb plus signs were posted for American Gas, Aluminum of America, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil and Mead Johnson. A trifle under water were Brewster Aero, Bell Aircraft, Lake Shore and International Petroleum.

All sections of the bond market averaged higher with gains of fractions to around a point or more in a moderate sized group of rails and specialties attracting special attention. International Telephone & Telegraph Company loans were strong and active.

Mechanics Shortage Perils Civilian Radios

LONDON.—If an invasion warning was radioed throughout Britain today thousands of people would not be able to hear it. It is growing more and more difficult to have radios repaired, and spare parts are hard to obtain.

Nearly all the qualified radio mechanics have been called into the RAF, or have switched over to vital war work. The places of many have been filled by youthful apprentices, but as soon as they reach military age, they too disappear into the RAF.

W. A. Rutledge Dies; Gwinnett Farmer

W. A. Rutledge, 69, a farmer, of Lawrenceville, died yesterday at the residence of his brother, O. C. Rutledge, 422 Grant street, S. E. He was a native of Gwinnett county.

Surviving are another brother, R. B. Rutledge; a son, Avery Rutledge; a daughter, Mrs. Ruby Smith, and three sisters, Misses Dora and Annie B. Rutledge and Ms. Clara Roberts, of Thomaston.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Pleasant Hill Baptist church with the Rev. C. C. Singleton officiating. Burial will be in the churchyard.

'Living Wage' Severely Rapped

Employes of banks and other business houses in Valparaiso, Chile, are protesting against the so-called "living wage" allotted by the Mixed Salary Commission. They allege discrimination in favor of Santiago. Valparaiso is allotted 740 pesos, whereas Santiago is given 815 pesos for the same period. It is pointed out that the cost of living is not lower in Valparaiso. Although Valparaiso salaries were increased by 100 pesos. The surplus does not cover the rise in commodity prices.

State Deaths

MRS. WILLIAM EPPES.

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—Services for Mrs. Irene Bancroft Eppes, 74, were conducted Thursday from Emmanuel Episcopal church, the Rev. David Cady Wright Jr., rector, officiating. Burial was in Oconee Hill cemetery. Mrs. Eppes was the wife of William Eston Eppes and died at the home of a daughter here Wednesday after an illness of several weeks. Besides her husband, she is survived by four daughters, Mrs. J. M. Lockett and Mrs. J. T. Buckner, both of Savannah; Mrs. Tom Hallam, of Davenport, Fla., and Mrs. W. B. Moss, of Athens; three sons, A. B. and T. J. Eppes, both of Athens, and the Rev. Scott Eppes, of Toccoa; two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Steadman, of Atlanta, and Miss Emily Bancroft, of Athens; one brother, Edward Bancroft, of Athens. A native of Charleston, S. C., Mrs. Eppes had been a resident of Athens for 59 years. She was a member of Emmanuel Episcopal church.

JAMES DAVID COOK.

ATHENS, Ga., March 19.—Services for James David Cook were conducted Thursday from Bogart Baptist church, the Rev. Richard H. Gear, pastor of Bogart Christian church, officiating. Burial was in Bogart cemetery. The boy is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Cook, of Statham; sisters, Sarah Helen Cook, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. 40,000 Patents For Synthetic Rubber Filed

None Practical; Various Protection for Treads Are Advanced.

WASHINGTON, March 1"—Approximately 40,000 patents for rubberless, resilient tires or wheels are on file at the U. S. Patent Office.

Since the present rubber emergency arose the Inventors' Council, government agency which examines all such proposals for their possible utility, has received about 1,500 new ideas.

But neither in the last century since the present patent system has been in effect, nor during the past few weeks, when the mechanical ingenuity of the entire American populace seems to have been focussed on this single problem, has there been any very promising proposal.

15-Mile an Hour Speed.

With several of the ideas recently submitted, say experts of the Inventors' Council, it will be practical to drive a car at about 15 miles an hour in relative comfort—compared to rigid wheels—and without very much injury to the delicate mechanisms.

After all, they point out, this would have been quite satisfactory at the start of the last war. The average motorist with a cheap car and with poor roads, seldom actually exceeded 15 miles an hour. But times have changed, and also ideas of what is essential. But apparently it always will be possible, so long as gasoline holds out, to drive cars.

There is no entirely adequate substitute for rubber. None of the latest crop of ideas submitted to the council promises to solve the problem. All are received in the strictest confidence. Even those which obviously are absurd, the Inventors' Council holds, should be kept secret.

Ridicule Protection.

First, it is assumed, anybody who submits an idea is actuated by patriotic motives and is entitled to protection from ridicule.

Second, history is filled with cases in which what seemed ridiculous to experts—for example, the airplane—has proved sensationally successful.

1. Synthetic rubbers. There are about 150 kinds of synthetic rubbers, the formulas for which already are well known. The possibilities for combining organic molecules into long, elastic polymers are numerous and it is by no means certain that some of the more recent proposals might not produce better rubber than anything now known. But any material of this sort requires expensive plants and equipment for its production, and would consume materials vitally needed for other war purposes. The problem is not to get a better synthetic rubber, but to manufacture any kind in practical quantities.

Vegetable Sources.

2. New vegetable sources for rubber—such as milk weeds, goldenrods, poinsettias, dandelions, guayule. The list of possibilities is great. Returns would be small during the emergency and—in most cases—the cost great.

3. Resilient tires without rubber or any rubber-like substance. A good example is the steel wheel spring with relatively rigid springs arranged around the hub and extending in some cases to the rim.

The idea is simple enough, but its application requires rather complicated engineering technique. The advantage of rubber is that it takes up the shock at all points around the periphery of a wheel. The steel springs could take it up only every inch or so.

Another example is the much publicized wooden block wheel. Most of these ideas are, to a certain extent, practical. They would make it possible to drive cars slowly without shaking the motor to pieces. But riding would be uncomfortable and, even at 10 or 15 miles an hour, extraordinarily nosy. Much of the same idea is behind the proposals to stuff worn-out casings with rags, moistened oats, etc.

Protection for Tires.

4. The present rubber tires with their treads protected in various ways—by leather or cloth outer covers, by cords of hemp or sisal wound around them, by metal studs on the treads, by abrasives or plastics which could be painted or sprayed. The idea of all these suggestions is to protect the rubber from wear. These ideas are probably the most practical thus far received.

But after examining most of the suggestions thus far received, officials of the Inventors' Council say they have one of their own which, everything said and done, seems the most practical and cheapest solution of the problem—the recapture of the Dutch East Indies. Then in seven years or so, after the killed hevea trees were replaced, there would be plenty of rubber.

There is no disposition, however, to pass lightly over any proposal nor to slight a single one of the approximately 160,000 patents for all sorts of tires taken out during the last century. Some one of them at any time may contain the complete answer.

British Tanker Crews Get Fireproof Suits

LONDON—Throughout the war British brains have found the answer to every new German menace. The automatic and the acoustic mines have been dealt with and now the men who bring the fuel that RAF planes may fly are to have special protection.

Every man on board a tanker, from the captain to the messboy, is to be provided with a light one-piece fireproof suit with hood and mica eye-piece, cape and gauntlets, which will cover and protect him while launching the lifeboats. If he has to jump for it, he will be able to swim safely through burning oil.
